Poet's Corner.

The Vanished Choir.

Once more, after years, in the quaint old church,
To the choir I bent my ear,
But vainly, through it made listening search,
For the voice once held so dear.
No lack of melodious art was there,
Still grand were the chords of praise,
Yet I missed with a pang the familiar air
Of the choir of my boyhood's days.

The sweet, pure flood of my sister's voice,
Of my brother's full-toned and clear,
And of yet a dearer, whose accents choice
Made my pulses stir to hear;
And of friend and neighbor, each quite disinct,
In the symphony—where are they?
Gone, vanished and mute—a chain dislinked—
An accord that had died away!

I mourned their loss; and then vague and dim
Grew the notes of the later choir,
And there seemed to swell on the air a hymn
Rich and strong with the old-time fire.
With a thrill ecstatic I recognized
Each tone in remembrance kept,
While that one dear voice, than of all more prized,
My innermost heartstrings swept.

So real it was that I turned my head
To the singers as if to see,
The prayer eyes of my beautiful dead,
Looking down, as if old on me;
When the spell was dissolved—I recalled no face,
No glance the new choir among,
And the dream-hymn, fading, gave gradual place
To the psalm that was being sung.

Sad and sedate through the Gothic door
I passed with the goodly throng,
And the quaint little church was hushed once more,
So to rest for a whole week long;
But for days and days, in recesses gray
Of memory, long locked fast,
A phantom choir held sovereign away
With the anthems of the past.

Dolly's Destiny.

"I shouldn't be surprised any day, Dolly, to see David Wiggin tying his horse at your gate," said Mr. Blount, roguishly, gathering up the reins.

"Nonsense, brother! Anything the matter with his own hitching post?" retorted Miss Dolly turning in the doorway.

Mr. Blount laughed. Everybody felt bound to laugh at Miss Dolly's crisp sayings that had kept her friend in good humor these forty years.

"And when David does call on you," pursued Mr. Blount more seriously, "I do hope, Dolly, you'll give him his chance to do his errand. That'll be no more than fair, and the man won't be easy until he has freed his mind."

"What mischief are you the forerunner of now, James Blount?" cried Miss Dolly, about like a soldier on drill. "What facing upon earth have I to do with David's errands?"

"Well, his wife has been dead a year or more," said Mr. Blount, suggestively, shutting one eye, and squinting with the other down the length of his whipstalk, "and lately he has been asking about you. You can put that and that together to suit yourself."

"Fiddlesticks!" exclaimed Miss Dolly, energetically.

"I sha'n't say have him or don't have him—though there isn't a likelier man living than David—but I do say, Dolly, you ought to give him a hearing," and having convinced himself beyond a reasonable doubt that the whip was all right, Mr. Blount tickled his horse with it and drove away.

"Oh, my sorrows!" ejaculated Miss Dolly, closing the door with an afflicted countenance, and sitting down so quietly for once that a photographer might have copied her then and there.

Now that he could have done her justice, for her expression was too quick and varied to be caught by a trick of chemicals, and without it Miss Dolly's physiognomy would have been rather characterless but for her prominent Roman nose. This organ gave tone to her face. By which I would not be understood literally, as saying that she talked through a nasal whine. I mean simply in a metaphorical sense, this bold feature spoke loudly of energy. And Miss Dolly had abundant need of energy—else why the nose? Every two years during her childhood she had been tiptoed into the east bedroom to see a new baby, till at her mother's death, five little brothers fell to her charge to be coaxed and scolded into manhood.

"You can't bring up those boys," groaned a dolorous aunt. "They'll run square over you, Dorothy Almeda."

"Let them run over me so long as it does not hurt 'em!" laughed Miss Dolly, skewing her flaxen hair with a goose-quill and tying a calico apron over her calico longshort, preparatory to "bringing up said youths.

From that day forward she went cheerily on, making the best of everything, though it must be confessed she often had odds and ends to work with, as people usually do have who are born with a faculty. Somehow she found time for all her duties except matrimony. If that were a duty, it was one she wouldn't and couldn't attend to while her father and children needed her. Divers young men thought this a great pity, among them David Wiggin.

"Don't be silly, David!" said Dolly, when he hinted as much to her; whereupon David went off and married Olive Searle, the plainest looking girl in the parish.

This happened thirty years ago, and David was again wifeless and again the current of his thoughts turned toward Dolly, who still lived at the old homestead at the foot of Bryant's Falls. Her father had died some months before. Of the boys James and Ezekiel had settled on neighboring farms and the remaining three had gone west. David's benevolent heart warmed with compassion as he remembered Dolly's lonely condition, and he felt that it would be exceedingly kind in him to offer her a home especially as he owned as good a place as you can find on the river, while the Blount cottage was falling into decay.

He wouldn't let her former refusal tell against her, for as he looked back, he couldn't really see how she could have married any one at that period. She ought to be rewarded for the devotion she had shown to the family, and, for his part, he felt magnanimous enough to give her a second chance to accept him. Such was the worthy widower's state of mind when he asked James Blount with mock humility whether it would be of any use for him to try and make a bargain with Dolly.

"That's more than I can tell," Mr. Blount had answered. "Dolly's a puzzle; you'll have to find her out yourself."

Mr. Wiggin smiled in complacent anticipation of acceptance; indeed if it might not seem like reproach to the memory of his lost Olive, I should say the kind-hearted man rejoiced in this opportunity of making Miss Dolly's happiness. Benevolence was in his face, benevolence was in his spirit, as he sallied forth at an early day to acquaint her with her good fortune. The broken harrow which he had strapped into the wagon to give the neighbors a plausible reason for his trip to the Falls, was by no means typical of mental laceration to its owner. His feeling as he approached Miss Dolly's moss-grown cottage was purely one of thankfulness that it was in his power to provide her a better home. Not that he was grateful to his dead wife for leaving a vacancy there. Mr. Wiggin had mourned faithfully for Olive a year and a day.

Miss Dolly was out in the garden gathering catnip. She had built a chip fire under the tea kettle and then whisked off to pick an apronful of the pungent leaves while the water was boiling. There she was stooping beneath the eaves of a log-cabin sun-bonnet, and humming a lively tune when Mr. Wiggin drove up.

"'Come, my beloved, haste away,'" piped Miss Dolly, cheerly, snapping away briskly at the stalks.

"'Cut short the hours of thy delay; Fly like a youthful—'"

"'Fly like a youthful—'" struck in a wheezy bass.

The sun-bonnet tipped back like a cart-body.

"Sakes alive!" cried Miss Dolly, not in the words of the hymn, as Mr Wiggins strode toward her on his slightly rheumatic legs.

"I didn't mean to put you out," he laughed, shaking hands heartily; "but it seemed kind o' nateral to take part with you in 'Invitation.'"

"You always had a way in falling in at the most unheard of time, I remember," retorted Miss Dolly, saucily, recovering herself and going on gathering catnip.

"You used to say I kept good time, only too much of it," pursued Mr. Wiggin, with a sudden inspiration; "but I tell you what, Dolly, time never did drag with me more than it does these days."

"It is a dull season," said Miss Dolly with exasperating simplicity. "I suppose the grasshoppers have eaten most of your wheat—haven't they—so it'll hardly pay for reaping?"

"Just so," assented Mr. Wiggin discomfited.

He had not travelled five miles in the heat to discuss the state of the crops.

"Walk in and sit down, won't you?" said Dolly, with reluctant hospitality.

Her apron was crammed to its utmost capacity. She devoutly wished it had been larger.

"Well, yes, I don't care if I do," answered Mr. Wiggin, after a hypocritical show of hesitancy. "I had a little business further on at the blacksmith's. No hurry, though, as I know," and he turned to let down the bars for Miss Dolly who meanwhile slipped through the fence, catnip and all. "Bless my heart! I don't see but you are as smart as you ever was," said he, admiringly, as he puffed along in her wake. "Still you must be getting into years, Dolly, as well as I—no offence, I hope—and I was wandering whether or no it wasn't lonesome for you living here a woman so?"

"Oh, I never was one of the lonesome kind," responded Miss Dolly, briskly, seating her guest in the patchwork cushioned rocking-chair, "and for that matter hardly a day passes without some of James' folks running in."

"Yes, I know; but if you was to change your situation, wouldn't you enjoy life better, think?"

Miss Dolly fidgetted at the green paper curtains and intimated that her happiness would be complete if the grasshoppers would stop feeding on her garden sauce.

"That's just it," continued Mr. Wiggin, eagerly; "you do seem to need a man to look out for your farming interests now don't you, Dolly? a man that will be ready and willing to do for you, and make you comfortable?"

"I don't know," said Miss Dolly, dryly. "The year father died I did have Silas Potter, and he is the most faithful creature living; but what with the extra cooking and washing I had to do for him, my work was about double, and when mud-time came, I was glad to send him off and hire by the day. I made up my mind that men folks around the house cost more than they come to."

"I guess we don't understand one another," said Mr. Wiggin, slightly disconcerted at this unflattering view of his sex. "I wasn't speaking of hiring help, Dolly. Naturally you would get tired of that. It's worrying to a woman. But if you was to have a companion, now—one that could give you a good home, with wood and water under cover—"

"Shoo! shoo!" cried Miss Dolly, flying out after an inquiring chicken on the doorstep.

Mr. Wiggin drew his red handkerchief from his hat to whipe his glowing face. Certainly he had not felt the heat so bad through haying.

"How's your health, now-a-days?" asked Miss Dolly, frisking back with a look of resolute unconsciousness.

"Very good; remarkable good! I don't know where you will find a man with a tougher constitution than I have got."

"Ah!" and Dolly blushed like a sumac in October.

"Yes, I'm well," pursued Mr. Wiggin, perseveringly, "and I'm tolerable well-to-do, with nothing to hinder my marrying again, providing I can see a woman to my mind."

"There's the deacon's widow," suggested Dolly, officiously; "she's pious, economical—"

"She's left with means enough to carry her through handsomely," interrupted Mr. Wiggin, quickly. "Now I'd rather have a wife to provide for—one that needed a home. In fact, Dolly, I have my eye on a little woman I want this very minute."

He had both eyes on her for that matter, and Miss Dolly was forced to recognize the situation, whether she accepted it or not.

"I've managed to sweeten my tea so far, David, without calling upon my neighbors," chirruped she, stooping to lay straight the braided mat, "and I might as well keep on. I don't feel it a tax as some folks would. But there's Martha Dunning she's having a hard time to get along. Why don't you take her, David? She'd appreciate such a nice home as yours."

"It would seem as if most any women might," said Mr. Wiggin in an injured tone; "all finished off complete, painted outside and in—"

"She'd be delighted with it—I'm sure of it!" broke in Miss Dolly, with an air of conviction, as she darted into the kitchen to lift the boiling kettle from the crane.

"But you don't mean that you won't marry me, Dolly?" pleaded Mr. Wiggin, anxiously following her to the door. "I have been doting on seeing you at the head of things at my house."

"Martha is a good manager," said Miss Dolly, coolly. "David needn't think he can buy me with a new set of buildings!" added she, mentally, snapping down the lid of the pug-nosed tea-pot. "I never did have the name of being croping."

"I tell you, Dolly, I won't have Martha I don't like her turn!" cried Mr. Wiggin testily balancing himself on the threshold yet not daring to step over it.

Miss Dolly gave her undivided attention to winging the hearth.

"You know you was always the woman of my choice, Dolly," pursued Mr. Wiggin, as tenderly as he could consistently with the distance between them. "And when we were both young—"

"Pshaw!" snapped Dolly, scorching her wing, "that's beyond the memory of man."

Mr. Wiggin's position was becoming painful. Miss Dolly was not to be won by the attractions of wealth and position, nor even by tender allusions to the past. He would appeal to her kindness of heart.

"I used to believe you had some feeling, Dolly," said he, tremulously; "but you don't seem to have any for me. Here I am left here all alone in the world; children all paired off, 'thout's Matilda, and she'll go before the snow flies; house empty—"

"I suppose you can have a home with any of your boys and welcome," put in Miss Dolly, still fluttering about the chimney like a swallow.

"Yes, if worse comes to worse, I suppose I can," assented Mr. Wiggin, mournfully, anything but consoled by his reflection. "It would break me up terribly, though, you may depend, to give up my place that I set so much by and crowd myself on my children."

No response save the clattering of the tongs.

"And it's dreadful melancholy business for a man at my time of life to drag along without a partner. I'm getting too old, Dolly," and Mr. Wiggin brushed his sleeve across his eyes as a feruled school-boy might have done. "Yes, I'm getting to be old, Dolly, and it stands to reason that I haven't many years to live; but I did hope that we might go down hill together, Dolly, you chirking me up with that spry way of your'n that I always took to, and carrying the heft of—"

Here Miss Dolly gave a little sniff, nothing worth mentioning only for the effect it produced on Mr. Wiggin.

"Can't you make up your mind to have me, Dolly?" pleaded Mr. Wiggin. "I don't see how I am going to stand it if you can't."

"Then Miss Martha wouldn't suit," said Miss Dolly, archly. "What a shame now, when she needs property so much!"

"Hang the property! I'd mortgage the whole of it rather than not get you!" cried Mr. Wiggin, with a vehemence that quite closed her mouth.

And so at last he had Miss Dolly.

FOOTPRINTS OF THE PAST.

Heavy stone blocks lately taken from the Portland freestone quarry about eight feet below its top bear some remarkable fossil footprints of birds and beasts. A lower stratum has the depression caused by the steps of the antediluvian animals which roamed this region when the sea reached to the place, and the next lying stratum above took a cast of the marks in projection. One of these tracks measures fifteen inches by eleven, and was probably made by some animal of the elephantine species, although the footprint is larger than that which would be made by an elephant of the present age. There are three of these tracks in a slab about a yard wide and two yards long. Another slab has the impress of some three-toed bird, supposedly a member of the ostrich family. The stride is about a foot and a half. Another slab ten foot long, has the impress in relief of part of a tree trunk. The tree from its shaggy bark, is thought to have been a hickory. The slabs are to be presented to the Hartford High School.

A few days ago we mentioned that we would give more particulars of the change of departments in Mr. Conrad's great establishment. The dress goods department has been moved to the lower part of the store, where there is double the room and a much better light, on account of a sky-light, and customers can see the shades to a much greater advantage. It goes without saying that Mr. Conrad has now as large an assortment as can be found in any metropolitan store, and his stock contains all the new and fashionable shades, in silks, velvets, plushes, French dress fabrics, etc. The domestic department is moved to where the dress goods were, and is complete in every respect, and special bargains may be found on that counter daily. The small-ware department has been moved to the left of the store where there is a good light, and it is very accessible and stocked with everything so indispensable to a lady's outfit. The worsted department has been moved to the right of the store under the window where there is an excellent light so that ladies will now find it very convenient to select the different shades of worsteds, silks, flowers, etc., and it has been newly stocked with everything which belongs to a first class worsted department. Mr. Conrad assures us that he has now the finest worsted department in Essex County. He has spent two days in New York, with his wife, selecting goods especially for this department and there is nothing now wanting to make it complete. It would be impossible to mention the different worsteds, flosses, etc. He has engaged a competent sales-lady to advise and help customers select the shades, to teach new stitches, etc. The other departments we will not attempt to mention. Mr. Conrad has been purchasing in New York very largely, and some of the goods were bought at an immense sacrifice from importers—such as cloaks, suits, kid gloves and hosiery, millinery goods, laces, etc. He no doubt will advertise in our columns as soon as the goods arrive and are in order. Look out for a great revolution in prices at Conrad's store in a few days.—Salem Register.

THE TERROR OF THE SOUTH.—Jasper, Fla.—Mr. Boardman W. Wilson traveling for A. G. Alford & Co., dealers in Firearms and Cutlery, Baltimore, was prostrated here, with the "break-bone fever;" he asserts that in his own, as well as in the case of others, the only thing found to relieve this painful malady was St. Jacobs Oil. This wonderful pain-cure has the endorsement of such men as Ex-Postmaster General James, Senator Daniel W. Voorhees, and an army of others.

Book Notices.

THE YOUNG LADIES' JOURNAL, published by the International News Co. is a very attractive as well as useful fashion magazine. And we are glad to observe that it is very popular in this vicinity. It contains plates, designs in needle work and many other items of interest to the ladies. For sale by the Peabody News Co.

October brings the concluding number of the CENTURY year, and of the twenty-sixth volume of the magazine. The leading features of the magazine are, E. C. Stedman's essay on the poet Longfellow, illustrated by a full-page portrait; Richard Grant White's "Old New York and its houses," and Austin Dobson's paper on the engraver, Thomas Bewick, all of which are illustrated. The anonymous novel, "The Bread Winners," is continued in fully as strong and marked a style at the opening chapters, while W. D. Howell's serial, "A Woman's Reason," is brought to a conclusion. Other articles are "Characteristics of London," "Foreigner in Florence," "Through Waterspout and Typhoon" besides the usual departments. The publishers state that the magazine enters upon its fourteenth year with a circulation numbering thousands beyond those of the last or any former year in its history.

ST. NICHOLAS for October, though the last of the present volume, is by no means the least in respect to the quality of its contents, and opens with a beautiful poem by Philip Bourke Marston, entitled Summer Changes, which is followed by the second part of Louisa M. Alcott's charming child story, Little Pyramus Thisbe. There is an entertaining chapter on army pets in Harry M. Kieffer's Recollections of a Drummer-boy, together with an amusing anecdote of how General Grant had to go thirsty. There are two popular serials, short stories, poems, etc.

A fine sonnet by Whittier, in the MANHATTAN for October, has for its theme Miss Alexander's touching Story of Ida, which has been so warmly praised by Mr. Ruskin. What a fruitful field the magazine has in New York and its neighborhood is shown in a well-written paper on the Valley of the Hackensack, which is just across the Hudson, behind the Palisades. The fourteen picturesque illustrations well supplement the text. In The Log of the Atalanta Charles Hull Botsford describes Jay Gould's superb yacht and its voyage from Philadelphia to New York vividly.

The Northampton Journal is the organ of the poor working-man, and yet editor Warner writes his editorials on a roll-top desk and has a big safe with a chromo on it, and the finest printing office adjoining we've seen in many a day.—Milford Gazette.

WHAT THE PEOPLE SAY

SARSAPARILLIAN HYGIENIC WINE.

What D. N. GRIFFIN, dealer in Clothing, Hats, Caps and Gents' Furnishing Goods says about it:

Having used 'RAYMOND'S HYGIENIC WINE in my family, I take pleasure in recommending it to the public as being a safe, delicious and highly beneficial tonic, in short, all that it is claimed to be.

D. N. GRIFFIN, Beverly.

I have been acquainted with B. F. RAYMOND for five years and have always found him a man of unimpeachable character, and business integrity. What can be said of him can be said of his medicine, there is no humbug about it. DANIEL W. BARTLETT,
Chairman Selectmen, Essex.

WALTER FLINT, 29 Federal St, Beverly, Mass, says: "I had measles very badly this last winter. Was left with a bad cough and very weak. After staying at home for several weeks, after getting out of doors, I commenced to go to school. Cough was so bad and strength so poor that Physician ordered me to leave school. I took a great deal of medicine, but nothing seemed to help me. Cough seemed to grow worse instead of better. Some one recommended Sarsaparillian Hygienic Wine. I tried it, and before I had taken one half a bottle, I was back to school, and cough was better. After taking whole bottle, cough was entirely cured, and felt strong and hearty."

MUSIC STORE.

287 ESSEX STREET

E. V. EMILIO,

The Shoe and Leather Reporter says that Horace W. Wadleigh, of Boston, made one sale of seventy-four tons of rough splits last week, probably the largest single sale ever made. This one transaction took nearly half the stock he had.

SALEM.

The White mountain trains on the Eastern Railroad leaving Salem at 10 A. M. and 2.02 P. M. have been discontinued.

Merrill & Mackintire are offering some astonishing bargains in room papers, as their new advertisement in the PRESS shows. This firm have built up a large trade by their liberality and honorable dealing.

The year before Mr. Barker became superintendent of the Salem almshouse the total proceeds from the sale of the produce of the farm was $250. The first year he had charge it was $1300. This year it will be $4000, besides the produce used for 155 persons. In 1881 the farm produced 550 bushels of roots, 425 heads of cabbages, and 50 bushels of onions, against 1200 bushels of mangle beets, 17,000 heads of cabbage and 7000 bushels of onions this year. No corn was raised in 1880, against 1200 dozen ears sold this year, and much more consumed. About 40 hogs will be sold this year, and the superintendent also has 50 young pigs to be sold. The amount paid for labor in 1880 was $1628, against $1513 last year. This year the bill will be about the same as last.

Charles A. Clark, organist of St. John's Church of Peabody, will give a piano recital at Plummer Hall to-morrow evening, at which Grace F. Dalton and Charles F. Webber will assist.

The new skating rink of Manager Reed is expected to be ready early next month.

Passing along Essex street attention is naturally drawn to the attractive windows of Wilmot's Clothing House. A great deal of time and expense is used in window decorations at this store. Still more attractive is the excellent quality of the goods and the very low prices which are always marked on them in plain figures.

The first rehearsal of the Salem Oratorio Society will take place Thursday evening, Oct. 18. "Elijah" will be taken up and Mr. Henschel will sing when it is given in public. A combination has been effected with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Geo. Henschel, conductor, and three symphony concerts and two oratorios will be presented this season. Price of tickets for the five concerts will be $3.00.

The Salem G. A. R. Post have issued an appeal to the public in support of their fair. They have discarded prizes and raffling, and they ask those who believe that funds can be raised for charitable purposes without their use to show their faith by works. Will they do it?

Rev. Mr. Atwood, of the South Church, expects to resume his duties next Sabbath.

Almy, Bigelow & Webber have an opening of Fall and Winter Millinery to-morrow and Friday.

Thomas H. Kelly, of Danvers, was arrested Sunday in Lawrence, and brought to Salem, where he was defaulted several months ago. Mr. Winn, who was his surety, thus escapes a liability of $12,000.

Mr. Peabody advertises to-day, among other bargains, gold-mounted pencils at half the regular price. See what he offers.

Conductors and drivers' benefit to-day. If the readers of the PRESS have any spare change, it will be gratefully appreciated by these employes of the Naumkeag Railroad.

The whole number of tickets sold at the rink for the exhibition of fancy articles at the Agricultural Fair, was 9,060. The amount taken was $1,812. It was a big time for Salem and the Willows.

Rev. Mr. McDaniel has been elected Secretary of the American Unitarian Ministers' Institute, held at Lowell, last week.

The republicans of this city will begin their campaign to-night when five flags will be thrown to the breeze. The first flag will be across Boston street at the great tree. The march will then be taken to the old North Bridge, to Bridge street, across the city to Derby street near the Custom House and thence to Lafayette street, where the fifth flag will be raised. Joseph N. Peterson will be chief marshal and the Salem Brass Band will furnish music.

A meeting of the Salem Mechanic Light Infantry will be held next Friday evening, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Lieut. Allard.

Business in the Eastern Railroad car shops is looking up.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

Jalma, the spectacular play now running at the Boston Theatre is, without exception, the finest spectacle it has ever been our good fortune to witness.—The ballet is excellent, and presents a succession of costumes of such delicate tints as to render the effect unusually pleasing. The play itself is of greater interest than is usually the case in this class of plays, while the scenic effects are simply superb. The march of the silver army, at the close of the fourth act, is one of the most magnificent displays ever presented on the stage, while the transformation scene at the close baffles description. It will well repay our people to visit the city to witness it.

At the Park Theatre Maggie Mitchell, always a favorite, is playing her annual engagement. To-morrow evening and the remainder of the week she will enact "The Little Savage." Next week, the last week of her engagement, she will appear in "Pearl of Savoy" and Fanchon.

Virginia is still drawing appreciative houses at the Bijou. The singing is fine, and this cosy theatre is destined to become a popular place of resort.

Edwin F. Thorne and company will appear at the Howard Athenæum this week in "The Black Flag." This play made a hit at the Globe last year, and is one of the successes of the Union Square Theatre in New York. The original scenery from that theatre will be used.

Miss May Newman, who is playing the leading female role in the Boston Theatre "World" company, is receiving much praise from the New England press. She is a native of East Wilton Me., and a graduate of the Boston school of oratory. This is her first season on the stage.

Our readers will not forget that Carrie Swain appears in Mechanic Hall, Salem, to-morrow evening, in "Cad, the Tomboy." This announcement is surely sufficient to crowd the house.

Friday evening Moulton & Johnson will present Chas. L. Davis, in Alvin Joslin, and the entire company, including the famous $10,000 band, will be present. If any of our readers are subject to the blues, a night with Alvin Joslin will dispel them.

Annie Pixley plays in Philadelphia this week. She appears only one week during the season on the New England circuit, Salem being one of the favored places.

The Boston Theatre "World" company continues to do a large business in the new England circuit, and company, performances and stage setting are highly praised by the local journals.

The Madison Square "Hazel Kirke" company now touring the New England circuit, under Mr. W. W. Randall's management, and booked to appear at the Park in December, contains among its members Mr. C. W. Couldock, Mrs. E. L. Davenport, Mr. Dominick Murray, Miss Ada Gilman and Miss Cecile Rush.

The ART AMATEUR for October is a treasure for home art workers. Its designs include three for China Painters (primroses for a vase, harebells for a plate and poppies for a plaque), three for Embroidery—a letter case, a photograph frame and a bellows; a charming hawthorn panel for Wood-carving, a dozen pleasing figures for sketching on linen and a multiplicity of monograms and jewelry designs. There are valuable articles on etching, drawing in red, and other art topics, with some good examples of crayon work; the Munich and Boston art exhibitions are reviewed and attractively illustrated; there are some excellent pictures of Boule work and one of a remarkable Henri Deux cabinet inlaid with ivory, and many practical suggestions for home decoration and furnishing. Price, 35 cents; $4 a year. Montague Marks, publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

Captain John W. Rhoades, a former commander of the old Salem Artillery, died on Monday at the age of 74. He served in the Common Council in 1854 and 1855, and in the Legislature during the "Know nothing" period. He was the oldest surviving member of continuous membership of Essex Lodge of Odd Fellows, having been initiated, December 4, 1843.

It seems to be an understood thing in Beverly that John I. Baker can go to the legislature as long as he lives. Hence when that venerable man was appointed on the land and harbor commission, some ambitious local patriots rejoiced; but they must not be hasty about bowing out the father of the House. The blue-eyed philosopher observes that Gen. Coggswell, inspector-general of fish, continues to be a member of the Legislature.—Lawrence Eagle.

The following are the nominations made by the democratic party at their Convention in Springfield, last Wednesday:

For Governor, Benjamin F. Butler of Lowell. Lieutenant Governor, Frederick O. Prince of Boston. Secretary of State, Charles Marsh of Springfield. Treasurer, Charles H. Ingalls of North Adams. Attorney General, John W. Cummings of Fall River. Auditor, John Hopkins of Millbury.

LYNN.

The city employes will now receive their pay every Monday, the ordinance providing for weekly payment having become a law. This is the first city in the State to adopt such an order. The salaries of the treasurer and auditor will be increased on account of the additional work incurred.

The Lynn Marble and Granite Co. will give a discount to all persons placing orders with them for marble or granite monuments, tablets, head-stones or other cemetery work, before Dec. 1. Read their advertisement in another column.

There will be a coffee party and concert in aid of St. Joseph's Church this evening at Odd Fellows Hall. The edifice is now in process of completion. A fine concert programme will be presented. Delegations from Peabody, Salem, Marblehead and Boston will be present, and it will be a grand affair.

Mr. James N. Buffum is erecting a house on Herbert street. Before long it is expected that High rock and the adjacent land will be sold into house lots. It is proposed to run a street to the summit, leading from High Rock street, laying out house lots on each side.

The city physician has had much to do of late in the vaccination line, between 200 and 300 children having been supplied with the virus.

The democrats are pushing the nomination of Henry F. Hurlburt for district attorney, claiming that Lynn has never been represented in that office. If they rely on the democrats to elect a man they may wait a long time for a representation.

Welch & Cummings, on Union St., are making preparations for a large fall trade in furniture, and they show some desirable styles of their own manufacture. Their motto is one price to all—and every piece of work warranted.

E. K. Hood, the manager of one of the courses of entertainments here, met with an enthusiastic reception in Milford, N. H., where he read with the De Seve Concert Co.

The Republican city committee are manufacturing a flag 20x30, of English bunting.

A new hydrant is being put in at Central Square, capable of connecting five lines of hose.

Geo. W. Massy, a shoe manufacturer of Oxford, street died Saturday night of diabetes, aged 76 years. Mr. Massy was a native of Marblehead.

The increase of polls assessed in this city this year is 869. Only 15 women are assessed, against 27 last year.

The readers of the PRESS are cordially invited to look at the art store of Smith & Robinson, 42 Market street, when they visit this city. Their window is unusually attractive with fine pictures, panels and novelties in art. Inside is a rich and varied display which it is really worth a journey to Lynn to see, for those who are interested in art or painting. All are welcome, whether purchasers or not.

The party who worked the "gold brick" racket on a decoy victim and was caught, has been in Lynn for the past few weeks, under the name of Howard. He obtained a letter of introduction to Hon. Peter M. Nash, the lumber dealer, and Howard attempted to work it on him. He saw through the scheme, however, and reported to city marshall Hoitt. Howard will be brought to Lynn.

The general statistics of the order of Odd Fellows, as given at the 59th annual session of the sovereign grand lodge of the order, now in session at Providence, R. I., will have interest with many of our citizens. The net gain in membership throughout the Union, during the past year, has been 18,050. The number of lodge members is 510,414; of encampment members, 86,749; the total revenue received during the year, $5,245,946; the amount expended in relief, $1,882,444. There has been a large increase in all matters denoting extraordinary prosperity, such as no former year's history has exhibited. The report of the grand treasury shows a cash balance on the 31st of August, ultimo, of $14,772.55. The aggregate available assets are stated to be $74,773.55, which is an increase of $5096 over the assets of 1882. The revenue during the past year has exceeded the expenses $7566.49. Assets of the sovereign grand lodge amount to $111,242.-30. The present condition of the order is as follows: Sovereign grand lodge, 1; independent grand lodge, German Empire and Australasia, 2; subordinate grand encampments, 43; subordinate encampments, 1876; subordinate grand lodges, 60; subordinate lodges, 7803.

Mr. F. A. Bland of Washington, D. C., a prominent greenbacker, feels called upon to apologize for having written a biography of Gov. Butler. The time may not be far distant when it will be the proper thing for voters to publish their apology for voting as Mr. Bland wrote.—Waltham Record.

BAD, BAD, BAD BLOOD.

Some blood is bad because it is poor and weak. Some is bad because it contains impurities. Some men have such bad blood that the wonder is it does not poison the mosquitoes who come to bite them.

The rich red color of good blood is owing to the iron which is present. Blood which has not enough iron in it is always unsatisfactory. The person in whose veins it circulates cannot be said to enjoy good health.

The efforts of expert chemists to produce a preparation of iron which can be assimilated with the blood have resulted in that perfect preparation which is an important part of Brown's Iron Bitters. It is the only one which freely enters into the blood. It is the only one which accomplishes the desired good.

Weak, poor, thin blood may be made rich and strong, and impure blood may be purified by the use of that Great Iron Medicine, Brown's Iron Bitters.

WE DID, and our business to-day is a pleasing monument of its kindly reception by the people of Lynn, Swampscott, Saugus, Nahant, Marblehead, Peabody, Danvers, Lynnfield, Salem, &c., to whom we are more than thankful.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

THE ATTEMPT of Gen. Butler to shelve ex-Mayor Prince of Boston for the presidential campaign, by having him nominated for lieutenant governor, seems to have failed. Mayor Prince, evidently, don't train with the wing of the democratic party that swears by Butler.

THERE IS considerable gossip in the daily papers in this vicinity and elsewhere about "possible candidates" for different county offices, and representatives and senators. Any man who is a voter is a possible candidate for any of these offices. Every boy is a possible candidate for the presidency when he grows up. But when it comes to the probability of these men who have been named being either nominated or elected—the most of them will get "badly left." It is too early yet to speculate upon candidates for the Legislature. That will come better and easier later in the campaign.

THERE IS no truth in the reiterated statement of the Salem News that the Republicans will put in nomination a party candidate for register of probate in Essex County. It is taken for granted that Mr. Mahoney will receive the hearty support of the party. Anything else would be foolishness. This office should not be made a party football.—The claims of Mr. Mahoney are those of ability and faithful service—the only ones requisite. We look upon any rumor to the disparagement of Mr. Mahoney as an attempt to make political capital against the Republican party.—It should be nipped in the bud here and now.

THE GREAT New York dailies are having a war on prices, the Times and Herald having reduced their price of single copies. This cuts down the profits of the newsdealers in different parts of that city, and they refuse to sell the papers for any less than the old rates. Inasmuch as they have combined for protection, and as New York in its suburbs is a long distance from Printing House Square, and dependence must be placed, to a large extent, upon the news dealers, it will be interesting to see the result. The Tribune claims that nothing can be gained by the reduction, and its price remains at three cents. For the mammoth sheets which the New York Herald often issues, it would seem as if three cents was cheap enough.

LAST MONDAY, October 1st, will mark an epoch in the history of the United States postal service, in that it inaugurates a further reduction in letter postage. It will not only be an advantage to our business men, but it will be equally so to the common people.—All these little expenses go to make up the cost of living, and those who have to make every cent count, will fully appreciate this item. With the improvement in the government service has also come the reduction in its cost, and the cheaper the postage the larger have been the mails. It is not to be expected that the government service, under the new law, will be self-sustaining at first. But we anticipate a diminished use of the postal card, and that many will more frequently send their messages in a sealed envelope at the small increased expense.

ASIDE FROM the cities, where it is expected Robinson will speak, there is no part of Massachusetts where it is so important that he should be seen and heard, as in Essex County. It is the stronghold of Butlerism. It is the home of greenbackism. It is, therefore, desirable, even imperative, that the best speakers should be sent to this field. Here Robinson is unknown personally, and here he can do effective work. In Danvers, Marblehead, Peabody, and in fact in every town in the county, he should be sent during the campaign. It is not of so great moment that his voice should be heard in the vicinity of his own home. But he is wanted here, and the Republican State Committee will see to it, if they are wise, that such arrangements are made. And just here we cannot help saying that our new town hall ought to be ready for him to speak in. Not only the Republicans, but the other parties as well, desire it for some rallies. Railroad Clerk Litchman wants to speak there. The old hall is unfit for any rally. We hope the Committee will hasten the finishing touches, which is all there is remaining to do, so that we can have a few campaign speeches before election.

THE BOSTON Globe calls upon the Republican press to be honest in their statements, and says, by way, we presume, of setting the example, that the Republican ratification meeting in Boston last year was a fizzle, but that the one last Wednesday night in Tremont Temple was a success. That paper has at last woke up to the fact that something is being done, that the people are aroused, and that our voters are waiting, even anxious, for the election day to come round. There is no denying the fact—we all see it—that the campaign was a weak one last year, on the Republican side. There were local dissensions in many places, there was apathy on the part of the Crapo men because their favorite was defeated, and the real strength of Butler was not fully realized by a large number. We sometimes wonder that the vote for Bishop was as large as it appeared by the result. But this year all is changed. Local dissension has given place to harmony; there are no jealousies between friends of rival candidates; the reception of Robinson everywhere shows that he is making an impression that means votes and influence; the whole line is solid. Herein is the difference between the two campaigns. One resulted in Butler's favor; the other will result in his defeat.

WILLIAM W. NICHOLS, who was one of the officers of the so-called Butler Independents, has written a letter in which he forbids the use of his name in that connection, and repudiates Butler. He gives as a reason the fact that his support of him last year was with the expectation that Butler would accomplish something in the way of reform; but seeing his failure to prove his charges in the Tewksbury investigation, together with the apparent use of the office to further his own personal ends, Nichols is done with him, and announces his determination to vote for Robinson. In addition to his letter published last week, the Boston Herald last Sunday published one written to T. A. Bland, last July, in which he says: "Last year, myself and Hon. John I. Baker and a few of the old committee of 1879 organized again as an Independent Republican state committee, and, by placing 200,000 ballots at the various voting precincts in the state, with responsible men to distribute them, we secured at least 15,000 Republican votes for Gov. Butler that would have been given to the Republican candidate, which would have elected him, had we not organized as we did. The ballots were Republican, except the Governor, which was Butler, and were intended for Republicans.—Now, I am sorry to say that Butler has entirely ignored our committee, leaving us with a debt of more than $600 unpaid, for printing bills and other necessary expenses." It must be fun to be independent Butler men, if this is the way they are rewarded for their services. We don't wonder they are coming back to the Republican party.

THE NOMINATIONS for County officers are next in order, and inasmuch as the County Convention of the Republican party is to be held next week, some canvassing will doubtless be done. The Republican party will have no difficulty in making their selections, and there should be as little in electing them. Unless the greenback party is subdued into making no nominations, or fusing with the democrats, the result is as certain as the sun to rise. But a fusion will be attempted on some of the county officers, notably that of Councillor, as Gen. Butler has determined to defeat Col. Haskell, if such a thing is possible.

For Register of Probate, the party will nominate J. T. Mahoney. He is a democrat, but the courtesy of the democrats last year in renominating a republican should be returned, and we hear no desire on the part of any republican in this vicinity to do otherwise. The people of Peabody, especially, will take pleasure in voting for him. He is a Peabody boy, a graduate of our High School, and in his position has done his native town, as well as himself, honor.

For County Commissioner, Mr. Graves, of Lynn, will be renominated. Mr. Graves is a man of principle, as was proved four years ago, when he declined the office to which he was elected on a technicality. Even democrats will remember this when they are asked to vote for a man in opposition to him. He also selected William P. Upham to perform the duty of indexing the county records, and his work is certainly entitled to great praise. We have heard Henry Hobbs of Wenham mentioned as the opposition candidate. Mr. Hobbs is a greenbacker, and if nominated by the democrats, might prevent an independent nomination on the part of the greenback party. But with Mr. Graves' record he should be sure of an election.

For district attorney, we think Mr. Moulton is the right man in the right place. There is scarcely a doubt of his nomination, and we hear it on good authority, that he will not be opposed by the democrats in this vicinity. They will doubtless make a nomination, but Mr. Moulton will have not only the solid republican vote but an addition to it.

The hardest fight on county officers will be, for the republicans, the election of Col. Haskell, as Councillor. Various candidates are proposed by the opposition, among them A. A. Mower of Lynn, and Senator John R. Baldwin. Were not Gen. Butler personally interested in this fight, there would be no reason to fear the result. But it is of course admitted that this county is Butler's stronghold, and it will be for his interest that the strongest man—the man who will poll the united democratic and greenback vote—shall be put in the field. Editor Litchman has been provided for, and is out of the way. This was a part of the programme. It is therefore incumbent upon us to poll our full vote for Haskell. We are assured that he is more popular in Salem than last year; his straightforward course in the council has won him hosts of friends, and Salem will be united this year in his favor. Peabody will give him a handsome vote, and if the towns in the rest of the county, and his own city, do as well by him, we think he can be elected. And this, too, in spite of the fiat of Gen. Butler that he is doomed.

Frank Leslie had last week, a curious contribution to illustrated journalism; that paper presented an excellent likeness of Lieut. Gov. Oliver Ames, which it represents to be a portrait of Congressman Robinson; the artist has strangely "mixed those babies up."

We call the attention of our readers to the new advertisement of the New England Clothing Co., of Lynn, whose main store is on Market Street and a branch on Union Street. We feel sure that our readers will be interested by a visit to one or the other of their stores in Lynn. Their facilities for selling goods at the very bottom prices are first class, and their stock is one of the largest in the city.

George M. Stearns, the well-known Chicopee lawyer, is too good a Democrat to vote for Butler, and will vote for his townsman, Mr. Robinson. And he will not only vote for him, but offers to bet $100 that he will be elected, $100 that he will have 5000 majority, and $100 that he will have 10,000 majority. Stearns is a keen observer and knows what he is about, and we wouldn't advise any one who wishes to keep his money, to take up any of the eloquent lawyer's bets.—Palmer Journal.

Perhaps nothing in the political line could have come nearer the "eternal fitness of things" than that V. M. Simons, recent pastor of the M. E. Church in this place, should have done the praying for the Democratic Convention at Springfield last Wednesday. Taking everything together it was exceedingly appropriate. The selection of Mr. Simons showed too that the Woburn delegation was a power there, for Woburn Democracy dote on him, and no doubt legged strong for his appointment to the distinguished position of Chaplain to the convention.—Woburn Journal.

The Fitchburg railroad will run two excursion trains to North Adams via Hoosac tunnel this week. The first train will leave Boston Thursday morning, and passengers can return that night or the next day. The second excursion will start Saturday morning, and tickets will be good to return that afternoon or on Sunday or Monday. These excursions will afford fine opportunities to enjoy the scenery of the beautiful Deerfield valley and the Hoosac mountains.

Elizur Wright has objected to Mr. Robinson's candidacy because when in the state Senate he did not object to the use of free passes by legislators: but Mr. Wright does not keep up with the procession. The railroad presidents will all testify that since being in Congress the representative of this district has scrupulously but quietly refused all passes, even one on the local road which runs by his own door.—Springfield Republican.

We are pleased to direct attention to Prof. C. R. Bill's advertisement in another column. This will be a very favorable opportunity to acquire a knowledge of the art of reading music. The terms are reasonable. Prof. Bill is thoroughly qualified for the work, and our people would do well to take hold with him in earnest, and make the singing school a grand success.

The looked for reduction of postage has gone into effect and letters can be sent anywhere within the national domain for the small sum of two cents. The demand for stamps has been unprecedented. Postmaster Randall informs us that Monday was the busiest day he has had since he took the office. But few postals were sold and it looks as though the reduction of revenue would not be so large as anticipated, since more letters instead of postals will be used. In anticipation, however, of a deficiency the grades and salaries of Post Offices have been so adjusted that notwithstanding there will undoubtedly be an increase of work, alarge proportion of the expected deficiency is to be made up out of the pockets of the postmasters. Out of 10,000 or more large offices in Massachusetts, nearly all are reduced from one to four hundred dollars, and while perhaps in the whole country, with new offices and natural increase of business, there has not been a large falling off in sales, the expected reduction caused quite a lessening in the demand for stamps and envelopes, the past few months. Some Congressmen say that it was not foreseen that the change in method of adjusting salaries would work so adversely.

A novel method for destroying property was put into operation at the Wallis school last Monday night. The building was entered through an unlocked window in Miss Price's room, from the roof of the cellar porch. The intruder made his way to the boiler room in the basement and turned on the feed pipe which enters the boiler. The water soon filled the boiler and rose through the steam heating pipes till it reached the attic. There the great pressure forced the water out of the radiators which are steam tight, flooding the halls, recitation rooms, entries and then leaking through floors and plastering until it reached the cellar where it collected to a depth of six inches. The ceilings will doubtless have to be re-plastered. The water mixing with the lime in the plastering has stained the seats and desks and made bad work of the floor. When Mr. Drown, the janitor, was on his way to the building early in the morning, he noticed the windows were covered with what he took to be steam, but on entering he found he was mistaken. There will be no session in the rooms which have suffered the most for two days at least, and probably not for the remainder of the week.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Salem Baptist Association will meet with the Baptist Church, Thursday, Oct. 4th. The morning session will be at 10.15. The afternoon session will be at 2. It is expected that Mrs. Bowers, Mrs. Gates, Mrs. Carpenter of Burmah, and Miss Whitman, who is about to go to Japan, will be present and address the meeting. Ladies will take their own lunch as usual, but the ladies of the entertaining church will provide tea and coffee. Free return tickets will be furnished at the meeting to all who have paid one full fare over the Eastern road. A full meeting is specially desired.

A Band of Hope was formed Sunday night in the room of the W. C. T. Union. Twenty boys and 17 girls put their names to a pledge, not to drink intoxicating liquors, or use tobacco or profanity, and on the payment of ten cents, each received a badge—a nickel-plated pin in the shape of a shield, with "Peabody B. H." inscribed upon it. This Society grew out of a small effort commenced in January last, to sustain a Gospel Temperance meeting. On Feb. 25th three boys accompanied one of the ladies into the meeting, and a little temperance talk was given to them. The next week they brought others with them, and the number weekly increased. July 15th the meetings closed for the summer. On resuming it again Sept. 9th, the attendance was so large, it seemed best to organize them into a Society, according to suggestions from the "Temperance Revolution House" of Chicago. We hope to save the children from the rum fiend. Some writer says "if you educate the children for temperance, before they have started an appetite for liquor, you will have a temperance nation by and by. It is a silent campaign, and results are hidden to most, so it does not show off; but it is guarding the children from the greatest dangers ahead in their path—dangers that lead away thousands." So our hearts devoutly pray, "God bless and prosper the Peabody Band of Hope."

The lovers of the national game were treated to an interesting exhibition of ball playing in Buxton's field, on Warren street, last Saturday afternoon, between two local clubs, lately organized, who style themselves the "Toughs" and "Tenders." The scores were equal at the close of the 5th inning, but costly errors by the Tender outfielders yielded the Toughs eleven runs. Although the errors were quite numerous, yet there were some very brilliant plays, among which was a fine running catch by Farrington of a high fly. The Tenders led at the bat, while the Toughs were the better fielders. Wells, Pierce and Farrington each made three bases, and Weare made a home run. Dr. C. S. Wright umpired the game and gave general satisfaction. The attendance was quite large and respectable, and all enjoyed the game, which lasted two hours and thirty-five minutes. The two clubs will play again soon. Following are the names of the members of each club, with the score:

Nelson and Clark made an excellent battery for the Toughs, and Pray guarded the second base in good style.

Fitch Poole Council Legion of Honor celebrated their second anniversary in Upton's Hall last Friday evening. A goodly number of the companions and their lady friends were present, together with a delegation from the Council in Beverly. Seats had been provided for an entertainment in the upper hall, and at about 8.30 o'clock Commander Worcester called the brothers to order and asked them to listen to a programme which had been prepared for their enjoyment. It consisted of violin solos by Gussie E. Nelson, readings by Miss Ware, songs by Mr. McGregor, all of Salem, singing by Miss Nellie Fessenden, of Cambridge, and harmonica solos by G. M. Fassett, accompanied by George Bartlett on the banjo.—At the close of the entertainment the members, with their invited guests, repaired to the hall below, where the ladies of the council had prepared a bountiful repast. Short speeches were then made by Grand Commander Litchman of Marblehead, Past Grand Commander Kimball and Dr. Morse of Salem, and Commander Adams of Beverly. A very social and pleasant time was enjoyed. The organization numbers 48 members.

The following societies have reported for the parade of the Essex County Temperance societies: Father Matthew of Salem with 90 men and Salem Cadet Band. Young Men's C. T. A., of Salem, 120 men with Lynn National Band. Young Men's C. T. A., of Beverly, 50 men and Drum Corps. Father Matthew of Lynn, 150 men and Lynn Brass Band. St. John's C. T. A., Peabody, 50 men with Salem Brass Band. Young Men's C. T. A., Lawrence, with Drum Corps. Several other societies are in correspondence with the Chief Marshal. The programme as laid out will be a parade of the principal streets, dinner in Upton's Hall, with S. G. Southwick as caterer. A consolidated band concert on the square and an entertainment in the Institute, and wind up with a ball in Upton's hall. Should the weather be fine there will be a great turnout.

To-morrow the teachers of all the schools will meet at the Center school to receive instructions in drawing, from the State instructor.

There is not another person in town who takes so much pride in his grape vines at Mr. A. C. Osborne on Central street. By his invitation we visited him last Friday afternoon, and was shown the grapes as they hung in rich profusion from scores of trellises. Mr. Osborne has vines in all stages of advancement, from the small layers, to a mammoth Concord vine on his residence which has stood the storms for thirty years and contains bushels of fine grapes. Among the many choice varieties are the Concord, Underhill, Martha, Pocklinton and a great number of others. It is well worth a visit, and we don't believe there is another exhibition equal to it in town. On our return we "just dropped in" on our friend Mr. A. L. Ames and can say that he is no mean judge of grapes, several varieties of which he cultivates in large quantities. We extend thanks to both gentlemen for their courtesies.

Letters have been received from Geo. Stevens, and it is uncertain whether he will return this week. It is the first vacation Mr. and Mrs. Stevens have taken for many years, and we don't blame them for making the best of it, especially when their store is in charge of as trusty employes as John F. Moreland and Horace A. Hart. But Mr. Stevens does not forget the friends at home, nor the poor printer. This week all hands in this office had occasion to remember him, when we found on our table a basket of the most elegant fruit, grapes, peaches, apples, bananas, etc., etc.—Well, the way that fruit disappeared would have done Mr. Stevens' heart good if he could have seen it. He has the thanks of everybody from "Our Boy" up.

At the semi-annual meeting of the Father Matthew C. T. A. Society, the following members were elected to office for the ensuing year: President, Daniel F. Bresnehan; Vice Pres., John Carbrey; Rec. Secretary, Thomas O'Connor; Cor. Secretary, Cornelius Fitzpatrick; Treasurer, Jeremiah O'Rourke; Collector, Thomas Broderick; Librarian, Timothy Griffin; Board of Directors, Daniel J. O'Connor, Matthew Mehan, Patrick Sherlock, Wm. Birmingham, John B. Mahoney; Board of Investigation, James Fallon, Wm. Croughwell; Spiritual Director, Rev. John J. Hickey.

No one supposed that Dr. Worcester's horse was a saddle horse, much less his younger brother, who attempted to break the horse to the saddle last Thursday. The young man succeeded finely as long as the horse liked it, but after a while the horse became possessed with the idea that the fun was all on one side and decided to see what he could do, and struck out, with the young man clinging to his neck until he deposited him against a fence on Wallis street. The daring horseman came off second best, with his pants badly torn and a gash cut in his leg.

The following is the roll of honor of the three upper classes of the Wallis School. These scholars have not been absent or tardy during the month of September, and have also been perfect in deportment: 1st class, Mabel Rowell, Mary Connors, Katie Forness, Herman Barnes, Arthur Foote. 2d class, Lillie Bailey, Caddie Dalton, Freddie Bushby, Bart. Sullivan, Michael Buckley, John Osborn. 3d. class, Chas. W. Southwick, Bessie L. Osborn, Fannie A. Carr, Lucy F. Batchelder.

A "runner" from Nashua, N. H., exhibited a lot of silk worms at several of our stores the other day. It was quite a sight to see the little fellows devouring Osage orange leaves and spinning their little threads, out of which is manufactured the gaudy silks that adorn the persons of nearly every lady in the land. The little balls of thread made by these spinners are of so fine a texture that the naked eye can scarcely discern them.

Mr. J. F. Pickering has been exhibiting the Jumbo squash which was raised by Mr. Thomas C. Durkee of West Peabody. It is so large that a small sized family could feast for a whole season off it. It weighed nearly sixty pounds. Lettuce see the man who can turnip one that will beet it. Our agricultural editor is off, and so our "boy" wrote this item to let him know that he knew all about farming.

Charles E. Teague has a good line of boots, shoes and rubbers, and will make special efforts this season to please all the trade. Teague's goods are always reliable. He keeps the celebrated Ipswich shoe for gentlemen, than which there is nothing better in the market, and in Ladies' and Misses' goods he can show a desirable assortment of both medium and fine goods. Call and see him.

Henry Bushby, another of our venerable and well-known citizens, passed away very suddenly yesterday. He has been troubled with asthma for a considerable time, and has been feeble for more than a year. Mr. Bushby was a farmer by occupation, and a sturdy and respected citizen. He leaves five sons, Horace, William, Nathan, Philip and Henry. His age was 78 years, 6 months, 22 days.

DROWNED IN BEER.
CONCERNING THIS POPULAR BEVERAGE TWO MEN EXPRESS THEIR MINDS.
"The fact is sir, and you may stick a pin there, that the people of this country are likely to be drowned in a flood of lager beer," shouted an enthusiastic teetotaler the other day into the ear of your cornered correspondent. That German drink has struck us hard. It is the second deluge."
"Yes, and the worst of this beer-drinking business is that it gets up kidney troubles, as a heavy wind raises the waves," added a city physician, who had a knowledge of the times and a tendency to metaphor. "The midnight 'schooner' leaves behind it a wake of furred tongues, headaches, torpid livers, nausea, and all that, and lays the foundation of Bright's Disease."
This melancholy fact accounts in part for the increasing sales of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER, which at once mitigates these symptoms. Price 25 cents. Ask your physician about it. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

Repairing a Time Piece.

'Here is your watch,' said the jeweller, as he tore off a small white tag from the ring of a well-worn silver watch and handed the time-piece to a New York Times reporter one day last week. 'If it breaks inside of a year you can bring it back and I will fix it for nothing. I don't think it will trouble you, though, for it was very thoroughly repaired by one of our best workmen.' 'I hope not,' replied the reporter, as he paid the jeweler $3 and left the store with the watch ticking loudly in his pocket. For nearly a week the watch was a model of regularity, recording time, even to the minute, with the great, yellow-faced clock in the City Hall tower. One morning, however, when it was drawn from under his pillow, the reporter discovered to his dismay that the hands were pointing to the hour of two o'clock. It couldn't be afternoon so early in the day. He rubbed his eyes and looked at the dial again.—Surely there must be some mistake about it. He examined the hands They were stationary. He placed it to his ear. It was as silent as a clam. The watch had stopped inside of a week, and in spite of the $3 charge and the year's guarantee. He shook it. A few feeble ticks responded to the jar. The stubby second hand moved slowly about one-quarter around its short circuit and then stopped as before. He pounded it on the bed and made some uncomplimentary remarks about the watch maker. This evoked another semi-revolution, which was again succeeded by the same silence.

After breakfast the unfortunate owner stepped into the nearest watch maker's, a 7x9 shop in upper Broadway, and asked the proprietor what was the matter with the watch. The jeweller took the time-piece, pried open the inside cover with a small can opener, and peered into the works. After a cursory examination he handed it back to the owner. 'It needs cleaning,' he said.

'Cleaning?' ejaculated the reporter, in astonishment; 'why, I paid $3 only last week for having it thoroughly cleaned.'

'I can't help that,' replied the jeweller; 'you were very foolish to take such a watch to a second-class workman. The reason it don't run is because it's dirty. The pinions are covered with dust and the oil is all gum. Leave it here and I will fix it for you in good shape. Call again on Saturday, and it will be ready. It will only cost you $2.50, and you will then have a watch you can be proud of.'

Thoroughly disgusted with the watch and the man who had warranted it, the reporter declined the offer, pocketed his time-piece, and left the shop. A few doors below, on the same thoroughfare, a brazen watch with a pair of black hands pointing fixedly to 12.20 swings from a rusty iron bar. The reporter passed under this sign and entered another jewelry store. A fleshy person who was seated at a work-bench facing the window reached for the watch and proceeded to open it as one would open an oyster. Placing an eyeglass which resembled a very short telescope to his eye, he critically examined the movements. After taking observations from every position a watch can be held in, he ventured an opinion that the jewel which covers the escapement pinion was broken. 'Yes,' said he, after sundry punches in the vital regions of the works with a small steel instrument, such as dentists use, 'the jewel is broken. Any man can see that with half an eye. I wonder the watch ran at all. Have you dropped it anywhere? No. Well, that's strange. I can't be mistaken. The jewel is certainly broken. Leave it with me and I will put in a new one. It will cost you only $5, and call around some day next week. What name, please?' The name was not given and the watch was returned.

In the block below a tall street clock indicates the presence of another jewelry establishment, while large show-cases filled with costly trinkets and a brilliant assortment of diamonds and watches in the front windows attested its claim as a fashionable emporium. The reporter went in there. A languid young man, with a drooping mustache the color of barley straw, took the watch, and after working his way into the movement, placed a small lorgnette to his eye and glanced over the assortment of wheels and pinions and springs which were so numerously and diversely disordered. He remarked: 'Your watch is very badly out of repair. The escapement does not seem to be doing its work. The hair-spring is too long. It has too much play. I will cut it off and shorten it.' Here he reached for a small instrument to sever the spring, but the reporter interposed. 'No,' he exclaimed, as he rescued the time-piece: 'don't cut the spring. I guess that is not what ails the thing for I paid $3 for having it repaired and cleaned only last week, and it ran very nicely until this morning, when it stopped.'

'Oh, yes,' interrupted the young man, 'I see; you dropped it and the spring was spread out by the jar. I will undertake to repair it thoroughly for $4, so that you can rely on it. I will give you a guarantee, and if it breaks—'

The reporter did not remain to hear the rest of the sentence. The watch had all the guarantees it could stand. He had heard by this time so many different opinions upon the condition of the watch that he was determined to learn, if possible, what did ail it. A few blocks down the street another jeweller was found. After several shakes he applied the watch to his left ear and listened attentively. 'I think,' said he, with a shade of doubt in his voice, 'that the main-spring is broken.' He then opened the inside case and scrutinized the works carefully. 'Yes,' he continued, 'the main-spring is evidently broken. You must have been very careless with the watch, and let it fall. No? Well, you have wound it up too tight; that often is as bad as a fall; I will put you in a new one for $2.' The offer was not accepted, and the reporter walked out of the shop with his dilapidated chronometer in his pocket, to the great disgust of the jeweller. At the next store a small nervous man was examining a double row of fly-specked watches, suspended from a small iron rack in the window, and baking in the sun which filtered through the dusty window panes. He took the time-piece, and, reaching into a drawer, pulled out a white tag and proceeded to tie it to the ring. 'What name?' he asked. 'No name,' replied the owner; 'please tell me what is the matter with the watch?' With an air of annoyance the nervous man exposed the works, and probed around the balance wheel with what appeared to the owner to be almost wilful malice. 'One of the pinions is bent, the escapement is out of balance, and it needs cleaning; $3; call next Saturday.' The owner protested, and the watch was returned.

Having had sufficient experience in Broadway he now visited the Bowery. A large gilt sign over a wide doorway, and several suspended clocks and watches, also in gilt, betokened a 'jewelry palace,' and into it the reporter walked. 'What is the matter with this watch?' he asked. The proprietor, an elderly man, took the time-piece, shook it, listened, opened it, gazed into it and shook his head. 'Hiram,' he called to a curly headed young man, who

SAINTS AND SINNERS STIRRED BY A CLERGYMAN'S CONFESSION—THE FACTS IN FULL.

Eloquent writing, merely, convinces nobody. General statements and assertions are cheap. Plain words are best, and come most easily from the mouth of a witness who is conscious that he speaks truth. Let the reader judge if the following have the ring of genuine coin:

"I have long been afflicted with rheumatism, a badly disordered liver and by general debility. All my strength seemed gone. I tried a number of other medicines without obtaining relief, but I do hereby testify to the great merits of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, since after the use of two bottles I find myself feeling well and strong again—in fact like a new man. I cheerfully recommend it as an excellent strengthening and invigorating Tonic."

Names and dates are of supreme importance. Testimonies are readily manufactured, but the foregoing is from a letter dated St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 30, 1882, and signed by Rev. Edward Wills, founder of and ex-pastor of the University Street Baptist Church Residence, No. 313 Spruce, that city. From the very fact of their responsible and prominent position, ministers of the Gospel are cautious about giving their signatures or influence to any proprietary medicine or advertised article. Hence the value of unsolicited testimonials like the foregoing.

Please note: First.—PARKER'S GINGER TONIC is not an essense of Ginger. Don't indulge that idea nor permit others to impress it upon you. It combines the choicest Jamaica Ginger with other ingredients—constituting the best Tonic known in medicine; Second.—It is pleasant to take and immediate in its action. Prices, 50c. and $1—the latter the more economical. Get it of your druggist, or send for circular to HISCOX & Co., New York.

WHAT MRS. BRUCE

OF 25 GRANT ST., SPRINGFIELD, MASS., SAYS ABOUT HER HUSBAND'S SICKNESS, AND WHAT FINALLY PROVED A REAL BOON TO HIM — WORDS OF AN AFFECTIONATE, GOOD WOMAN.

Mrs. Bruce says: "My husband is an employe in the United States Armory in Springfield. He has for years been a terrible sufferer from bilious sick headaches. He has fearful attacks of this kind. Sometimes they will come on him every week or so. He has never found any medicine which would give him any permanent relief or prove any preventive against these severe attacks until he tried Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. He has received the greatest benefit from its use." The testimony of Mrs. Bruce is like that of hundreds of others, who say: "I procured a bottle of Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY, and used it with the best of results. I have no more headache or pain in the side. Indeed, the medicine seems to have an almost magical effect, and I feel very grateful for FAVORITE REMEDY. Dr. Kennedy is glad to recommend his medicine to all who are suffering from sick headaches resulting from any of the above causes, for it is a sure, positive cure.

TO KEEP THE BLOOD PURE

is the principal end of inventions and discoveries in medicine. To this object probably no one has contributed more signally than Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y. in the production of a medicine which has become famous under the title of the FAVORITE REMEDY. It removes all impurities of the Blood, regulates the disordered Liver and Kidneys, cures Constipation, Dyspepsia and all diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females. Sold by your druggist, $1.00 a bottle.

was working in the rear end of the store, cleaning jewelry with a long brush and some white powder. The young man stepped to the counter. 'Vat ish de madder mit dat vatch?' asked the proprietor. Hiram looked at the watch very much as one would regard a sore thumb, and shook his head without replying.

'Moses,' said he, 'you dell de shentleman vat ish de madder mit his vatch.' Moses looked at the poor, miserable time-keeper with even more solemnity than his brother, and after sundry lugubrious shakes of his head, responded: 'De cap chewel ish owet of blace. It vash growded back of de esgapement. If you dry to make it run mitowet gitting it rebaired you will ruin your vatch. I never saw a vatch as bad as dat. It vill only gost you $5.'

'I can't leave it to-day,' responded the reporter.

'I will gif you a fine job for $4, for $3, for $2, for a dollar and a halluf; and vould'nt do it von cent sheaper for my grandfadder.'

But in spite of the liberality of the offer the reporter pocketed his watch and pursued his search for information. Many other stores were visited and many more jewellers were interviewed. There were seventeen visited in all. Three attributed the stoppage to a broken main-spring, five said it was caused by dirt, three thought that broken jewels made the trouble, two diagnosed it as a case of bent pinons, and the remainder were divided in their opinions, varying from a disordered escapement to to a broken tooth in a cog wheel. Finally tired of watches and watchmakers the reporter carried it to the jeweller who had originally repaired it. 'There,' said he, as he laid the time-piece on the velvet counter mat 'take this miserable, ailing watch. You may keep it or give it away, just as you please. It hasn't a whole wheel in it. The main-spring is broken, the escapement is out of sorts, it wasn't half cleaned, and it is entirely ruined. It will cost me a small fortune to have it repaired. I don't want it any more. It makes me tired to see it around. I'll buy a new dollar-and-a-half watch that I can take some comfort in.'

The jeweller took the time-piece and retired into the workshop. In a few minutes he returned with a broad smile on his face.

'Here it is in perfect order. There is nothing the matter with it. You forgot to wind it up last night.'

One of the most conspicuous stores that attracts the attention of a stranger passing along Market street, Lynn, is that of W. B. GIFFORD & Co. The magnificent frontage of the building, unlike any other on the street, is of glass in both stores, and affords splendid opportunities for the display of goods. There is a spacious entrance, and the different departments are along the sides and in the center of the store.—The lower floor contains all the appointments of a first class dry goods store, and the second is used to display their elegant stock of carpets, upholstery goods and paper hangings. In the evening the whole is illuminated by the electric light, making the store light as day at all times.

Passing within the doors the counters directly opposite in the center contain the hose department, where every desirable kind and quantity of this article of feminine pride can be found.—We will not attempt to give the prices quoted on these goods, but there were woolen hose for 25 cents and black cotton hose for the same price, besides ladies' "outsize" in all colors and at low prices. Passing to the counter adjoining, on the left are the dress trimmings, passamentarie, braided and plain, ornaments, and numerous other things known to the ladies. Adjoining this is the ladies' cotton underwear counter, on which are displayed in great profusion all kinds of underwear; also on this counter are offered laundered and unlaundered shirts for gents, and merino underwear for both sexes. On the opposite side, or next the wall, is the corset department, where is carried the largest line in the city. The firm make a specialty of the "Satin Regalia," and the P. D., a fine French article. Here, also, are kept handkerchiefs, silk and cotton, and kid gloves from 37 cents to $2.00 per pair. Bracelets, bar pins, jet and celluloid bracelets, and a general assortment of jewelry and fancy goods is offered here. On the same side, nearly opposite the underwear counter, are the knit worsted goods—such as ladies' jackets, leggins, children's hoods, mittens, carriage robes, etc. At this counter there is a tempting display of Spanish and Oriental laces, besides cheaper grades, among which were some choice novelties.—Next is the worsted counter, where all the delicate shades for fancy work are in large quantities—Berlin, Germantown, Welch's fingering yards, flosses, embroidery silks, canvasses, etc.

The ribbon department, containing satin and grosgrain ribbons of all widths, comprises the next counter, followed by the millinery counter, and everything new in that line is displayed.—To-day and to-morrow there will be a grand opening of pattern bonnets and hats. This brings us to the rear of the store, where is located the private office, and also a cashier in an elevated position, the elevated railroad cash system being in operation here. The cloak and dressmaking department is also located here, and there was a fine display of ladies' outside garments, which space forbids our describing, but there they were, with sizes from the smallest to the largest, including seal and plush sacks and dolmans, cashmere shawls in bright colors, etc.

The silk department is the first on the other side as you turn towards the entrance. In this department will be found a superb stock of brocades, velvets in all shades, plushes, etc. A fine article at $1.00 and $1.25 a yard was offered. They make a specialty of "Saccarappa" black silk, which is warranted not to crack or shift. With these goods a written guarantee is given. Next come the black cashmeres, ottoman dress goods, foulles, Henrietta cloths, colored dress goods. On this counter is a line of all wool flannels 40 inches wide at 37 1-2 cents. Also 50 inch all wool colored cashmere at 42, 50, 75 cts. and $1.00. There will be a great demand for plaids this fall, and the firm have a very large assortment. The next counter contains the prints, ginghams, felt skirts, etc., and near them will be found all the novelties in buttons, fancy designs, choice dress and cloak, French metal pearl, cut and plain buttons, etc.

Next comes the domestic department which is on the right of the entrance, and occupies a large corner of the store. This department contains bleached and unbleached cotton cloth, damask towels, turkey red damask by the yard, napkins, quilts, turkish towels and sheetings. As a special bargain they are selling a 40-inch unbleached cotton cloth for 7 cents.

This completes the circuit of the lower floor, and passing up the stairs on the left it brings us to the carpet rooms where are shown a large line of Brussels, tapestry, extra super carpets, also mats, rugs, etc. Adjoining is the upholstery department, containing all goods usually kept by an upholsterer, and beyond this is shown an elegant line of wall papers and decorations. In the whole there is absolutely nothing which one could suggest as an improvement, and customers who visit the store will receive polite and courteous treatment.

"Don't play with the devil when you're young, lest you have to work for him when you're old." This is excellent advice and applies to other subjects besides his Satanic Majesty. Don't trifle with Catarrh by using nasal injections and irritants. They only aggravate the disease. They can never cure it. Use Ely's Cream Balm. It is not a liquid or snuff, and is easily applied. A child can use it without harm, and its effects are speedy and thorough. "I suffered for years with chronic catarrh," writes S. M. Greene, Book-keeper, office N. Y. Catskill & Athens Steamboat Co., Catskill, N. Y. "I was induced to try Ely's Cream Balm, and relief was instantaneous." This exquisite remedy never disappoints. Mail it for 50 cents, (stamps taken). The Flying Yankee train, between Portland, Me., and St. John, N. B., will be discontinued after October 14, but between Portland and Boston it will be retained during the winter season. The time of leaving Portland will be changed to six o'clock, so that passengers will arrive in Boston a half-hour earlier than at present.

FIRE DEPARTMENT NOTES.

Arthur Reed, formerly a member of the Hook and Ladder, arrived home from the West last week, after an absence of about a year.

The welcome rain of Sunday served as an extinguisher of the wood fires, and was gratefully received by the dry earth.

Hose 4 gave a complimentary supper to the ladies that are to help them at their fair, at their hose house last Friday evening.

Circulars have been received by all the companies, inviting them to send delegates to the annual Convention of the Massachusetts State Firemen's Association. The exercises will consist of discussions of subjects of interest to firemen, exhibitions of apparatus, etc. The convention will be held in New Bedford, and arrangements have been made with the railroads for a great reduction in fares. The headquarters of the Association are at the Parker House.

Swampscott tested her new steam fire engine last Wednesday afternoon in the presence of a large crowd of the citizens and firemen from all the neighboring cities and towns. The engine is a fourth class Silsbee machine and is a handsome piece of apparatus, being all nickle plated and highly polished, the only woodwork about the machine being the wheels. Its weight was about 5000 lbs., and is made to be drawn by horses or by hand. The test, which we give below, was very satisfactory to all. The time of lighting the fire was 2.02 P. M., and she showed her first steam, 5 lbs. in 4 minutes, 10 lbs. in 5 minutes, 20 lbs. in 6 minutes, 30 lbs. in 7 minutes, and started, showing water at the pipe in 7 1-4 minutes, and in 12 minutes the guages indicated 60 lbs. steam, 100 lbs. water pressure; 120 lbs. steam, 180 lbs. water pressure, in 13 1-2 minutes. The first stream was from a line of 100 feet, 1 inch nozzle, 207 feet; 2 lines, 100 feet each, 1 inch nozzle, 159 feet, 9 inches; 2 lines of 50 feet each, siamesed to pipe, 1 1-8 inch nozzle, 256 feet 6 inches; 4 lines of 50 feet siamesed from 2 of 50 feet, with 3-4 inch nozzle, 144 feet; 1 line of 1200 feet, 1 inch nozzle, horizontal 195 feet, first measure, 205 feet, second measure, perpendicular 110 feet; 1 line of 2000 feet, 1 inch nozzle, 75 feet, perpendicular. The engine is named Swampscott, No. 1, and has the makers' number, 749. The machine was run by men from the works of the Silsbee company at Seneca Falls, N. Y. We met with a number of the Reading firemen and they all liked their own new Button machine better than they did the Silsbee. The Reading boys are going to take their machine to the muster in Haverhill this week. We also met firemen from Lynn, Salem, Marblehead, Watertown, Woburn, Wakefield and Somerville. Swampscott has got a good steamer but they have no water to supply one with, and are about as bad off as they were before.

Hose 4 are talking of getting a new set of badges.

All the silver trumpets in the department were loaned to the Beverly department for their parade.

Wouldn't it be a good idea to have the signs on the engine house put into the positions where they belong instead of having the H. & L. sign over the Hose door and Hose over the Steamer door, as they are now.

A fire was discovered in one of the rooms at the Parker House Monday night, but was put out without an alarm.

Chief Littlefield, Supt. Besse and Mr. S. A. Southwick went to Reading Monday afternoon to look at a pair of horses for the use of the department.

Quite a number of the boys went to Beverly to take in the parade of the Beverly fire department yesterday.

Steamer 2 is on duty for the next two months, and steamer one is on relief.

One of the members of Steamer 1, of Andover, visited the brick house last Tuesday and was much pleased with the arrangements there. ZERO.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Rev. Mr. Smith of the Methodist Church, last Sabbath preached the first of two or more sermons to be given by him on the "state of the dead between the grave and the judgment." He took for his text, Job 14:10. "But man dieth and wasteth away; yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?" The preacher said this question was not asked of the body. It was deeper than that. There was another thought—that of a spirit essence which lives after the body dies. The question was of the spirit's whereabouts after death. Here if light is sought from nature she is silent. Reason cowers in the presence of this thought. There is no light from reason until she herself is illuminated. Plato has said that to know any thing of the future world some one must return. No one has returned. The moon shines with a borrowed light. So reason must be illumined. We turn to God's word, and interrogate the Bible from which we make response come satisfactory and comforting to the heart. We meet at the outset with the objection from those who are Christians, but who doubt the fact of the existence of a spirit having an existence separate from the body, and who quote from the Bible in support of such belief. What do the original words which are translated spirit, soul, mean? It is claimed by those who deny the spirits entity that they mean life, breath, and do not refer to the spirit. The passage much quoted is where God breathed into man's body "the breath of life." Now the original Greek word is plural and should be properly rendered "breath of lives." There are other passages where this word occurs in which it must refer to the spirit principle. "God is a spirit." Here it must refer to God. If there are passages in the Bible in which these words occur which are translated soul and spirit, and which must refer to an existence separate from the body, the controversy is ended on the part of the Bible. The preacher quoted a few passages, Matthew 10:28, he said would be sufficient to establish his point, if every other one were blotted out: "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul." There is no possibility of rendering this other than it stands. Man can kill life and that kills the body. If that word means life the whole man is gone. It is the soul that cannot be killed. It is impossible to escape the sequence of two separate lives. With this light we can understand better the saying of Christ. "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death," and that other one, "Into thy hands I commit my spirit." We see how God is a spirit, and can witness with our spirit—not breath or life—that we are children of God. If there is a separate existence of the spirit all is clear. The entire church has adopted the view of the Bible. All agree that when man dies he passes into the Empire of death. The body is placed in the tomb. But the Apostle says there is a time of triumph, "Christ must reign until he has put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy to be destroyed is death." Christ must reign until death is destroyed. Man must come forth from the grave—all must come—if there is one left death is not destroyed. In the resurrection "when this corruptible has put on incorruptible * * * then is brought to pass 'Death is swallowed up in victory.'" This takes effect not alone on the body, but the soul. Personality is not made up of the body alone, but the soul. They must be united to make the person. The person is to be judged; before that takes place he must come forth from the grave and be united with the soul. When the body dies, the soul may live, but in an unnatural state. The two completed make one person. Hence the Apostles represent the children of God in a condition of waiting,—waiting for the adoption at the resurrection. It will come at that time,—not before. We must go into the grave and come up in the resurrection, must be made like the Son and our triumph completed in a public recognition. There is a crown laid up at that day—not before. Paul said there was a crown laid up for him, not at death, but at last. Our departed friends are not crowned. Like the building of the temple the stones are taken over, all polished, waiting for the last stone. So they are waiting our coming.

Now let it be granted that the soul of the righteous goes to heaven directly, and that of the wicked to hell. What is to be done with the other doctrine of the judgment? Take this for granted, and what argument or common sense is there in calling for a judgment at the last day? It is not the method of law. If the soul is ready to go to heaven, why the resurrection? The preacher quoted from Chrysostom, and Tertullian claiming the importance of this doctrine. The soul is not fitted for the resurrection and judgment in solitude. The soul and body are in an intermediate condition; the place and character are intermediate. It is an interesting theme — that of eternity, whither we go. When we turn to anything else than the Bible there is nothing to be found. The preacher closed here, stating that he would take up the subject next Sabbath, when he would try to answer the question as to the state of the dead before the resurrection.

WEST PEABODY.

A good story is told about a young Englishman who was visiting here last summer. He had just come over from the old country and wasn't well posted in American ways. One day while strolling about the woods near the street he saw a common barn-yard fowl a short distance from him and pulling out his revolver he shot the chicken and brought it home with him. He said he thought he had captured an American prairie chicken, that he had heard about at home.

About half past eight o'clock this morning officer Crowley of Danvers arrested Lawrence Corniff at Middleton for breaking and entering the Asylum station last evening. Corniff had been in the employ of the late E. Wyatt, of Danvers, and some three weeks ago Wyatt's house was broken into. Suspicions were at once fastened upon Corniff and officers have been looking for him, without success, until this morning. He was spotted by a man who knew him and officer Crowley put on his track.

Last Thursday afternoon fires were set on the land of W. P. Upham, D. W. King and B. Taylor adjoining each other, and made rapid headway. The heavy woods in Mr. King's land afforded ample fuel for the flames, and although the neighbors rallied the fire raged all day Friday and Saturday. Another fire was set on the land of Joseph Henderson. The selectmen on Saturday offered a reward of $200 for the detection of the culprits.

The West Peabody Farmer's Club open the season next Friday. The subject for discussion is The interests of husbandry demand a more rigid economy in the state government. A weighty subject.

G. A. Viles while trying to fight the flames on the land of W. P. Upham, fell over a rock, striking his knee, and injuring himself quite severely.

WHAT OUR BOY SAYS.

That he took his girl to the theatre.

That during the first act as he was about to excuse himself, she passed him the glasses with, "you can see a man without going out."

That he is not very successful in his visits to his new girl.

That the following lines express his feelings:

"I sipped the nectar from her lips,
I sipped and hovered o'er her;
Her father's hoofs flashed on the steps,
I'm wiser now, but sorer."

That plug hats cause baldness.

That the drivers of J. B. Thomas' ice teams must have their hair worn pretty close.

That the "dudine" cut hair has struck us.

That the bangs were silly enough the Lord knows.

That this is the "most unkindest cut all."

That certain young men wear an eye glass for the looks of the thing.

That they may as well walk lame for the same purpose.

That it isn't safe to tell a phone a secret.

The passengers on a car from Salem last Thursday were entertained by a couple of drunken fellows who sat opposite each other at the door.

That they furnished as much amusement and resembled the two beats in "Kit."

That he has been told you can't add different things together.

That if you add a sheep and a cow together it does not make two sheep nor two cows.

That that may do with sheep and cows, but if you add a quart of water to a quart of milk you get two quarts of milk.

That no Democratic speeches are being published.

That perhaps they are ashamed of them.

That the higher Democrats raise their hopes, the higher they will fall next month. Be careful.

That there is no royalty for telling the truth in this town.

That this may be news to some.

That Editor Litchman wanted the Boston Journal to say that he didn't ask for two days in a week to edit his paper.

That fellows, such as he, seem to think people won't believe what they have to say unless it is backed by a Republican paper.

That the name of Goldthwaite's brook should be changed to Comparison.

That comparisons are "oderous."

The rally and flag raising of the Republicans is announced in another column. Let all Republicans turn out and make it a success. Hon. Geo. G. Crocker and Benjamin Pitman, Esq., will address the meeting. The Salem Brass Band will be in attendance.

Mr. Michael Cody for over a quarter of a century flag-man and switch-tender at the Central street crossing, took a vacation last Wednesday and Thursday, the first since he has been there. He has been a faithful man for the company and should be retired on a pension.

The Boston Advertiser says: Albert A. Messer and Jacob Osborne, comprising the firm of A. A. Messer & Co., dealers in leather at 152 Summer street, have filed a petition in insolvency against the firm of Macomber & Greenwood, leather dealers who failed some weeks ago.

Nice line of Millinery at very low prices, at Sawyer's, 48 Main St. tf

A little girl from Washington, visiting in town, ate for the first time a fish chowder at the Willows, and a few days later, when riding through Federal street, where the odor of the North river always abounds, she turned to her little sister and said, "Ethel, I 'mell fish chowder."

One who has noticed things for many, many years, tells us that the great number of spiders to be seen on the grass and shrubbery, is a sure indication that the coming winter will be extremely cold. If the sign is good, might as well be getting ready for the long Polar wave.

It is a matter of record that Goulding has as good a line of oil cloths, matting, furniture, mattresses and upholstery goods as can be found in this vicinity. And what is more his prices are always right. Don't forget him. He will use you well, and make you want to trade with him again.

For the benefit of a lot who go gunning at Ipswich Neck we publish the following item from the Chronicle. It is remarkable shooting.

"On Monday of this week, E. C. Greenwood killed at one discharge of his fowling-piece, twenty-eight golden plover; with the discharge of the second barrel three more were shot down and later in the day six more were bagged, making a total of thirty-seven. Not a bad day's work."

(From the Fireside Favorite.)

October Days.

BY LYDIA DAVIS THOMSON.

A peace all underlined reigns everywhere,
Until it seems as if an angel band
Had left awhile the realms of upper air,
And brought with them from out the unseen land
An influence sweet to leave around, o'er all,
While grasses fade and crimson leaflets fall.

Now o'er the hilltops hangs a purple mist,
The blue beyond with yellow haze is fringed;
Vermilion, brown and gold and amethyst
With one accord all things below have tinged,
While Autumn dreamily walks abroad the land
And leaves his trophies, rich, on every hand.

The "Jacob's-ladder" bends beneath its weight
Of scarlet berries on their winding stems,
That in the swaying breeze seem all elate
And in the sunlight flash like ruby gems:
While blends the aster's deep and darker hue
With the frail gentian's fair, ethereal blue.

And Nature's sounds are one grand harvest song—
The soft, silk rustle of the faded leaves,
The reaper's tuneless whistle all day long
As he, half-dreaming, binds the fallen sheaves,
The twinkling brooks hid in the woodland dells,
That music make like chime of silvery bells;

The frisking squirrel's cheerful chipity-chip,
As oft the sound of dropping nuts is heard;
And o'er the crackling brush his skipity-skip
Frightening, perchance, some brooding partridge-bird,
And, as an interlude the bee's long drone
And the cicada's dreamful monotone.

What is there in the cricket's mournful tone
That brings such sad, sweet thoughts of "other days?"
And makes us feel that we are all alone,
As we in fancy roam those "shaded ways,"
To which, long since, we've bade a fond farewell,
Yet love on the with lingering tear to dwell—

Would earth might keep October's quiet days!
We'd hold them sacred as some friendship rare,
And rest content beneath their mellow haze
Nor dream again of other lands more fair;
But vain our wish to keep them tarrying here,
While slowly, sweetly fades the dying year.

In the Trustees' Room at the Peabody Institute in this Town, hang two paintings, one a portrait of President Harrison, the other a portrait of Gen. Gideon Foster. The Librarian is desirous of obtaining information in regard to these portraits in addition to his present knowledge thereof. The records of the "Danvers Mechanic Institute" show that this association paid twenty dollars to balance the bill of the painter, and later, that they voted to give the portrait to the town, on condition that it be framed and placed in a conspicuous place in the Town Hall in the South Parish. It is desirable to know whether the town accepted this offer and if so, when and how it came where it is; also for whom and when the portrait of Gen. Harrison was painted, and how that came where it is.

It is understood that the Republican members of the Club will put out a Robinson flag next week.

Poet's Corner.

Trust.

BY THE DEAN OF CANTERBURY.

I know not if dark or bright
Shall be my lot;
If that wherein my hopes delight
Be best or not.

It may be mine to drag for years,
Toil s heavy chain,
Or day and night my meat be tears
On bed of pain.

Dear faces may surround my hearth,
With smiles and glee,
Or I may dwell alone, and mirth
Be strange to me.

My bark is wafted to the strand
By breath divine;
And on the helm there rests a hand
Other than mine.

One who has known in storm to sail
I have on board;
Above the raging of the gale
I hear my Lord.

He holds me when the billows smite,
I shall not fall;
If sharp, 'tis short; if long, 'tis light—
He tempers all

Safe to the land—safe to the land—
The end is this;
And then with Him go hand and hand
Far into bliss.

No, It Is Not Possible.

ANSWER TO IS IT POSSIBLE.

No landlord's art can ever place
In rooms that number only nine,
Ten men and give each man a room,
Not while the sun and moon do shine.

No not until the day shall come,
When two times two are only one,
And three and four do make but five,
Can anything like this be done?

A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I

Now count them for yourselves and see;
Two men in A and one in B,
Thus did that cunning landlord plan,
And one in C and one in D,
While E and F held each a man.

Seven men are here, in rooms but six,
Three men must go to G, H, I,
For all that crafty landlord's skill,
Cannot another room supply.

But stop and think, where are the men;
The first two men, he placed in A.
In A, of course they do remain
For aught I know unto this day.

Now, dear young friends, just heed these words;
If you believe whate'er folks say,
Nor, sometimes, think for your own selves
You may be led afar astray.

EMILY PEARSON BAILEY.

The Church of the World.

BY RICHARD M. MILNES (LORD HOUGHTON.)

I stood one Sunday morning
Before a large church door;
The congregation gathered,
And carriages a score.
From one outstepped a lady,
I oft had seen before.

Her hand was on a prayer-book,
And held a vinaigrette;
The sign of man's redemption
Clear on the book was set,
Above the cross there glistened
A golden coronet.

For her the obsequious beadle
The inner door flung wide.
Lightly, as up a ball-room,
Her footsteps seemed to glide;
There might be good thoughts in her,
For all her evil pride.

But after her a woman
Peeped wistfully within
On whose wan face was graven
Life's hardest discipline,
The trace of the sad trinity,
Of weakness, pain and sin.

The few free-seats were crowded
Where she could rest and pray,
With her worn garb contrasted
Each side in fair array.
"God's house holds no poor sinners."
She sighed, and walked away.

Old Heathendom's vast temples
Hold men of every state;
The steps of far Benares
Commingle small and great;
The dome of Saint Sophia
Confounds all human state.

The aisles of blessed Peter
Are open all the year;
Throughout wide Christian Europe
The Christian's right is clear
To use God's house in freedom,
Each man the other's peer.

Save only in that England
Where this disgrace I saw—
England, where no one crouches
In Tyranny's base awe—
England, where all are equal
Beneath the eye of Law.

Yet there, too, each cathedral
Contrasts its ample room;
No weary beggar resting
Within the holy gloom;
No earnest student musing
Beside the famous tomb.

Who shall remove this evil
That desecrates our age—
A scandal great as ever
Iconoclastic rage?
Who to this Christian people
Restore their heritage?

Selected Story.

The Modern Ruth.

Dr. Alex. Andover threw himself into the big leather-covered chair before his office-fire with a weary sigh. He was a fine-looking man of thirty; not handsome, but noble and manly-looking—one to be trusted forever, with his broad, white brow, and grave, clear, gray eyes. His lips, too, under the full brown beard were as fine as a woman's, without lacking in strength and firmness.

Dr. Andover's patients—especially the poorer class and the children—turned to him instinctively for advice and sympathy. His was one of those grand, kingly natures which seem made for leaders and comforters. Poor old Betty Cary, a bed-ridden paralytic, could not speak of him without shedding tears of gratitude. Little Jane Ellis, suffering with an incurable hip-disease, looked upon him as a sort of god upon earth. There were a score more who thought of him not only as their physician, but as a kind and generous friend, who delighted to brighten the lives which would otherwise be poor and barren enough.

But fate had lately frowned upon him. In the first place, the bank in which the greater part of his snug little fortune was deposited had failed; and directly upon this came the news that some mining-stock in which he had invested was worthless, or nearly so. The doctor did not fear poverty himself—his practice brought him a comfortable income, for the rich appreciated him as well as the poor; but miles away in a distant city there was a lovely girl whom he had hoped to call wife by Christmas-time.

A girl who, though not wealthy herself, had been extravagantly educated by her uncle, in whose luxurious home she lived. He knew that not the slightest privation had ever come to her; she was a petted darling, with hands like a baby's. He had never questioned if she knew anything about work—the idea in connection with Maud Eveleth was absurd. He had been able to take her to a home as fine as the one she would leave, but that was gone now. Lovely, dainty, useless as she seemed Dr. Andover had poured the whole passion of his great heart out upon her; and you are not to think him weak, because just at first when the news of his ill-fortune came to him, he shrank and trembled under it, thinking of the girl he loved.

For he must give her up; there was no doubt in his mind about that. He could not ask her to share the fate of a poor physician, who depended upon his fees for a living.

He even smiled grimly in the midst of his suffering at the thought of Maud in a calico dress, mixing up bread or washing dishes with her white, slender fingers, which he had only seen toying with her fan, working at embroidery, or dashing over the keys of a piano-forte.

So Dr. Andover had written her a brave farewell-letter just a month before the time set for their wedding, informing her of his altered fortunes and releasing her from her engagement to him, and he had received no answer, although it was now Christmas-week.

The doctor was worn out with exposure to rough weather and many sleepless nights. The demands upon his time and strength had been greater than usual, yet he had replied to them all, never failing in kindly courtesy beside the couch of Betty Cary any more than in the luxurious chamber of Madam Golddust, who fed him so generously.

It was Christmas-week, and Maud was to have been his own next Friday night.

This thought tortured him unceasingly, together with some words in a letter which had reached him a few days before; a letter from an acquaintance who was visiting in the city where Maud lived.

'I met your 'fiancee' at a party last evening,' he had written. 'I admire your choice. She was the brightest, loveliest there, and the most graceful dancer.'

Dr. Andover experienced a cruel sense of desolation, as he turned that sentence over and over in his mind. Maud had not loved him after all. She could be gay and bright when they were forever separated!

The office-fire smouldered to ashes, and still he sat there, still and sad, until from sheer exhaustion, he fell into an uneasy slumber. About midnight he awoke alternately burning and shivering, while a dull pain throbbed in his temples.

The doctor's apartments were commodious and comfortable. A large chamber opened from his private office, which latter opened from a large receiving-room.

He was his own patient now, so he hastened to bed; and when his landlady came in the morning to call him, she found him unable to rise from his pillow, feverish and half-delirious.

Christmas-morning came bright and frosty—a day after St. Nicholas' own heart, and the doctor, a trifle better, although weak and languid, opened his eyes to close them again immediately with a little pang. This was to have been his wedding-day! He could hear the merry salutations on the street, the clash of sleigh-bells, and the pealing organ from St. Paul's church over the way; and the sunlight and mirth and gladness made his own pain seem the keener—just for a moment, until his generous heart could gather strength to reassert itself and be glad because others were glad.

The landlady, who had been like a mother to him, came in presently with a very smiling expression upon her broad face.

Many of his grateful patients had remembered him with some little Christmas-token, and Mrs. Derby had placed them upon the stand at his bedside; but now she held in her hands a small package addressed to him in a familiar lady's hand and registered in a distant city.

Maud had returned the engagement ring. Dr. Andover received the package in silence, and Mrs. Derby looked at him with a crest-fallen expression.

'I thought you would be pleased, doctor. I've come to know Miss Everleth's handwriting, you see, and I supposed she had sent you a Christmas present. The package came two days ago when you was delirious and I signed the registry-card and made bold to send the lady a telegram notifying her of your illness. And, Dr. Andover, can you bear some pleasant news? I received a telegram in return stating that Miss Everleth would start at once to come to you. Now, that is the sort of girl to make a man a good wife. She will probably be here to-day.'

To-day! Doctor Andover listened to kind Mrs. Derby in bewilderment. What did it all mean?

With trembling fingers he tore off the wrapper of the tiny package, and opened a jeweler's case.

There upon its bed of purple lay a wide, gold finger-ring, extraordinarily wide, the inside of which was completely covered with fine lettering. And Dr. Andover read slowly through blind, rapturous tears, the words which the jeweler's instrument had traced there—the grand old Scriptural words which had arisen in the heart of the girl, who thus proved herself worthy of him, when his letter had come to her after many weary days of delay:

'Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest, I will go, and where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God; where thou diest I will die, and there will I be buried; the Lord do so to me and more also, if aught but death part me and thee.'

Mrs. Derby slipped out of the room, crying herself, at the sight of Dr. Andover, usually so calm, and strong, and self-possessed, crying like a two-year-old baby over Maud's Christmas-token.

It was nearly noon when Maud herself came. She had removed her wraps in Mrs. Derby's room, and after a light tap on the sick man's door, she entered.

Alex. Andover had thought her lovely in her exquisite party, and carriage, and home toilets; but never had she seemed so sweet and gracious and womanly as now, when in her plain, gray traveling costume, her lovely face, a little pale with weariness and excitement, her mouth tremulous, and her dark eyes glowing with a solemn light, she glided in her swift noiseless way across the room to his side.

'My darling! My own, sweet, true-hearted darling,' cried the doctor, clasping both arms about her and drawing her face down to his own.

And presently, after the first greeting was over, Maud explained:

'Your letter was delayed in some way. I did not get it until a week ago. You remember the great piece of gold which you sent me from California two years ago? Well, when I got your letter, I took that gold to a jeweler and had it made into a ring. And then after I received Mrs. Derby's telegram, I made uncle promise to bring me to you at once. I would have come alone if he had not come with me, horrible and unconventional as my fashionable friends would have called me. Why, Alex., what a silly butterfly you must have thought me! Do you think I would care for his ere without you? And do you think I am good for nothing but to dance the german and play the piano? I assure you, sir,' and here she doubled one small, white fist in a threatening manner under his very nose—'this hand which you consider so weak and useless, can make most delicious bread and pies and cakes; can even make beds and sweep and wash dishes. Aunt Alice never neglected the most important part of my education, and I am sure I shall make a most excellent wife for a poor man. That is, Alex.,'—and here she flushed up gloriously—'if you will have me.'

Dr. Andover smothered the last words against his shoulder, and as soon as she could free herself from his unceremonious embrace, she began anew to coax and wheedle him into some new plan of her own, to which he at first objected, but finally yielded; result was that at five o'clock that afternoon, Maud Everleth was made Dr. Alex. Andover's wife, and at once asserted her authority by taking upon herself the duties of a nurse.

Of course, under such treatment he recovered rapidly, and every day grew to appreciate more and more the loyalty and worth of the sweet little woman who had not failed in his dark hour.

WEST PEABODY.

The first regular meeting of the West Peabody Farmer's Club was held October 5th. Subject: The Interest of Husbandry Demands a more Rigid Economy in our State Government. Speaker, Rev. W. Spaulding. The speaker among other things said that the husbandman's property lay in sight and could not escape taxation, and therefore was over taxed, while the banker and tradesman were not taxed so much because they could hide their property and that the State does not manage its finances rightly for with a lower tax the farmers would be worth more. That the State Aid is squandered, being given to people who are undeserving of it. That State buildings are entirely too cos ly, being built without any regard to economy, whatever. Referring to Peabody's new Town Hall the speaker said it was a towering structure, reaching nearly to the sky and that its hall must be near heaven. That he could see no reason why the Danvers Asylum should be placed on such high ground for it must have cost a fortune to carry the stone and bricks up there to build it with. That of all of the different fools on the earth the speaker thought that those who believe in idot schools and that the earth was made in six ordinary days were the greatest fools he knew of, and he also thought that the Salem Normal School costs too much and simply educated girls for good housekeepers. That our convicts should support themselves with proper management. He also spoke in derision of the members of the House and Senate at their having their individual histories printed at the expense of the State. That Ex-Gov. Long had no right to have his portrait painted at the expense of the State nor to receive a ten dollar gold pencil from the same source, and the speaker said that he would not vote for the old man next fall if he could not buy his own pencils, and he declared our State government a fraud because it covers fraud. Mr. Spaulding said that it does not smirch the good name of the State to show up villianous actions, any more than it smirched the good name of Christ for him to denounce Judus as a traitor. That the husbandman who did not vote for the old man—referring to the Governor—this fall would make a great mistake. The subject will be continued next Friday evening, with J. Fred Ingraham as opening speaker.

An exchange says "an Evansville editor eats cloves when he becomes excited." Cloves is it? Some men eat roast coffee beans. It is presumed that cloves will disguise the cause of "excitement" fully as well.

Book Notices.

HEROES AND HEROINES OF THE BORDER.—In American history there are no more interesting figures than the Heroes and Heroines of the Border. Bold, dashing, adventurous and patriotic; loyal to friends, to country and to the interests of society, their work was singularly effective in the advancement of American civilization. Their page in history is as fascinating as it is honorable, and there is a peculiar pleasure in reading the narrative of their wonderful exploits. In American pioneer history there are three distinct eras marked as distinctly by three geographical divisions; from the Allegheny Mountains to the Mississippi, marking the first; from the Mississippi to the Rocky Mountains the second; California and the Pacific Slope the third. The settlement of these vast regions developed great leaders, whose achievements have made them justly and widely famous. It is appropriate that their achievements should be recorded, and we note with pleasure the forthcoming of a new book, now ready, from the press of N. D. Thompson & Co, Publishers, New York and St. Louis, Mo., called: Conquering the Wilderness, or New Pictorial History of the Life and Times of The Pioneer Heroes and Heroines of America. It is written by Col. Frank Triplett, an accomplished writer, whose literary qualifications and great experience on the frontiers are said to eminently fit him for so noble a task. A special feature of the book is its apt and profuse illustration, embracing 220 superb engravings, which make it a sort of picture gallery, as well as a book of thrilling narrative, that will lend to the book a charm and interest not to be resisted. It is sold by subscription, through canvassing agents, and presents an opportunity to agents to make money especially inviting. We advertise it in another column.

T. B. Peterson & Brothers, the Philadelphia Publishers, have in press, and will shortly publish the following bright and clever novels, "Two Kisses," a bright and snappy love story by Hawley Smart. "Erring, yet Noble," by Isaac G. Reed, Jr. "Hans Brietman's Ballads," a new and complete edition, by Chas. G. Leland. "The Wife of Monte-Cristo," being the continuation of Dumas masterpiece, "The Count of Monte-Cristo." "The Son of Monte-Cristo," being the sequel to "The Wife of Monte-Cristo." "The Confessions of an Abbe," by Louis Ulbach. "The Joys of Life." (La Joie de Vivne,) by Emile Zola. "Manon Lescant," by the Abbe Prevost, an Intense Love Story. "A Young Girl's Romance," a Captivating Love Story, by Ernest Daudet. "Genevieve's Victory," by Henry Greville. "The Woman in Silver," by Hector Malot. "The Lawrence Reciter," by Phillip Lawrence, Prof. of Elocution, Price, 50 cents. "Peterson's Coin Book," a Manual of the Coins of the World, a new Edition in Paper Covers. Large Folio, price, $1.00.

Always in the lead to cater to the wants of the reading public, T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, Pa. announce above a list of forthcoming books that will be sure to suit all tastes, comprising as they do the choice books by some of the best American and Foreign writers. Booksellers are solicited to send in their orders for these New Books without delay, so they can be filled in rotation. Special rates to liberal buyers ordering in advance. Their new catalogue will be sent to any address if written for. Address all Orders and Communications to T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, Pa., Publishers and Booksellers.

The October MAGAZINE OF AMERICAN HISTORY appears as usual promptly on the first day of the month. It opens with a portrait of Sir Henry Clinton, suggestive of the Private Intelligence furnished that notable, by Americans, at Washington's elbow in the dark days of the Revolution, now for the first time made public. These thrilling records are contributed by Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet. The opening article of the magazine, superbly illustrated from original pencil sketches, by its author Edward Brohead, is a "Picturesque Corner of Three States—a chapter of Indian History and Tradition." Joel Benton follows with "The Webster Spelling-Book, It's Centennial Anniversary," and Hon. Horatio King describes an antique publication, called "The Yankee," established in the "town of Boston" about 1811. The Notes, Queries, Replies and Book Notices are crowded with beguiling information on many historical subjects. Publication office, 30 Lafayette Place; New York.

WAVERLY. T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, publish this day, "Waverley," being the fourth volume of their new and cheap edition of "The Waverley Novels," by Sir Walter Scott, which will be completed in Twenty-six Weekly Volumes, each volume being a novel complete in itself, and one volume will be issued every Saturday until the whole are published. They will be sold at the low price of Fifteen Cents a volume, or Three Dollars for the set of Twenty-six volumes. This edition is called "Peterson's Cheap Edition for the Million." Remit Three Dollars to T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, and they will then mail to you, at once, postpaid, as fast as issued, the full and complete set of "The Waverley Novels," in Twenty-six volumes, together with a Proof Impression of the best portrait ever taken of Sir Walter Scott, gratis, suitable for framing, as a premium.

SARSAPARILLIAN HYGIENIC WINE.

Having used RAYMOND'S HYGIENIC WINE in my family, I take pleasure in recommending it to the public as being a safe, delicious and highly beneficial tonic, in short, all that it is claimed to be.

D. N. GRIFFIN, Beverly.

I have been acquainted with B. F. RAYMOND for five years and have always found him a man of unimpeachable character, and business integrity. What can be said of him can be said of his medicine, there is no humbug about it. DANIEL W. BARTLETT,
Chairman Selectmen, Essex.

WALTER FLINT, 29 Federal St, Beverly, Mass, says: "I had measles very badly this last winter. Was left with a bad cough and very weak. After staying at home for several weeks, after getting out of doors, I commenced to go to school. Cough was so bad and strength so poor that Physician ordered me to leave school. I took a great deal of medicine, but nothing seemed to help me. Cough seemed to grow worse instead of better. Some one recommended Sarsaparillian Hygienic Wine. I tried it, and before I had taken one half a bottle, I was back to school, and cough was better. After taking whole bottle, cough was entirely cured, and felt strong and hearty."

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

The audiences at the Boston Theatre do not increase in size as the run of "Jalma" is extended night by night, for the simple reason that the audiences cannot grow larger because the great theatre has been filled to repletion at every performance since the curtain first rose upon the secret cave of Tarciosa two weeks ago. "Standing room only" is the legend placarded in front of the house every evening as regularly as the clock strikes 8. Already more than 55,000 people have witnessed Mr. Gayler's romantic melodrama, and it is safe to prophesy that the piece will run until the Christmas holidays. "Jalma" is the most magnificent spectacle ever seen upon the Boston stage.

Maggie Mitchell closes her engagement at the Park Theatre this week. To-night and to-morrow night she will be seen in Fanchon, one of her first as well as best plays, and the rest of the week, the Pearl of Savoy will be given. At the Saturday matinee, "The Little Barefoot." She is capitally supported, Messrs. R. F. McClannin aad B. R. Graham, well known here, being in the cast.

The Madison Square "Young Mrs. Winthrop" company will appear at the Park Theatre next week. Among its members are Messrs. E. J. Buckley, W. H. Gillette, Edwin Arden, George Rogers and Frank Colfax, Misses Maude Stuart, Carrie Turner, Jean Clara Walters and Ada Dyas.

Mr. Charles Wyndham will open his engagement next Monday evening at the Bijou Theatre in "Fourteen Days," following which "The Great Divorce Case" will be produced, and a change of bill will be made every week. A novelty at this Theatre is to be presented the rest of the week, the name of which it is forbidden any one to mention under a severe penalty. It is darkly hinted, however, that W. H. Fessenden will appear as Ralph Rackstraw.

By means of a long tube having a big, open mouth over the stage of the Madison Square Theatre and an earpiece in his office, 100 feet away, Manager Frohman can hear distinctly the dialogue of a performance without rising from his desk.

It is their first appearance on the New England circuit, where they will play for several weeks during the appearance of Chas. Wyndham's company at the Home Theatre. AN IMPORTANT NOTICE.—We invite attention to the notice of the Merchants' Electric Light and Power Co. of Boston, elsewhere in to-day's paper. The business of this Company has increased rapidly since the acquirement of its Boston property, and contracts are on file for over one hundred and twenty-five new lights which together with the five hundred and fifty odd already burning nightly will represent over forty per cent. of all the electric lighting business of Boston.

This has all been accomplished in less than one year's time, and with only one lighting station. With increased facilities and additional lighting stations, so as to cover all parts of Boston and its surroundings, the business is sure to be largely increased.

With its present business the company is earning over ten per cent. and in view of the assured increase of business, soon as it can be accommodated, the directors have decided to advance the price of treasury stock from $10 to $12.50 per share, after Saturday, 13th inst.; but in justice to many who have written to them for information, stock, etc., they decided to give due notice of the proposed advance.

This company commences business under the most promising auspices.—Its directorate and list of officers is composed of gentlemen well and favorably known in Boston business circles; the American system of electric arc lighting—which it uses—is acknowledged, for many reasons, to be the best now in use; it possesses an established plant equal if not superior to that of any similar company in the United States; and the territory it has to occupy is very valuable by reason of the already large and greatly increasing demand therein for electric lights; all of which betokens a prosperous future for this newcomer into the electric lighting field.

Purchasers of Silver ware will make a mistake if they buy without looking in at Peabody's. He has a fine stock, and his large sales enable him to keep it fresh and desirable.

LYNN.

The board of Aldermen will hear the evidence this evening of the City Marshal against several liquor dealers for selling on the Lord's day. No counsel will be allowed on either side.

The first mass meeting of the Republicans was held last evening at the Coliseum. A Robinson and Ames flag was thrown to the breeze, and Harvey N. Shepard and the candidate for Governor delivered stirring speeches. The rally was a great success.

It is suggested that the polls be opened on election day at 7 A. M. A good idea. Everybody should be allowed the best opportunity possible for depositing his vote.

The Lynn & Boston Horse R. R., have laid a double track on Lewis Street. Between this city and Peabody the half hour trips on Sunday have been discontinued.

Mrs. M. A. Davidson has in her elegant store on Market street, the best pianos and organs in the country. It will pay the musical readers of the PRESS to look in her store when in this city. She has a full assortment of sheet music, and there is no need of your readers going to Boston for anything in this line.

The family of Mrs. Rachel Tapley celebrated her 92d birthday last Sabbath.

It is asserted that Hon. John R. Baldwin will not be a candidate for Councillor, but will be the candidate of the Democrats and Greenbackers in the 1st Essex district.

Our city clerk, Charles E. Parsons, was united in marriage, last Thursday evening, to Miss Katherine M. Parrott, by Rev. S. B. Stewart of the Unitarian Church.

An attempt is being made to have electric lights introduced still further in this city.

The coffee party and concert in aid of St. Joseph's church last week, was a grand success. Miss Nellie Nooman, sister of Mrs. D. A. Caskin, of Peabody, was one of the artists at the Concert.

The business of the late Lydia Pinkham is evidently to be kept going. A single purchase of $548 worth of postage stamps was made for that establishment one day last week.

The boot and shoe stores of Wellman Osborne are crowded with customers. Low prices and the best goods, as well as an enormous stock to select from is the secret of his success. The readers of the PRESS will find his Market Street store the most convenient. Horse cars pass the door.

E. H. Whorf, superintendent of the Revere Beach & Lynn R. R., has returned home from a visit to Tampico, Mexico.

Hon. Geo. M. Stearns will vote the Democratic ticket with its head cut off. He thinks that the number of Butler Democrats should be small, "in view of Butler's past record, his venomous, vindictive and vituperative abuse of the Democratic party for nearly twenty years, his efforts to impeach Andrew Johnson because he ever so faintly expressed Democratic views of reconstruction, his vehement efforts to pass the 'force bill,' under the provisions of which there would not have been a Democratic state south of the Mason and Dixon line, and his repeated efforts to get the Republican nomination because he was the stalwart of the stalwarts in the Republican fold." Mr. Stearns knows why he is a Democrat, and refuses to fall into the Butler procession on the extreme left.—Boston Herald.

The Woman' Christian Temperance Union of Massachusetts will hold their Tenth Annual Convention at the Central Square Baptist Church, Cambridgeport, Thursday and Friday, the 11th and 12th of October, 1883. Sessions at 10 A. M., 2 and 7 P. M. The exercises will consist of reports, addresses, discussions concerning methods of work and devotional exercises. Delegates will be provided with entertainment.

The managers of the New England Institute fair propose to offer inducements to schools which shall enable all scholars to avail themselves of the opportunity afforded, to study the resources of the southern states and the manufactures of the North. A day spent by classes, with their teachers, will, in many respects, be of more advantage than a week's study of books. Many schools have already visited the fair, and it is hoped many others will do so before its close, on the 3d of November.

Gentlemen will find a fine line of Socks and Handkerchiefs at Peabody's, at his usual way down prices.

Reasons Why You Feel Badly.

Because your stomach is not doing its work properly.
Because your liver is out of order, and wants righting.
Because your blood is thin, and needs iron in it.
Because you are troubled with nervous aches and pains.
Because you are vexed with languor and debility,
All these Reasons Can be Set Aside by the Use of Brown's Iron Bitters, which will Tone up your enfeebled stomach, and help it to digest.
Refresh your wearied liver and put it in splendid order.
Enrich your watery blood, and give it a rich red color.
Calm your worried nerves, and give them restful peace.
Strengthen your whole system and drive debility and languor out.

Considering that any man who has a dollar may buy of the nearest druggist a bottle of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, there is no reason why people should continue to feel badly, just for the fun of it. 4

TO THE PUBLIC!

We have always possessed the idea that the poor man's hard earned dollar should purchase just as much as a like amount of his wealthy neighbor.—WE BELIEVE IT. WE ACT UPON IT. Three years ago it was hard to convince customers that a firm in the FURNITURE business would or could make such a departure. WE DID, and our business to-day is a pleasing monument of its kindly reception by the people of Lynn, Swampscott, Saugus, Nahant, Marblehead, Peabody, Danvers, Lynnfield, Salem, &c., to whom we are more than thankful.

The Peabody Press.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

WE LEARN that Rev. Willard Spaulding, last Friday evening, at West Peabody, in criticizing the expenses of the State, said, among other things, that the portrait of Ex-Gov. Long, which hangs in the Executive Chamber, was paid for out of the money of the Commonwealth. The reverend gentleman is in error. The portrait referred to was paid for by the subscription of Long's friends, and the presentation speech was made by Ex-Mayor Prince of Boston. This complement was returned by Gov. Long when a portrait of Mayor Prince was presented to the school in Boston which bears his name, and it will be remembered by many of our readers that this little episode was the occasion of the delay to the Governor reaching Peabody when our Soldiers' Monument was dedicated.

THE UNIVERSALIST Society in New Haven, over which Rev. W. H. Houghton is pastor, have taken the proper course in voting that his services with them cease after April 1, 1884. Mr. Houghton has made himself conspicuous by his public utterances in the pulpit, in reference to the Rose Ambler murder, charging in a very forcible manner a suspected person as the murderer, against whom, however, the jury of inquest found insufficient evidence to warrant the party being holden.—The proper place to hear and judge of evidence in a case of this kind is in court, and not in the pulpit. There are lessons of instruction which may properly be drawn from it, but when any minister constitutes himself both judge and jury against a young man who is presumed to be innocent until found guilty by the law, it is time that he be brought to understand the duties of his office.

THE GREENBACKERS who are not satisfied with Gen. Butler have called a Convention at Worcester Oct. 16th.—George Dutton, secretary, has issued an address to the party in the state, in which great emphasis is placed upon these words of Gen. Butler in his letter of acceptance to that party last year:—"Hereafter, you may well lay aside the word 'greenback' as a designation of your party, unless you keep it in remembrance of the fact that you took it upon you when conferred by your enemies as a title of reproach. In behalf of the 'greenback' or legal-tender note, your labors are done, and the mission of your party is as completely fulfilled as is the mission of the republican party, which was the abolition of slavery." On the evening of that day a grand ratification meeting will be held, at which Hon. J. Hendrix McLane, of So. Carolina, Rev. Thomas K. Beecher, of Elmira, N. Y., E. Moody Boynton, and others, will speak.

FROM THE best knowledge that we are able to obtain, it looks as if it was not the intention of the Town Hall Committee to have the building completed before election. If such delay were necessary, our citizens would have no occasion to complain. But it is only too evident that with a little pushing the building could be finished, at the very latest, by the close of the present month. This new hall was built for town purposes. There is no suitable place, elsewhere, for rallies, and it is needed before election for this purpose,—not by one party, but by all parties. We know of no reason why the democrats, greenbackers and republicans,—all of them, if they desire, should not have the opportunity to hear their best speakers in the large hall. For public purposes of the town, if it is not ready this fall, there will be no occasion for its use until next spring. Our citizens expected, and they had a right to expect that it would have been completed before this time. And those wishes should be respected by the committee, who are only servants of the town.

BROTHER HOBBS, of the Woburn Journal, does not take kindly to independent journalism. We think he is about right. A paper, to have any influence, should have a mind of its own, and not be afraid to speak it. And it is hard to conceive of a journal in the campaign this year in the state not having decided opinions of the contest, one way or the other. Here is what the Journal says on the subject: "A paper simply makes an ass of itself when it says or insinuates that party journals do not think for themselves, but has that important function performed for them by somebody else. There is a great deal of such mushy sort of stuff going the rounds of the self-styled "independent" publications now-a-days, but it is noticed that "party hacks" continue to hold an honorable place in journalism, exert a healthy influence on public sentiment, and manage to get three meals a day. This drivel about "independence" is sickening to the last degree, for it is a well known fact that nine-tenths of those who claim it can be bought and sold and twisted and turned and made to play the role of clay in the potter's hands as no political newspapers can be."

THE MARBLEHEAD Messenger endorses heartily our remarks of last week in reference to sending the best speakers during the campaign to Essex Co., and says: "And we would add that Essex County would never have become such a hot-bed of fanaticism had the State Central Committee of former years done their full duty. It is of no use sending any cheap orators here.—We need the best! We believe a live effort will work wonders in old Essex." To all of which we say, Amen!

Outside of this county we hear the most encouraging reports of changes going on in the sentiments of former supporters of Butler — changes that seem almost incredible to those of us who see how strongly intrenched Gen. Butler is here. We hear it hinted that Robinson will not speak here or in the neighboring towns the night before election, as was understood, but that he will speak in Salem, and the people from the towns around—Beverly, Marblehead, Danvers and Peabody—will be expected to go to Salem and hear him. This will do very well as far as the ardent supporters of Robinson are concerned. They will vote all right even if they do not see or hear him. But it is the doubtful Republicans—those who are on the fence—those whom a good presentation of the issue such as Robinson gave in Charlestown would influence in the right direction, that we want to reach.

We protest, as far as we are concerned, against the policy of putting all the campaign work, as far as the best speakers are concerned, into Salem, to the neglect of the surrounding towns. From present indications, Peabody or Marblehead, in spite of the best efforts of the Republicans, will give a larger majority for Butler than Salem. Here then is an opportunity for missionary work which ought not to be neglected, and we repeat what we said last week, that the State Central Committee, if they are wise, will see to it that it is done.

The business men of Georgetown have a pleasant way of spending a Sunday occasionally, and last Sunday we were privileged to join them. They take their teams and drive to a secluded spot on Parker river, where is bedded every year large quantities of oysters, and here they meet as neighbors and friends and pass a few hours. Oysters are cooked and disposed of, and a social good time enjoyed. Sunday was bright and lovely, and it would be something singularly unusual if they did not enjoy it to the fullest possible extent. Among those present were Senator Osgood, Rev. O. S. Butler, Judge Tenney, Deputy Sheriff Noyes, Editor Harriman, of the Georgetown Advocate, and a large number of others, well known throughout the county.

BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Salem Baptist Association held an interesting meeting with the Baptist Church of this town, Thursday, Oct. 4th. The morning session began at 10.15. At the right and left of the desk were baskets of flowers tastefully arranged, and the large congregation nearly filled the room. The President of the Society, Mrs. Rev. A. D. Gorham of Wenham, presided over the services throughout the day. After the usual devotional exercises, Mrs. W. P. Chipman, in behalf of the ladies of the Peabody Baptist Church, welcomed the visiting sisters, speaking substantially as follows:—

"Sisters and co-laborers in the Foreign Mission work. It is with pleasure that I, as the representative of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society of this church, welcome you here to-day. We have looked forward to this meeting with ardent hopes and fervent prayers. Our hopes have been that a kind Providence would favor us with a fair day, and a goodly attendance of our sisters from the churches of our association. Our prayers have been that the Master might be with us in power to-day, and lead us in all to our spiritual profit, and to His infinite glory. The hopes certainly are more than realized as we meet together now. And I believe the prayers will be as fully answered, and that we shall close our services with our faith strengthened, our hearts enlarged, and our zeal quickened for greater efforts in the reaching and saving of our sisters in heathen lands."

The rest of the morning hour was devoted to a prayer and praise service, more than twenty of the sisters taking part. The afternoon session began promptly at 2 o'clock, a larger congregation than that of the morning having assembled. Indeed so full was the room it was difficult for the late comers to obtain a sitting. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Rev. H. Hinckley of Lynn. The roll call, by the Secretary, Miss H. J. Price, of the First Baptist Church, Salem, showed that fourteen churches were represented by nearly two hundred delegates. Then Mrs. Gates, of the Mission rooms, Boston, was introduced, and addressed the meeting. She especially mentioned the mission work that was being done by the Woman's Baptist Foreign Mission Society of America. Japan had already been touched by the civilization of the east and was reaching out her hands for it. We must send the gospel there. Good work was already being done there, but there was a call for greater work. In China the work was chiefly done by Bible women. It was a silent word; no parade attended it; but its power would be felt all through the nation. In Burmah the work is that of the schools; no words could estimate or tell of the progress that had been made here. So rapid had been the advancement that the class of teachers now demanded there was such as would honor our high schools, and seminaries. The class wanted was that of the Mary Lyon type, who would impress their own character upon the pupils. In Saoam another good work of a like nature was being done. In India, in Europe, in Africa, also the Bible women were doing a work that would be felt. She closed with a special appeal for the young christian women to take the mission service for their life work.

Mrs. Bowers, of Clinton, followed. As the State Secretary of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Mission Society, she spoke of the progress of the Mission cause and mission interest among the Baptist churches of the state. During the last year there had been a rapid gain in the formation of mission circles among the churches, and the contributions had increased more than two thousand dollars over any previous year. Two special truths she brought them to-day. One from the Old Testament, "There they dwelt with the king for his work," and the other from the New Testament, "Behold I say unto you, lift up your eyes and look on the fields, for they are already white with the harvest." Let us then give and pray and do all we can for the King in this blessed work. A Miss Whitman, of Troy, N. Y., was the next speaker. She in a few weeks is to go to Japan to engage in the mission work. A graduate of Vassar College, the child of wealthy parents, she lays aside all these advantages, and gladly leaves her native land for the privilege of carrying the gospel to her heathen sisters. It was with almost breathless interest the large congregation listened to her recital of her call to the work, and her hopes as she looked forward to her life's task. It was not a hard service into which she entered. She had many advantages over most of her sisters in the Foreign field. The climate of Japan, the intelligence of the people, their eagerness to know the story of the cross, the great awakening at the present hour among the Japanese, these all invited her on. It was now eleven years since she first felt the desire for this work, now the desire had become a duty. Think not that she left home unwillingly, she counted it a privilege to go, and her one desire was that she might live entirely for Christ. Several other speakers followed with brief remarks. The regular matters of business were attended to, and after prayer by Mrs. Rev. C. V. Hanson of Damariscotta, Me., the session closed. It is said to have been the fullest attended of any meeting in the history of the Society, and seldom has there been one of more absorbing interest.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

A large crowd was in attendance at Buxton's field last Saturday afternoon, to see the Toughs and Tenders again face each other with stick and sphere. Several changes were made in each team. Teel and Smith were absent and their places were filled by Poole and Ward, the latter being a pitcher of no little merit. Sam King and Elmer Poor played with the Tenders, in place of Gunn and Weston. Both nines were in better condition than on the Saturday previous, and made less errors and sharper plays. Tenders were first at bat and Weare opened the game with a three base hit to the right field. King did some good batting for the Tenders, making a home run in the 8th inning, on a long hard drive over the center-field fence. It soon looked as though the Tenders would win easily, for they had worked up a good lead, but they became careless and played so loosely that they were soon overtaken. It was too late to "brace up" now, for the Toughs were playing in finer form than at first, and though the Tenders strained every nerve and played well, they were unable to regain the lead. In the 9th inning where the Tenders had the best men at the bat, with no outs, and the bases full, wanting one run to tie the score, the excitement was intense, and the Toughs trembled. It was a hard place, but Spaulding hit a bat liner straight to the third, which Warner grappled in excellent style, without leaving the base, and put out Wells who was on 3rd, trying to put in the much needed run. E. Poor was then caught in an attempt to steal third, and the Tenders were beaten, but by so small a margin, that the crowd did not think the Toughs entitled to the three cheers generally given. All played well and it is hard to tell who excelled. William Shehan umpired the game, and all were pleased with his promptitude and fairness. Score by innings.

The Essex County Convention was held in Lyceum Hall, Salem, yesterday morning. Horatio Herrick was nominated for sheriff. J. T. Mahoney for Register of Probate. Zachariah Graves far County Commissioner, and Henry P. Moulton for District Attorney. Amos Merrill was chosen the member of the county committee from this town. At the councillor convention held immediately after, Col. E. H. Haskell was nominated. All the candidates were nominated by acclamation and the utmost harmony prevailed. At the close of the convention, the members adjourned to Mechanic Hall, where addresses were made by Hon. Geo. D. Robinson, Henry Cabot Lodge, Col. Haskell and Hon. R. S. Rantoul.

Mr. Herman H. Campbell, of Lynnfield, and Miss Emily H. Bancroft, daughter of Mrs. James P. King, were united in marriage last evening, Rev. Mr. Cudworth of East Boston officiating, assisted by Rev. W. G. Sperry, of this town. The ceremony took place at the residence of Mr. King on Lowell street, under a floral horseshoe. The house was finely decorated by Ward. The presents were numerous, including a fine Cathedral clock, from Brown, Riley & Co., in whose service Mr. Campbell is employed. The catering was by Weber of Boston, and the couple left for Boston at 8 o'clock, whence they continue their tour to New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

The Republican caucus to choose delegates to the County, Councillor and Senatorial Conventions was held at Town Hall, Saturday evening. Amos Merrill was elected Chairman, and George Randall Secretary. The following delegates were elected to the County and Councillor Conventions: J. Fred Ingraham, Chas. A. Haskell, Edward W. Abbott, William F. Walker, Amos Merrill, Jas. P. King, Alex. B. Merrill, Albert H. Merrill, George M Foster, Leverett Poor. Senatorial Convention: George H. Poor, Charles H. Goulding, F. Osborn, Jr., Isaac Hardy, J. Fred Ingraham, William F. Wiley, D. A. Messer, John S. Torr, J. R. Wingate, C. H. Whipple.

Mrs. Lydia, widow of the late Abel Proctor, and mother of Thomas E. Proctor, the well known leather manufacturer of this town, died last Saturday. Mrs. Proctor has been in feeble health for many years, and her decease was not unexpected, which occurred on her eightieth birth-day. She was known to many poor people in the town by her kindly and benevolent acts, and it has been supposed that the Methodist Church are indebted to her for the new clock which has recently been put on their house of worship. She was a member of the South Church, the pastor of which, Rev. Mr. Sperry, officiated at her funeral, Tuesday. Eight children survive her.

To-day our town has been made quite lively by the parade of the Catholic Temperance Societies of the county, who have held their annual parade here. The weather was fine and a large number of strangers were in town. The parade was very creditable to those who had the matter in charge. The following was the order of the procession:—

Chief Marshal, Edward Flynn, and aids
Platoon of Police under Chief Peasley.
Salem Brass Band.
St. John C. T. A. Peabody, 40 men.
Lynn National Band.
Young Men's C. T. A. Salem, 50 men.
Banner in barouche.
Lynn Brass Band.
Lynn C. T. A., 100 men.
Lawrence Drum Corps.
Young Men's C. T. A. of Lawrence.
Banner and Barouche.
Lowell Drum Corps, 35 men.
C. T. A. Society, Beverly, 50 men.
Salem Cadet Band.
Father Matthew of Salem, 50 men.

A large number of very pretty decorations were noticed about town, among them were the temperance rooms over Newman & Symonds' store, where were displayed flags and bunting; Nugent's store "welcome you" in center of flags and bunting; Sam Southwick's, flags; Hibernian Hall, profusion of flags and streamers; Baldwin's Hotel, American and Irish flags over the entrance; the joint rooms of the Naturalization and the Salem Post, a flag neatly draped; Republican headquarters, flag; Frank Osborn, Jr., flag on his residence; Mr. McBride, on Fulton street displayed the American flag; Thomas Carroll's shop showed State Coat of Arms and the American flag; John Ruth, on Main street, draperies over picture of Father Mathew and the motto "Welcome," displaying good taste; John Murphy, Walnut street, displays bunting draped over picture of Father Mathew; Daniel Conroy, Harris street, whole front of his house draped with American flags over picture of Father Mathew; Daniel Conroy, Senior, Harris street, festooned with bunting around picture of Father Mathew; Thos. J. Relihan's house, on Tremont street, trimmed with American flags and flag suspended across the street. A dinner was served at Upton's Hall, Samuel Southwick, caterer. After dinner a consolidated band concert by the Salem Brass, the Lynn National, and the Lynn Brass bands, the Salem Cadet Band refusing to participate. After the procession, with the exception of the Father Mathew C. T. A. of Salem, had marched to the Institute, where there was music and addresses, the Cadet Band gave a concert "on their own hook" in front of Baldwin's Hotel, after which they followed to the Institute, arriving after the exercises had begun. This action of the Cadet Band is sharply criticised and will not tend to make many friends for them in this town.

The committee having in charge the annual lecture course for the Peabody Institute have arranged a poriton of the season's course. The opening lecture will be given November 6th, by William Parsons of England, to be followed by Andrew N. Gray of Beverly, Miss Jessie Eldridge of Boston in Miscellaneous Readings, to be followed by Prof. W. C. Richardson of Chicago, in three illustrated lectures on Chemistry, Wm. I. Marshall of Fitchburg, and Geo. Parsons Gilman of Boston, are on the course, and will be followed by two others to be announced.

The Senatorial Convention for this district met in the Republican Headquarters in Salem yesterday afternoon at 3 P. M. W. H. Coates of Marblehead was elected chairman, and C. H. Simonds of Salem, Secretary. Capt. Benjamin Pitman of Marblehead, was nominated for Senator by acclamation, and Hubbard Breed of Salem, was chosen a member of the State Central Committee for the ensuing year. Mr. Pitman was then introduced to the convention, and made a ringing speech, accepting the nomination.

As Jerry Mack, driver for Chas. G. Folsom, was coming out of a yard on Northend street, yesterday, one wheel went over the bank and tipped the wagon, throwing the driver to the ground, and the wheel passed over his head. He was unconscious for a few minutes and was picked up by workmen employed near by. His head was considerably bruised, but he was not seriously injured. A narrow escape.

We observe the report that in many fruit raising localities the peach trees are breaking down under their load of fruit. They are evidently more highly favored than this locality. There are no fruit trees here of any kind that are breaking down, unless it be an occasional one where the small boy has ventured too far on a limb trying to secure the solitary representative that is perched somewhere among the branches.

Mr. Lewis R. Power, the shoe man, has challenged either Dr. Bland or E. Moody Boynton to meet him on any stage in the state to discuss Gen. Butler. He proposes to divide time and and that each party pay one-half the expense. Power says he is for Butler right or wrong.

A hard fight took place between two fellows under the influence of liquor, on Northend street last Sunday. They were separated by friends fearing fatal results might follow if the contest continued.

Last Thursday noon Mr. E. M. McClure was found in an insensible condition at his factory with his head wedged between the cog wheel and a pulley attatched to the stuffing wheel. He was conveyed to his home where it was found that he had only received a few slight wounds. It is sad to report that Mr. McClure seems to be mentally deranged, probably owing to the recent business reverses, and it is feared the accident was premeditated.

Truly, the season must be changing. One week we have weather chilly enough to call for additional bedding and overcoats, the next the thermometer stands in the neighborhood of 90. The beginning of this week—well, the least said on the subject the better. We should remark, however, that the season has arrived when a chap can catch a cold without running after it.

The eighth annual reunion of the Massachusetts Association will be held at Boston, Friday, Oct. 19, 1883. Business meeting at Lancer's Armory at one o'clock. Dinner at Quincy House at three. All ex-prisoners are invited. Assessment (including dinner) $2.00. Please notify the secretary if you will attend, that proper dining arrangements may be made. Return tickets over Boston & Albany and Old Colony Railroads furnished on applying to the secretary, J. G. Bovey.

The Methodist clergy of Salem, Peabody and Marblehead will spend this afternoon with Rev. John Capen, pastor of the Avenue Church, Beverly, on which occasion members from the above mentioned churches will hold a love feast at the Avenue Church this evening, to which the public are invited.

At the annual meeting of the Exchange News Room held last evening, officers were elected as follows: President, Chas. H. Goulding; Vice-President, E. Pope Barrett; Secretary and Collector, Arthur Elliot; Executive Committee, Albert F. Poor, Horatio N. McCulley and Chas. A. Thomas.

The feast of the Rosary was celebrated at the Catholic church last Sunday. Solemn high mass was celebrated at 10 o'clock, by Rev. M. J. Masterson, with Rev. J. Hickey, deacon, and Rev. V. F. Borgealli, sub-deacon. Rev. J. Hickey preached a sermon on the Real presence of Christ in the sacrament of the altar.

Last Thursday evening the Republicans of this town opened the campaign with a grand flag raising. Early in the evening a large crowd assembled on the square, and shortly before eight o'clock a large flag bearing the names of Robinson and Ames, the nominees of the party for Governor and Lieut.-Governor, was gracefully thrown to the breeze between the Warren Bank Building and Upton's Block, amid the usual display of colored fire, and music by the Salem Brass Band, while a cannon lent voice to the scene. Shortly after the raising of the flag the spectators adjourned to the town hall in sufficient numbers to pack it, many being obliged to stand. Mr. Geo. Randall in behalf of the town committee welcomed those present in an excellent and pointed speech and introduced the speaker of the evening, Chas. A. Foster, Esq., of Boston. Mr. Foster made one of the best campaign speeches ever delivered in this town and held the attention of his audience for over an hour. He was followed by Benjamin Pitman of Marblehead, a fine orator, whose remarks were brief and effective. After the rally the audience followed the band to the square. It was one of the most successful rallies ever held in town. The following are the names of the committee appointed by the the town committee and not read at the meeting on account of the lateness of the hour:—

Edward W. Abbott, F. T. Arnold, J. O. Buxton, Arthur P. Bodge, Francis H. Appleton, Charles S. Batchelder, H. Varney Buxton, Charles D. Bliss, Arthur S. Blaney, E. Pope Barrett, Stephen Blaney, Geo. DROWNED IN BEER.
CONCERNING THIS POPULAR BEVERAGE TWO MEN EXPRESS THEIR MINDS.
"The fact is sir, and you may stick a pin there, that the people of this country are likely to be drowned in a flood of lager beer," shouted an enthusiastic teetotaler the other day into the ear of your cornered correspondent. That German drink has struck us hard. It is the second deluge."
"Yes, and the worst of this beer-drinking business is that it gets up kidney troubles, as a heavy wind raises the waves," added a city physician, who had a knowledge of the times and a tendency to metaphor. "The midnight 'schooner' leaves behind it a wake of furred tongues, headaches, torpid livers, nausea, and all that, and lays the foundation of Bright's Disease."
This melancholy fact accounts in part for the increasing sales of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER, which at once mitigates these symptoms. Price 25 cents. Ask your physician about it. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

Vacation Rambles; or a week with Raymond.

MESSRS. EDITORS,—Perhaps a synopsis of a Raymond mountain trip may be interesting to some of your readers and awaken an interest in them to go and do likewise. The Boston & Lowell depot in Boston the starting point, time, Sept. 4th, when at half pasteight "all aboard" greeted our ears and we were speeding away towards the mountain fastnesses, along the winding Merrimac, through thriving villages, prosperous business centres, Nashua, Concord, etc., until at last Plymouth is reached, our first halt. Ample time having been given to try the cuisine of the Pemigewassett House, we again boarded the train and sped on, catching charming views here and there of the Connecticut River and Lake Winnipesaukee, also the distant mountain peaks, some obscured by clouds, while others were clearly outlined against the blue sky. At last, towards the close of day, we find ourselves in the valley of the wild Ammonoosac and soon Fabyan's is reached, where we are quartered for the night. The next morning opened cold and cheerless, with all the mountain tops obscured by clouds and the rain falling in gentle showers, but which soon gave evidence of clearing away and when we were ready to start for Mt. Washington, the sun was shining brightly and our ride over the six miles of railroad in observation cars was one full of interest, the Ammonoosac making music tumbling over its rocky bed with here and there mimic waterfalls on the one hand, and on the other the Crawford notch.

"The mountains that enfold
In their wide sweep, the colored landscape round,
Seem groups of giant kings in purple and gold
That guard the enchanted grounds."

Near the starting point of the Mt. Washington railway stands a monument in the shape of "Old Hero," the first engine used to carry passengers to the summit. The road is three miles long and the average rise is one foot in four, the steepest being at a point called Jacob's Ladder, where the grade is thirteen and a half inches to every three feet. The grade is overcome by means of cogwheels working in a cog rail in the centre of the track. Every possible safeguard is used to insure against accident, and such has been the precaution that no passenger has ever been injured since the road was opened. Higher and higher we are pushed up this iron pathway, vegetation growing stunted and less, until nothing but barren rocks are seen on either side, and at last we are on the summit, 6293 feet above the sea level, having been an hour and a half in the ascent. The view on the way up the mountain was very fine and said to be much better than usual, the atmosphere being exceedingly clear, so clear that mountain peaks nearly a hundred miles away, were distinctly seen. Just before we reached the Summit House, the world below was shut out from our vision by clouds settling down upon the summit, the temperature had fallen to two degrees below freezing, and the wind was blowing sixty-eight miles an hour by ten o'clock, and during the night the glass fell to 21°, eleven below freezing.

On our way up we saw two workmen descending towards us on sliding-boards. These boards are made to fit the cog-rail and controlled by a brake, attain a speed of nearly thirty miles an hour. Beside the railway and near the Summit, is the Lizzie Bourne monument, a pile of rough stones, surmounted by a wooden tablet, telling the story of her death. In company with an uncle and cousin, she attempted to walk to the summit one warm September afternoon in 1855, but becoming lost by the clouds settling around them, accompanied by cold and frosty winds, she, in their vain attempts to find the trail, became exhausted and died in a few hours. All through that dreadful night they kept their lonely watch beside the body of their relative, and when daylight appeared found they were within five hundred feet of the Tiptop house—within the reach of friends. The present Summit House, which was built in 1872, is conducted by Mrs. J. W. Dodge, and is the largest hotel upon a mountain in this country. The hotel is three stories high and has accommodations for about two hundred guests. The rooms are heated by steam and a large coal fire is constantly burning in the office. After a hearty supper the party repaired to the parlor, where they were entertained by music, both instrumental and vocal, and readings, speeches, etc., by members of the party, and ending with a social hop. Many and amusing were the experiences, as members of the party attempted to buffet the wind, in attempting to reach the printing office up the inclined slippery walk, or the short walk to the Signal office. One of our number having purchased a copy of "Among the Clouds" stepped outside with it in hand and the last seen of it, it was sailing away with almost lightning speed. He jocosely remarked they "were sending it home on the wings of the wind." Long before daylight the rosy tint in the sky warned us to be up to see the king of day as he rose with no cloud to obscure his brightness. Directly at our feet lay the Pinkham Notch and the Glen House, while on all sides as far as the eye could see, were mountain summits,

"Each purple peak, each flinty spire
Was bathed in floods of living fire."

while in between lay peaceful vales with here and there a fleecy cloud hanging far below us over some quiet hamlet. Directly in front could be seen the Glen Ellis River winding its circuitous way, while more distant Mt. Kiarsarge, Lovell's Pond and Sebago Lake could be distinctly discerned with the naked eye.

'Nature did near betray the heart that loved her; 'tis her privilege
Through all the years of this our life to lead,
From joy to joy."

Too soon the time came for our leaving the summit, but shortly before eight o'clock on Thursday morning, we were slowly descending the carriage road with an ever changing kaleidoscope opening to our view on every hand. Our eight mile ride down, wound its way round the spurs of the mountains, on the brinks of precipices, and overlooked the "Gulf of Mexico," a ravine many hundred feet deep, across little mountain streams which were well nigh dry, through forests whose thickets it would be hard to penetrate, until at last we leave this mountain trail, cross the Peabody river and alight at the Glen house.

"Thou who wouldst see the lovely and the wild,
Mingled in harmony on Nature's face,
Ascend our rocky mountains. Let thy foot
Fail not with weariness, for on their tops
The beauty and majesty of the earth,
Spread wide beneath, shall make thee to forget
The steep and toilsome way."

Our day's stop at the Glen House was spent in visiting the Garnet and Emerald pools on the Peabody river, the Crystal Cascade and Glen Ellis Falls, on the Glen Ellis river. These falls are said to be the finest in the whole mountain region. The source of this river is far up the side of Mt. Washington, and is fed by the melting snows ten months in the year, rushing onward in its course, till under the brow of Wildcat mountain, it is compressed between large boulders, and makes a leap of seventy feet to the pool below. The Glen House is only reached by stage from Gorham or Glen Station fifteen miles away. A merry party inside the stage, in which your correspondent rode, all intent on having a good time, the fifteen mile ride was passed over quickly and almost too soon the station hove in sight. Our finest views of Tuckerman's ravine, and of Mt. Kearsarge, were obtained on this ride. From Glen Station to the Crawford House through Crawford Notch, observation cars were used; our way led up the side of the mountain, the rise from the Glen Station to the Notch—twenty-one miles—being thirteen hundred feet. From Upper Bartlett one experiences an ever-changing panorama of delight, passing over the Frankenstein trestle, seemingly a slender network of iron, as one looking from the car window sees it, spanning the chasm, five hundred feet long and nearly eighty feet deep; past the Willey mountain, with the Willey house many hundred feet below us in the valley, which is always of interest to the tourist, from the tragic fate of its inmates in the slide of 1826. The track of the slide can be readily traced on the side of the mountain, and at its base extends to nearly half a mile in width. Past Mount Webster on our right, up whose side can be traced the course of the Silver Cascade, over which now only a tiny stream wound its way to the Saco River below, on our left Mt. Willard, with a deep fissure called the Hitchcock Flume, while near the summit, nearly a thousand feet above us is the entrance to a cavern called the Devil's Den, and as we neither saw his cloven feet, or felt his presence near as we swept past his den, concluded that some more potent power than ours had been at work and

SAINTS AND SINNERS STIRRED BY A CLERGYMAN'S CONFESSION—THE FACTS IN FULL.
Eloquent writing, merely, convinces nobody. General statements and assertions are cheap. Plain words are best, and come most easily from the mouth of a witness who is conscious that he speaks truth. Let the reader judge if the following have the ring of genuine coin:
"I have long been afflicted with rheumatism, a badly disordered liver and by general debility. All my strength seemed gone. I tried a number of other medicines without obtaining relief, but I do hereby testify to the great merits of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, since after the use of two bottles I find myself feeling well and strong again—in fact like a new man. I cheerfully recommend it as an excellent strengthening and invigorating Tonic."
Names and dates are of supreme importance. Testimonies are readily manufactured, but the foregoing is from a letter dated St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 30, 1882, and signed by Rev. Edward Wills, founder of and ex-pastor of the University Street Baptist Church Residence, No. 313 Spruce, that city. From the very fact of their responsible and prominent position, ministers of the Gospel are cautious about giving their signatures or influence to any proprietary medicine or advertised article. Hence the value of unsolicited testimonials like the foregoing.
Please note: First.—PARKER'S GINGER TONIC is not an essense of Ginger. Don't indulge that idea nor permit others to impress it upon you. It combines the choicest Jamaica Ginger with other ingredients—constituting the best Tonic known in medicine; Second.—It is pleasant to take and immediate in its action. Prices, 50c. and $1—the latter the more economical. Get it of your druggist, or send for circular to HISCOX & Co., New York.

WHAT MRS. BRUCE

OF 25 GRANT ST., SPRINGFIELD, MASS., SAYS ABOUT HER HUSBAND'S SICKNESS, AND WHAT FINALLY PROVED A REAL BOON TO HIM — WORDS OF AN AFFECTIONATE, GOOD WOMAN.

Mrs. Bruce says: "My husband is an employe in the United States Armory in Springfield. He has for years been a terrible sufferer from bilious sick headaches. He has fearful attacks of this kind. Sometimes they will come on him every week or so. He has never found any medicine which would give him any permanent relief or prove any preventive against these severe attacks until he tried Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. He has received the greatest benefit from its use." The testimony of Mrs. Bruce is like that of hundreds of others, who say: "I procured a bottle of Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY, and used it with the best of results. I have no more headache or pain in the side. Indeed, the medicine seems to have an almost magical effect, and I feel very grateful for FAVORITE REMEDY. Dr. Kennedy is glad to recommend his medicine to all who are suffering from sick headaches resulting from any of the above causes, for it is a sure, positive cure.

TO KEEP THE BLOOD PURE

is the principal end of inventions and discoveries in medicine. To this object probably no one has contributed more signally than Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y. in the production of a medicine which has become famous under the title of the FAVORITE REMEDY. It removes all impurities of the Blood, regulates the disordered Liver and Kidneys, cures Constipation, Dyspepsia and all diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females. Sold by your druggist, $1.00 a bottle.

kept him chained in the heart of the mountain. Having dined at Crawford's, carriages were taken for the top of Mt. Willard, the views from which are said to be the finest in the whole mountain region. Here can be plainly seen the summit of Mt. Washington, while several miles down the valley, the unpretending Willey House is nestling in its mountain home with the Saco River singing at its feet. The curling smoke way up the side of the mountain marks the track of the P. & O. Railroad, over which we had just passed. A few of the excursionists having decided to pass the night at the Twin Mountain House, nine miles away, soon after we had descended from Mt. Willard we found ourselves again enjoying the beauties of this mountain region. We rapidly passed over the carriage road in mountain wagons; pass the Mt. Pleasant, Fabyan and White Mountain Houses; listened to the music of the Ammonoosac Fall where the stream passes for fifty feet over a stairway of solid rocks. The sun had long since gone down behind the mountains, bathing their tops in a flood of golden light.

"Loveliest are thy setting smiles, and fair,
Fairest of all that earth beholds, the hues
That live among the clouds, and flush the air,
Lingering and deepening at the hour of dews."

The twilight was fast fading into glow when mine host of the Twin Mountain welcomed us to his hospitable hostelry, which was indeed a haven of rest after our rounds of the day with thirty miles of stage riding thrown in for a change. Our next step was at the Profile, where two days were passed. The Profile House is situated in the notch between Mt. Lafayette and Mt. Cannon or Profile Mountain, on the brow of which is the "Old Man of the Mountain." It is somewhat startling to one seeing it for the first time to look way up the mountain and behold the almost human profile,—looking off as it were into futurity, and guarding with jealous care the beautiful lake which lies calmly at its feet twelve hundred feet below.

As we saw it, it seemed enthroned in clouds which were around, above, below, just the profile itself visible through the sable covering. An old stage driver said he never passed without pausing and looking upon this great stone face with awe and reverence, beholding the work of more than human hands. The profile is eighty feet long and is formed of three masses of rocks, one forming the forehead, another the nose and lip, and the other the chin, but which to the observer seems chiselled from the solid rock. Echo Lake, another point of interest, was visited, when the human voice and the bugle's notes were echoed and re-echoed several times while a row on its placid waters reveals new beauties which ever way one turns. The Flume, the last point of interest visited, has indeed undergone a great change. The great stone boulder—a mecca of all tourists—which was suspended by a mere thread in the fissure of the chasm many feet above the rushing waters below—is gone and hes many yards farther down on the bank of the stream or cascade. Late last season a great slide from the mountain beyond came rushing through the flume carrying in its mad career everything in its path. Trees which had withstood a century's blasts and large boulders were unable to withstand the oncoming slide of earth, rocks and water, and now lie near its confluence with the Pemigewassett. The flume has been widened and deepened and extends many feet beyond its former limits and when time shall have dealt kindly with it, covering its rocks with lichens overhanging its banks with ferns and mosses. The time soon arrived for our homeward journey, and as we turned for our last look at the mountains, we saw that some of them had been snow capped during the night. Thus our week of pleasure was passed, without any care on our part, or thought of the morrow, or where we should lay our heads, all had been provided for—even the care of baggage—by Mr. Whitcomb and his assistants who accompanied him. To speak of the personelle of our party, might be betraying confidences, so will not betray those who were frequently seen on angling expeditions, and whose speckled trouts were straw hats, or the timid ones whose sleep was disturbed on Mt. Washington by visions of being translated in whirlwinds or pillars of fire, our liveliest ones, and most sedate, our heavy and light weights, our joker and our story teller, widows and widowers, young maids and old bachelors and last the bridal parties, and when it was reported there were sixteen such, our informant must have stretched the truth about eight times. When we speak of those who found nothing but enjoyment on this, one of the best planned mountain excursions, your correspondent will be numbered.

An Arkansas preacher, so goes the report recently, paused in his sermon, reached a revolver from his desk, shot through the window and killed a squirrel that was sporting on the fence near by, sent a boy out to secure the game, and calmly proceeded with his discourse.

Why We Are Sick.

No device that can add to the comfort and convenience of a dwelling is omitted in our modern architecture, and money is not regarded when the luxury of clothing or beauty of personal adornment is in question. Hence we all live in better houses and wear better clothes than did our ancestors. Why should we not take the same better care of our health? Why should dyspepsia, and the train of diseases that follow it, almost unknown in the olden time, be so prevalent now? Simply because of the poisonous and indigestible trash which in these days is forced upon the public as genuine food, or used to adulterate those articles that go to make up the daily bill of fare of every household. Our forefathers were content to make money by plain and honest methods; but the hot competition of the present day and the strife for rapid riches have called forth all the ingenuity of modern science to devise cunning deceptions that shall enable the avaricious dealer to more rapidly increase his profits even though he destroy the health of the public thereby. The consequence is adulterated, impure, poisonous and bogus food on every hand.

The people buy these adulterated foods because they are cheap, entirely ignorant of their poisonous qualities. A few years ago this evil had reached such alarming proportions in England that the public sentiment demanded legislative interference, and parliament enacted the most severe repressive laws. Dr. Small, U. S. A., after an examination recently made under the direction of the War Department, concludes that the adulteration of food is as great in this country to-day and of as dangerous a character as it was in England at the time refered to. No article entering so generally into the food of every family has been found more villanously adulterated than baking powder. For the purpose of underselling an absolutely pure powder like the "Royal" which has become the standard for purity and strength in baking powders, hundreds of dealers are putting up powders with cheap and adulterated cream of tartar containing lime, earth, etc., adding strength by the free use of alum. These powders are sold cheap but their use is expensive, for they are one of the chief causes of dyspepsia from which the American people are suffering. This species of adulteration can be avoided by following the advice of Dr. Mott, the chemist to the Government, who recommends consumers "when purchasing baking powders to select one standard powder, as the Royal Baking Powder, rather than risk purchasing adventurous compounds put upon the market by persons who have no higher motives than dollars and cents."

We hope to see Congress take hold of this important matter in a sufficiently vigorous manner to put an end to the whole nefarious business. In the mean time, if the people will be as careful to buy the best and purest food as they are to wear the best clothes and build the most comfortable houses, it will not be necessary to ask so frequently the question, "Why are we sick?" Every scientific test has proven the "Royal" to be pure and wholesome.

THE HEAD AND EYE.—Since last October I have suffered from acute inflammation in my nose and head—often in the night having to get up and inhale salt and water for relief. My eye has been twice, for a week at a time, so I could not see. I have used no end of remedies, also employed a doctor, who said it was impure blood—but I got no help. I used Ely's Cream Balm on the recommendation of a friend. I was faithless, but in a few days was cured. My nose now, and also my eye, is well. It is wonderful how quick it helped me. MRS. GEORGIE S. JUDSON, Hartford, Conn.

It is not a liquid or snuff, and is easily applied. Only 50 cents a package.

UNCLE SAM'S NAVY.—In a communication published in the Army and Navy Journal, Commander J. B. Coghlan, U. S. We don't say that all the bargains in the city are to be found at our establishment or that no one understands how to run a great retail store except ourselves.

But we do say that our assortments are so complete that there is scarcely anything you can ask for that we have not got on hand; that our prices are low because our while our business is very large, we can afford to sell cheaply and we do it. All our departments are stocked with new, seasonable goods, our prices as a rule are lower than those charged elsewhere, and we are making this week several special offerings at remarkably low prices.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Rev. Mr. Smith continued his discourse last Sabbath, on the state of the dead. He took for a text the same passage as the preceding Sunday, Job, 14: 10. He briefly reviewed the assumptions of the previous sermon, the fact of the resurrection, and that it occurs at the end of the world; that the body in the interim is in a condition of death; that the soul also exists in an intermediate state, and does not go to its reward; that it waits the unity with the body, the reconstructed person we call man. We have to-day to consider the place of abode of the spirit between death and the judgment, as far as the Bible reveals it. The preacher first referred to the three scripture words, Sheol, Gehenna and Hades, showing that they were translated in our scriptures by one word, hell. Gehenna is a Hebrew word, meaning condition of the dead, sometimes grave, the place of the spirit. There is also the word Tartarus, and these words Gehenna, Hades and Tartarus are translated hell, when they are distinct in their original meaning. There is a possibility here of misconception, and it is here that the Universalists have a great source of argument. The revised translation keeps these separate meanings in mind.

Gehenna originally meant a valley north of the city of Jerusalem, in which certain awful services were performed. A graven and bronze image was heated and by a spring its arms and body were opened and a child thrown in; it then closed, and the noise of drums drowned the shrieks of the child. God cursed this valley because of the sacrifices, and it became to be considered the cesspool of all that was filthy and corrupt by the Jews; fires were kept constantly burning to consume the filth. In course of time this valley came to be taken figuratively as the place of the dead. It had a fixed meaning at the time of Christ. When He came if He used this word He would use it in the sense understood by the Jews. Christ and the Apostles used it eleven times in the New Testament. It means a place of misery after the resurrection of the body. The preacher gave a few illustrations. "Fear not them which destroy the body. * * * I will forewarn you whom to fear, who is able to destroy both soul and body in (Gehenna) hell." Then there is that terrible chapter Matt. 23d. "Ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte * * * and you make him twofold more the child of (Gehenna) hell."

Now take the word "Hades," and its meaning at the time of Christ. Josephus writing to the Greeks gives the understanding of this word among the Jews. Hades was considered to mean the world or realm of disembodied spirits, and divided into two apartments, on one side the lost, in which was a lake of fire kept burning forever. This was the Jewish idea; the other was one of rest, life and joy; language is exhausted in the description, yet the spirits are waiting for some greater joy. Between these apartments or worlds is a chaos, which no one can pass. It is where each can see the other, but where no one can pass this gulf. This according to Josephus, is the Jews' conception of Hades. Did Christ use the word Hades in this sense? It is used by Him 12 times. You look at the Greek dictionary and find it translated, unseen world, also realm of disembodied spirits. Is it so in the Bible? The preacher referred to the chapter of the rich man and Lazarus, which he read as a Scripture lesson. Is not this the very idea? Some say that it is figurative, and a parable. There is nothing to indicate it. Christ says, "There was a certain rich man, etc." Suppose it was a parable. Christ's parables never equal reality. All the evangelical commentaries agree in this one point, that in this chapter, Christ desired to unfold the condition of the spirit between this and the resurrection. The rich man dies; in Hades he lifts up his eyes in torment; the poor man dies and enters paradise. Josephus says this was understood by the Jews to mean Abraham's bosom. There were the patriarchs. See how perfectly Christ brings out this distinction. Dr. Clarke says it is either a history or a parable. Would Christ deceive us in such an all important matter? The speaker referred to the desire of the poor man that Lazarus should return and warn his family, showing that the resurrection had not come. There was a future beyond this. A few illustrations were given, showing after this explanation how clear were some other passages. For instance, where Peter refers to the 16th Psalm. He is vindicating the character of Jesus. "Thou wilt not leave His soul in (Hades) hell." It went there, but God will not leave it there. Again the words of Christ to the penitent thief, "To-day thou shalt be with me in paradise." What a harmony of thought? He is to be raised again. Are there devils in Hades? Reference was made to Christ casting out demons, where they said "don't send us into that abyss, but into a herd of swine." This word "abysos" means just the same (Tartarus) as Hades. The demons did not want to go there. Again Peter says of the angels that kept not their first estate, God sent down to Tartarus, to be reserved for the great day.

Follow along to Revelations where John said he had the "keys of death and Hades;" he has the key to unlock the abode of the disembodied spirits. Then come down in Rev. 20 chapter, to the finale of time, where is described the resurrection, he beheld the white throne, saw the dead, small and great, the books were opened, and the dead judged according to their works. The sea gave up its dead, and Hades delivered up the dead in it and they were judged. Death and Hades were destroyed and the word passes away. When Death and Hades have given up their dead, there is no more need of the word. "And whoever is not found written in the book, was cast into a lake of fire, and this is the second death." That is the last utterance of this kind, for at that moment the revelator turns to a new heaven and new earth, and sees the church, the new Jerusalem come in. Then comes out that fearful wail, in the last chapter of the Bible. But "without," outside—that is all that is said, "without—are fornicators, adulterers, etc."

The preacher in closing said he might be talking to some who called these things in question. But he had honestly presented what he understood the Bible to teach. God had permitted our gaze to see the glories and learn of the punishments of the future. It is for each to decide for himself. All were earnestly exhorted to be found among those "whose names were written in the Lamb's book of Life."

SOUTH PEABODY.

Miss Cora Merrow, daughter of C. M. Merrow, met with an accident while visiting friends in New Hampshire last week. She fell off a wagon while out driving, striking on her arm and breaking her wrist. The injured member is doing as well as can be expected.

Amos K. Raddin has built a barn on the estate occupied by Benj. F. Parker, on Lynnfield street.

Mr. David Twiss has purchased the house occupied by him on Lynn street, of Mr. King, and it is his intention to re-model it and put the stable in repair.

A new fence has been built by the side of the road abbuting Brown's pond above S. K. Newhall's.

Mr. Edward Knowles and family of Brookfield, N. H. are visiting at the house of C. M. Merrow on County St.

Mr. Warren Shaw and wife made a trip to New York and up the Hudson last week.

South Peabody boasts of a monument and if it could talk we think it could tell some pretty good stories. We refer to the brick shaft on the site of the old Naumkeag House.

Prof. Bill will hold a meeting in the vestry of the Church for the purpose of showing his methods of teaching music. If a sufficient number can be obtained he will start a school. All are cordially invited to attend.

The Mission Circle will hold a fair in the vestry of the church next Friday afternoon and evening.

Some time last Wednesday somebody entered the tool building at Cedar grove cemetery, by breaking a square of glass and opening the window. A horse blanket and several dinner pails were stolen. This is not the first time this place has been broken into, and it is natural to suppose that some one familiar with the premises is the culprit.

PENALTY FOR SIN.—Oct. 6, Elizabeth McCam, of Newburybort, $1.00, without costs.

Elizabeth Allen, drunk, $5.83.

FIRE DEPARTMENT NOTES.

The Engineers are going to test all the hydrants in town before cold weather sets in.

The Finance Committee on the recent firemen's muster in Portsmouth, have made their report, as follows: Receipts $3200, expenditures, $3069.75. It was voted that the balance remaining $130.25, be used for the purchase of new books for the public library.

The engineers have purchased 600 feet of the Warwick hose company's Fabric hose.

About 250 feet of "Eureka" hose have been newly lined the past week.

A meeting of the Relief Association of the Peabody Fire Department will be called in a few days, to take steps towards reorganizing under a new charter.

There are about 8400 feet of cotton hose in the department now, all in first class condition, made up of the following brands: "Eureka," "Paragon," "Eclipse," "Boston Woven," "Baker," "American," "Jacket" and "Fabric." This will give all the companies a relief of dry hose always on hand.

At the recent fireman's muster in Amesbury, the old tub Volunteer, of Salisbury, took the first prize. This engine is the old, original Volunteer of this town, and has been stored in a barn for quite a number of years.

Steamer one has been thoroughly overhauled this week and found to be in excellent condition. Janitor Butts and Chas. Enos did the work.

A fireman's muster, open to hose companies, will be held at the Danvers Riding Park, Wednesday, Oct. 24th. The run will be confined to fifteen men, run one half mile and lay 100 feet of hose. The first prize is $35, second, $15 and $10 extra to the winning company.

Driver Currier had one of the black horses from the Bleachery hitched up with his team yesterday afternoon, to see how they would work and match together. They worked well and it would have been hard work to have seen the difference in the horses, but if the committee are going to buy, why not buy a new pair right out, instead of always having an old horse in the span.

Mr. A. J. McDonald, who was killed by the falling of the Skinner ladder truck at a fire in Providence, R. I., last Thursday evening, was the holder of ticket number 3296, which drew the silver water pitcher at the Relief Association fair, last spring. The whole Providence department turned out to his funeral, with the National band. McDonald's pastor was so bigoted and narrow minded that he refused to attend the funeral, or allow it to be held in his church, just because there was a band of music. ZERO.

NORTH PEABODY.

The Rev. W. G. Sperry preached an interesting discourse from the following, Joshua, 1-2, to a large and attentive audience.

October 3d, ground froze here for the first time.

The apple crop is very fair in this part of the town.

Mr. James N. Ames and G. H. Winchester have had high service water put into their places on account of dry wells.

Mr. Warren Holden has removed his family to Tapleyville.

Last Sunday while the Rev. Geo. Walker was conducting a religious service at the Episcopal Church, Danvers, his horse and carriage, which he had left in the shed outside, was stolen. No trace of them could be found, although a description of the thief was obtained. Parties on Andover street also saw the team with three men in it, being driven along that street. Shortly after ten o'clock last Monday evening, Officer Mack found the team standing on Central street, in front of the Orthodox Church, where it had been left. It was returned by the Chief Police to its owner.

Mr. Cook, of Maine, has removed his family from that state, into one of Mr. C. H. Whipple's houses, lately vacated by Charles Bailey, and will be employed by the firm of Pike & Whippie, as a woodworker.

We regret to learn of the death, on Tuesday last, of Mrs. Mercy, widow of the late Aaron Wilkinson. Funeral Thursday, from her late residence on Andover Street, at 2 P. M.

The citizens of North Peabody seriously think of petitioning the water board, for a drinking fountain at Pike & Whipple's.

Rev. C. N. Smith, of the Methodist church, will preach at the Andover Street Chapel, Thursday evening, at 7.30 o'clock.

The desirable estate of George Deland, next to the Chapel is to be sold at public auction on Saturday, Oct. 20, at two o'clock P. M.

Twine Emmience boasts of a laundry on the old Moses Preston place, now belonging to Perley King, Esq., it being a branch of the one to be established in Samuel Trask's old store by Mr. Fairbrother. Z.

JEWELRY.—Ear Jewels, Pins, Rings, Studs, Buttons, etc., at Peabody's.

A Clear Duty.

"A Mother" has decided just right, in advising her daughter not to accept the invitation of a gentleman to spend the evening out at * * alone, and in refusing to so cheapen the young lady in her escort's eyes. The proper view for all American mothers to take of such invitations is precisely this, that their daughters are precious and altogether too highly regarded at home to subject them to the criticism that girls are exposed to who are seen alone at summer gardens or at Park concerts, by night, with young men. The young fellows may be of the best character and entirely delicate-minded in behavior to such young women, but if they are really anxious to show proper respect, they will invite the mother always, or some older friend, to make up the party. This is a fixed rule in many circles in Philadelphia, and there is no reason why it should not apply to all young things on evening excursions.—It is not that these girls, so guarded, are not trusted by their mothers to behave properly; it is not that the men who are of the party are looked upon as likely to behave improperly; it is the simple understanding that there must be some experienced matron, or the father, perhaps, or the aunt, who is a sort of surety that they are looked after, and are sure to behave in the proper manner. A man in these circles spoken of would never dream of inviting a girl to go out alone with him for late strolls in the Park; for his own sake he would prefer that the party should be balanced by a chaperone, and he would not put the lady into any such position as to suppose that she would go. We do not live in Arcadia, and there is evil in the world. The American girl has a great deal of freedom.—She can come and go in daylight and attend to any business affairs she chooses without any but the most civil treatment from everybody she meets. She can travel unattended in the cars to any distant city, and if her dress and manner be quiet will not be noticed in any unpleasant way at all. If it must be, she can go and return in the evening on any errand of business or matter of friendship without an escort in our streets in almost any respectable quarter of Philadelphia, if her bearing shows that she is not trying to attract attention, and that she does not notice a passer-by. But this is very different from the party of pleasure, lively and noisy; it is very different from permitting school girls, as some parents evidently do, to stroll along by themselves on Chestnut street, under the electric lights, with even innocently loud voices and laughter. Such parents hold their daughters cheap, as we have said; they do not value them enough to look after them. The presence of one or two older women, without a man at all, makes a Park party sufficiently guarded, and they are still more needed as a guarantee, when the young men invite the girls. If the pair are bent on confidential talk, or love-making, in plain English, that is all the more necessary for the matron's presence—which is not an obstacle—and she will know how to see and be conveniently deaf at times.—This is the happy medium between the over-watchfulness over every word in Continental society, and the utter absence of any guard at all, that prevails among some careless people here. A girl committed suicide out in Texas the other day, who had gone on an excursion with two young men and did not return to their home that night. The next morning she killed herself—which speaks for itself as to the propriety of such parties. If a mother or trusted old friend of those girls had been of that party, under any circumstance, missing a train or whatever trick was employed, what happened could not have happened. Again, there was a girl last summer rushed into a marriage with a man down at Coney Island simply because the last train had left, and she was there in a crowded hotel alone with him. In this case he wished "to protect her" against censorious tongues, but if he had really cared for such appearances he would not have taken the good girl alone to such a place. It is a guage of a man's respect for a girl, the way in which he makes up a party of pleasure for her; and that, daughters, as well as mothers and all well-meaning young fellows, should bear in mind. —Philadelphia Ledger.

A woman was arrested in Kansas City for appearing on the street in a Mother Hubbard dress, which the chief of police decided was too short. As we understand it a Mother Hubbard dress is one of these things that gather at the neck and go where they darn please.—It will be remembered that this Mrs. Hubbard is the one who went to the cupboard to get her poor dog a bone, but failed to find any bone there. If the madame would go to one of these dresses that are named after her, she could find bones enough for her dog.

THOSE WHO USE IT, SAY

I have carefully examined the People's Cyclopedia, and am heartily ready to endorse the same as a work of great value, I am the owner of the Encyclopedia Britannica, and yet do not hesitate to say that the People's Cyclopedia, in many features, is superior, while the cost is far less. I know of no Cyclopedia so fully in the reach of all classes and yet so wonderfully adapted to their needs. W P. CHIPMAN, Pastor of the Baptist Church, Peabody, Mass.

I have examined the People's Cyclopedia and consider it worthy the attention of any one desiring an excellent book of reference. The very moderate cost of the work is especially to be noted. G. FRED OSGOOD,

The People's Cyclopedia, sold by Mr. A. E. Cady, agent, I regard a work of rare merit. Its range of subjects and comprehensive of treatment is all that can be desired. It fills a place no other Cyclopedia has done. Its completeness at so small a cost is a very strong recommendation which cannot fail to be appreciated. CHAS. W. SMITH, Pastor of Washington St., M. E. Church, Peabody, Mass.

Before examining The People's Cyclopedia, I could not conceive how so good a work could be made. I can not now imagine how a better one can be made. S. W. MASON, LL. D., Supervisor Schools, Boston.

I deem it an admirable work. It covers the field of knowledge effectively, and gives just that information which all want. In short, it is just the book for reading, thinking Americans. HENRY WARD BEECHER, Brooklyn.

I am especially pleased with its freshness and accuracy, its brevity and clearness of statement, and at the same time its fulness and completeness, making it, in my opinion, the most convenient and usable of all Cyclopedias before the public. N. A. LUCE, State Supt. of Schools, Maine.

Our Own.

If I had known in the morning
How wearily all the day
The words unkind
Would trouble my mind,
I said when you went away,
I had been more careful, darling,
Nor given you needless pain;
But we vex "our own"
With look and tone
We might never take back again.

For though in the quiet evening
You may give me the kiss of peace,
Yet well it might be
That never for me
The pain of the heart should cease.
How many go forth in the morning
Who never come home at night;
And hearts have broken
For harsh words spoken,
That sorrow can ne'er set right.

We have careful thought for the stranger,
And smiles for the sometime guest,
But oft for "our own"
The bitter tone,
Though we love "our own" the best.
Ah! lip with the curve impatient,
Ah! brow with that look of scorn,
'Twere a cruel fate,
Were the night too late
To undo the work of morn.

Margaret E. Sangster.

Power of Trifles.

BY MAY RILEY SMITH.

What will it matter in a little while
That for a day
We met and gave a word, a touch, a smile,
Upon the way?

What will it matter whether hearts were brave
And lives were true;
That you gave me the sympathy I crave,
As I gave you?

These trifles! Can it be they make or mar
A human life?
Are souls as lightly swayed as rushes are
By love or strife?

Yea, yea! a look the fainting heart may break,
Or make it whole;
And just one word, if said for love's sweet sake,
May save a soul!

Rob-in-son.

My first three letters, very short,
Make what some boys are called in sport,
Also, what Butler men would do
If they could vote their ticket through.
What 'tis the Democrats' intent
To get; my next two represent,
These same two letters also show
Where the Republicans will go.
My last three letters, fair to see,
Spell what's oft dandled on the knee,
My whole's a fair and honest name,
Needed to save the state from shame.

Selected Story.

A Short Visit.

'What!' said Mrs Haven, almost in a shriek.

'It's true,' said her husband. 'They are coming to visit us—every one of 'em. My sister, Zuleima, because the Saratoga hotels are too intolerably hot for endurance. Cousin Herbert Haller, because he is an æsthete and wants to study nature from a level hitherto untrodden. Mrs. Johnson, because the children don't recuperate after the whooping cough. Aunt Sadie, on account of a difficulty with her landlady on the subject of poodle dogs. Uncle Jenks, because he never has visited us, and wants to know what my wife is like!'

'Dear me? What am I to do?' faintly gasped Mary Haven, looking around her pretty sitting-room, draped in pink chintz, fragrant with fresh flowers, and decorated with gilt bird cages, water color sketches and Kensington embroidery.

'Do?' repeated her husband, who was intent on clipping off the end of his cigar so that it should 'draw' satisfactorily. 'There is but one thing to do—let 'em come.'

'All at once?'

'Yes, all at once.'

'And I with only one girl, and the thermometer at ninety in the shade, and the painters in possession of the third story.'

And the lady sobbed hysterically.

'Couldn't be a better combination of circumstances, my dear.'

'I don't believe those people care a straw about seeing me.'

'Neither do I,' said her husband. 'It's only on account of their convenience, the hot weather, and the high prices at the hotels,' added Mrs. Haven. 'Hugh, I've a great mind to commit suicide.'

'Don't do that, my dear!' said Mr. Haven. 'I can suggest a better plan. I was just thinking, do you know—'

'Of telegraphing to the city for a new force of servants, a box of provisions from Minardi's and half a dozen cots, with hair mattresses and bedding to match?' eagerly interrupted Mrs. Haven.

'Nothing of the sort,' said Mr. Haven, serenely eyeing the distant landscape through the amethyst rays of cigar smoke. 'Of moving.'

'Moving, Hugh?'

'To the little cottage by the lake,' Mr. Haven explained. 'Only for a few days merely on account of the repairs at the house. Paint upsets my digestion, and the sound of a carpenter's hammer sets my teeth on edge. Besides, Hodge, the contractor, can work a deal faster if we were out of the way.'

'But, Hugh, the cottage is nothing but a camping-out place, with board-floors, and not a particle of plaster or paint about it,' remonstrated Mary.

'What of that, my love,' said the imperturbable husband. 'Our friends don't come, as I take it, to admire fresco and gilding, but they come to enjoy our society.'

'They'll think we live there always,' replied Mrs. Haven, with corrugated brow.

'That is precisely what I wish them to think, my dear.'

'Oh!' said Mrs. Haven.

'You follow my meaning?'

'I—think—I—begin—to,' said she with an amused light sparkling in her eyes. 'Yes, dear; perhaps it would be a good plan to move—just while the repairs are in progress.'

And she hurried up stairs to pack a few necessaries at once.

The cottage by Wiscomac Lake was not an imposing edifice. There was plenty of room in it, such as it was, but the floors were of rude pine boards, the windows were undraped, and the furniture was such as was adapted merely to the wants of camping parties who were prepared to 'rough it' after the most primitive fashion; and when Mrs. Zuleima Montagu Prout drove up to the door in a wagon heavily loaded with trunks, she stared through her gold eye-glasses in a most ridiculous manner at the rude porch of shingles supported by cedar posts mantled in their native bark, the shutterless windows and the unpainted wooden settees on the grass.

'This isn't 'The Solitudes,' said she. 'Drive on, man. You have made a mistake.'

'This 'ere's where Lawyer Haven's folks live,' said the man, leisurely chewing a straw. 'Guess it's enough of a 'solitude' to suit anybody.'

'I thought it was a picturesque cottage,' said Mrs. Prout, in accents of the keenest disappointment.

But at this minute Mrs. Haven herself hurried to the door, saying, graciously:—

'I think you must be my husband's sister Zuleima. Do come in.'

'But where are my trunks to go?' asked the fashionable widow, who had dazzled the eyes of the Saratoga world with numerous changes of toilet during the past fortnight.

'You can put them in the shed at the back of the barn,' said Mrs. Haven. 'I don't think they will quite go up the stairway.'

Mr. Haller arrived later in the day; a long-haired, sallow complexioned young man in a violet velveteen suit, followed by a countryman, carrying his portable easel, color cases, travelling library and writing desk. He knocked loudly at the door of the cottage with the ivory knob of his cane.

'Can you tell me where Mr. Haven lives?'

'This is the place,' answered the hostess.

'This!' echoed Mr. Haller.

'You are Cousin Herbert, I suppose. Walk in. My husband will come in the evening train. Allow me to show you to your room. It is rather small, but we are expecting a good deal of company, and I daresay you won't mind a little inconvenience.'

And she left him in a seven-by nine apartment under the eaves, where he couldn't stand upright except just in the middle of the room, and where the three-paned window was built close to the floor.

'Humph!' soliloquized the æsthete looking ruefully around him, 'this isn't at all what I expected.'

Mary Haven had scarcely got down stairs and resumed the manufacture of raspberry pies, when shouts and cries in various keys announced the coming of Mrs. Johnson and her four children on a 'buckboard wagon' from the nearest stage station.

'Is this Cousin Hugh's house, ma?' inquired Adelaide, the eldest, discontentedly.

'It ain't nothin' but a shanty!' loudly proclaimed Alexander Gustavus, the second hope of the family.

'There ain't no paint on it,' said Helen Louise.

'Lemme get out!' shrieked Julietta, 'and play in that lovely black mud where the frog toad is sitting.'

Mrs. Johnson sailed in with a scarlet face and a perturbed look on it, and saying:—

'I'm afraid, Cousin Mary, that we shall inconvenience you. There don't seem to be much accommodation here.'

'Oh, there's plenty of room up in the garret, such as it is,' said the hostess, smilingly. 'Of course one expects to lead a gypsy life in a place like this, and the lake will be so nice for the little dears to play in, if only they are careful, for it is very deep, and it's so lucky you are here, Cousin Johnson, to help me with the pies and bread, for I'm not a very experienced housekeeper, and—'

'I thought you kept two or three servants,' interrupted Mrs. Johnson, frigidly.

'I have only one young girl just at present,' said Mrs. Haven; 'and of course when there's so much company there's a great deal to do. Oh, there comes an old lady with a sweet little yelping dog.'

She glanced out of the open doorway.

'Goodness me, if it ain't that intolerable old Aunt Sadie, with her inevitable dog!' groaned Mrs. Johnson, as a fat, elderly lady toiled up the path in a scarlet shawl and a black lace hat.

'Bless me!' said Aunt Sadie, purple with heat and dripping with perspiration, 'you don't never mean to say, Niece Haven, that this 'ere's the place I've heard tell of on lake—what do you call it?'

'It is where we live at present,' said Mrs. Haven.

'I'm downright sorry I left the tavern at the railroad,' aunt Sadie said sadly. 'I ain't used to these unplastered houses, and I'm most sure that Trip will catch cold.'

Uncle Jenks was the last to come—a shrewd, brown-faced old man in a gray suit, and keen eyes like an eagle. He looked around him and seemed to take in the situation at once.

'No servants, eh?' said he. 'Well it's lucky I came. I'm pretty handy to fetch water and split kindling and help round the house; and you're pretty slim, my dear, to do all the work of this house with only a young gal to help you. So Hugh hasn't done real well in business? I've a little money uninvested, and I don't know as I could do better than to lend it to my sister's son.'

Thus he spoke, cheery and kind, while Mrs. Prout fanned herself on the porch, and Cousin Herbert did battle with the mosquitoes and midgets.

Mrs. Johnson followed her four children about in ceaseless terror lest they should be drowned, and Aunt Sadie felt her dog's pulse, and groaned over the heat.

One night at the cottage settled the question 'to stay or not to stay,' in the minds of Mrs. Haven's guests.

'I never slept in such a hot place in all my life,' said Mrs. Johnson, with a sigh.

'The bed wasn't long enough for me to stretch myself out in, and the eaves touched my forehead,' said Cousin Herbert sadly.

'The owls hooted all night in the woods,' said Anut Sadie, 'and kept dear little Trip barking until he was quite hoarse.'

'I wouldn't stay here if you would pay me a thousand dollars a week,' said Mrs. Prout, thinking of her pink silk party dress and of her twelve-button kid gloves.

'Well,' said Uncle Jenks, dryly, 'it ain't just the location I should have selected for a summer residence but I ain't going off to leave Hugh and his wife while I can be useful to them.'

So the company departed with various adieux and insincere protestations of regard, and then only Uncle Jenks was left.

Mr. Haven took his cigar from between his lips, and said:—

'Uncle Jenks, suppose we go up and see how the carpenters and painters are getting along with the conservatory up at the house.'

'At what house?' inquired Uncle Jenks.

'Mine,' said Mr. Haven.

'Don't you live here?'

'Not all the time,' said Mr. Haven.

'We only came here to accommodate such of our relations as merely desire to make a convenience of us.'

'Oh!' said Uncle Jenks, a slow smile beginning to break over his shrewd brown face.

And Mary Haven confessed that her husband's advice had proved his own excellence.

Uncle Jenks, the only one of the troop who really cared two straws for them, was with them still—the rest had all been frightened away by the rusticities of Lake Wiscomac cottage.

'And I wish them bon voyage,' said Mr. Haven calmly.

'So do I,' agreed Mary.

THE TRAINED NURSE.—May I tell you what a good trained nurse may teach, and can teach? says Dr. Jacobi. How to recognize a fever, how to compare the local temperatures of the several parts of the body, and how to equalize them; she knows that ever so many feeble children might have been saved if but the feet and legs had not been allowed to get cold; how to bathe and when to stop; how to regulate the position of the head—I remember well the case of inflammatory delerium which would always be relieved by propping up the head—how to treat intelligently an attack of fainting; how to render cow's milk digestible by repeated boilings, or lime water, or table-salt, or farinaceous admixtures; how to feed in case of diarrhœa; how to refuse food in case of vomiting; how to apply and when to remove cold at the head; how to ventilate a room without draught; and a thousand other things. She will also use her knowledge and influence in weaning the public of nostrums, concerning which hardly anything is known save what you have to pay for the promises of the label.

She will break the public of the indiscriminate use of quinia, with its dangers possibly for life; cure you of the tendency of making the diagnosis of malaria the scapegoat of every unfinished or impossible diagnosis; she will teach you that the frequent and reckless use of chlorate of potassium leads to many a case of ailment, to chronic poisoning, possibly in the shape of Bright's disease or to an acute poisoning with unavoidable death. These are but few of the things she can do, and a little of the knowledge she can not but distribute. With the aid of the class of women who frequent our training-schools, the public must and will gain in a short time. Let the number of schools increase and increase the number of pupils, and every one of them will be a teacher and an apostle of sound information on sanitary and hygienic subjects. And let nobody leave this place to-night without intending to aid an institution as helpful as this.

PY SHIMINY! ISH DOT SO?—There is doubtless such a thing as excessive promptness in emergencies. Presence of mind and determination are admirable qualities in themselves, but it sometimes happens that a decision made on the spur of the moment is regretted on a more deliberate survey of the field. This remorse seems to have overtaken a worthy Dutchman of Anaka County, Minnesota. The Dutchman was seeking to reach a town at some distance from Sauk Centre, and to accomplish this must drive over the prairie from the latter town. He was unaccustomed to the road and night overtook him with his vehicle fast in a slough and no town in sight. He sought the solitary farmhouse visible and asked permission to stay till morning, the farmer telling the traveller that it would be necessary for him to sleep with the children or with the farmer himself, as their accommodations were limited. Quick as lightning the Dutchman expressed his resolution not to sleep with the "bodderation shiltren," so he slept with the farmer. The rest of the story may be given in his own language:

"Vell, in der mornin', ven we comes mit der stairs down, I see two girls apout seventeen und nineteen years old und I ask der old man: Pees dem girls die shiltren you told me apout? und he say 'yaw, dem ish mine only shiltren!' und I says to myself, Py shiminy? Ish dot so!"

We have heard considerable about the habit girls have of sitting on one leg. It's a very bad one, particularly if the leg doesn't belong to the young lady.

Book Notices.

"BATTLE OF THE BOOKS."—The "Literary Revolution" which caused such a sensation a few years ago, and which was supposed to have been thoroughly overthrown and done for, seems to be ablaze again, more fierce and flourishing than ever. Its "100-page catalogue free," and 'books sent to any address to be paid for after receipt and examination, evidence of good faith being given,' are now being advertised in thousands of papers, and one must acknowledge that they are indeed "the lowest prices ever known." We quote a few samples, the books being always unabridged and in large type:

Tennyson's Enoch Arden, 2 cents.
The Cotter's Saturday Night, 2 cents.
Cæsar's Commentaries, Cicero's Orations, and numerous other "Ancient Classics for English Readers," reduced from $1 to as low as 15 cents each.
Bacon's Essays, 15 cents to 40 cents.
Dore's famous Bible Gallery, $2.
Irving's Sketch Book, 25 to 60 cents.
Irving's Works, in 6 large and most beautiful volumes, $4.
Ancient Egypt under the Pharoahs, reduced from $15 to $1.25.
Scott's Waverley Novels, reduced from $30 to $7.50.
George Eliot's Works, from $12 to $3.75.

It is certainly worth a postal card to get the catalogue free. For that, address John B. Alden, Publisher, 18 Vesey St., New York.

The contents of the November number of Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine present a large variety of interesting and edifying reading, and are rich in illustrations. The opening article, by Professor V. L. Conrad, Ph. D., "Luther and his Work," is timely and full of interest. "Mr. Burke's Nieces," a charming serial, is continued, and there are short stories, sketches and essays by some of our most popular writers, lay and clerical. There are poems of great merit; the "Home Pulpit," with sermon by Dr Talmage, the "Collection Basket," "Obituaries," "Editorial Comments," etc., and an abundant miscellany, amusing and instructive. The price is only 25 cents a number, or $3 a year, post paid. MRS. FRANK LESLIE, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

Foremost among household magazines is DEMOREST'S MONTHLY, which for utility, variety, and artistic excellence cannot be surpassed. The November number compares very favorably with its predecessors. "Agathe De Valsuze" is continued, and there are several shorter stories of an interesting nature. Among the many excellent articles may be mentioned "Luther's Ring," and "Sugar," "Jennie June's "How We Live in New York—Keeping a Boarding House." Fancy Work," Science and Fashion and other reading matter combine to make the November number of this capital magazine both useful and enjoyable. There is a beautiful steel engraving of Hick's celebrated picture "Enid, a Saxon Maiden." We are promised in the December number the first chapters of a fine serial story by Mrs. Champney, author of "Three Vassar Girls," and other novels.

THE CHURCH AND STAGE.—While orthodox Christians in this country very generally frown on the stage and all its belongings, it is not to be disguised that the prejudice against actors and theatres is not so marked as it was, say twenty years ago. One of the most beautiful and successful theaters in New York is owned by a couple of clergymen who are also proprietors of the Churchman, the official organ of the Episcopal denomination. Rev. Robert Collier and other liberal, as well as Episcopal, clergymen openly visit the New York theaters and no scandal is caused thereby. In England the Bishop and clergymen of the national church attend operas and theaters the same as other people; but more remarkable than all, the Christian World, the leading London organ of the Nonconformists, recently contained a leading editorial, giving Mr. Henry Irving a "God speed," apropos of his departure to America. Mr. Geo. Macdonald is a clergyman, yet he frequently appears as an amateur actor on semi-public occasions. The theater is growing in popularity in this country. A large space is given to dramatic news in all our journals. It is for Christian people to say what course they shall pursue in the future. It is idle to ignore the stage or condem it by wholesale. After all, who not try to moralize it and free it from objectionable associations? —Demorest's Monthly for November.

While the veterans of the 40th regiment were engaged in the enjoyment of their reunion at the Willows, Salem, last week, a woman somewhat advanced in years was noticed going about the grounds, gazing intently first at one group of men and then at another, meanwhile wiping away the tears that seemingly could not be repressed. Her longing looks moved one of the regiment to inquire for whom she was seeking, upon which she replied: "Sir, I am looking for no one in particular, but twenty-one years ago my son went out with you, and hearing you were to have your reunion, I have come to look in the faces of my dead boy's companions. He died in South Carolina, the youngest drummer-boy in your regiment. It is a precious satisfaction to see you. God bless you all!" With which she withdrew.—Boston Commonwealth, Sept. 29.

SARSAPARILLIAN HYGIENIC WINE.

What D. N. GRIFFIN, dealer in Clothing, Hats, Caps and Gents' Furnishing Goods says about it:

Having used RAYMOND'S HYGIENIC WINE in my family, I take pleasure in recommending it to the public as being a safe, delicious and highly beneficial tonic, in short, all that it is claimed to be.

D. N. GRIFFIN, Beverly.

I have been acquainted with B. F. RAYMOND for five years and have always found him a man of unimpeachable character, and business integrity. What can be said of him can be said of his medicine, there is no humbug about it. DANIEL W. BARTLETT, Chairman Selectmen, Essex.

WALTER FLINT, 29 Federal St, Beverly, Mass, says: "I had measles very badly this last winter. Was left with a bad cough and very weak. After staying at home for several weeks, after getting out of doors, I commenced to go to school. Cough was so bad and strength so poor that Physician ordered me to leave school. I took a great deal of medicine, but nothing seemed to help me. Cough seemed to grow worse instead of better. Some one recommended Sarsaparillian Hygienic Wine. I tried it, and before I had taken one half a bottle, I was back to school, and cough was better. After taking whole bottle, cough was entirely cured, and felt strong and hearty."

The first meeting of the Schubert Club was held in Plummer Hall last Wednesday evening. Mr. Winch announced to the club his intention of sailing for Europe Oct. 31st, and would send in his place Mr. G. W. Chadwick, of Boston, a thorough musician and a person fully competent to direct the Club. Mr. Winch urged on the members of the organization the necessity of a regular attendance at rehearsals while he was away, and said he hoped and expected when he resumed his baton to find the Club in good training. Mr. Winch and Mr. Chadwick will both be present this evening at the rehearsal of the club. It is proposed to give Mr. Winch a complimentary benefit next week Wednesday, at which the club, assisted by Mr. Winch and eminent talent, will take part.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL

Crowded houses at every performance is the rule at the Boston Theatre. The matinee performances Saturday are a great convenience to out of town residents and we observed a goodly number of our citizens present last Saturday afternoon. Mr. Getz's scenery is the most elaborate which ever came from the brush of that famous painter. Mr. Getz has few equals, and no superior in America as a designer and painter of scenery. His work is one of the three factors which have led to the success of "Jalma" as a spectacle. The other two factors are the ballets and the grand march, both designed by M. Mamert. The "Rainbow ballet" is an indescribable combination of color, grouping and graceful movement, while the march of the silver army in the illuminated palace of Prince Beulah is the most dazzling, stirring and perfect picture of its kind ever seen upon our stage. "Jalma" is the success of the season. The Boston Theatre, above all dramatic fanes on the continent, is especially adapted to the production of spectacular displays, and there is no doubt that if the management decided to devote the house entirely to such displays, success would wait upon their efforts. Their present venture warrants such belief, for "Jalma" is a triumph of theatric art.

At the Bijou Theatre, Mr. Charles Wyndham and his company begin this week an engagement of six weeks. The bill for the first week will be the comedy of "Fourteen Days," which met with much favor here at another house last season, preceded by the comedietta of "Ruth's Romance." The cast is as follows: Peregrine Porter, Mr. Charles Wyndham; Claude Delafield, Mr. H. R. Teesdale; Brummels, Mr. W. Blakely; Timothy Gibson, Mr. George Giddens; Jones, Mr. Horatio Saker; Col. Gunthrope, Sir Randal Roberts; Angelina Porter, Miss Kate Rorke; Fanny Simpson, Miss R. Morreys; Tibbets, Miss E. Vining. New scenery and accessories have been prepared especially for this production.

The Madison Square Theatre Co. appear at the Park Theatre this week in "Young Mrs. Winthrop," which is one of the best plays of that company and which had a run of 250 nights. The cast will include Mr. E. J. Buckley, Miss Carrie Turner, Miss Maud Stuart, Miss Ada Dyas, and others of note. The scenery which is used in the first, second and fourth acts is constructed of wood and brass. The metal was cut by hand in India, where it is used for decorating rooms dedicated to special ceremonials. The walls and ceiling of the scene contain over 200 oriental designs, and their full beauty can only be appreciated by a minute inspection through an opera glass. In addition to the original scenery used at the Madison Square Theatre, the company brings its own carpets and gas fixtures.

Miss Margaret Mather was much frightened and quite painfully bruised by a fall caused by the breaking of the balcony railing, while she was acting Juliet in St. Paul, one night last week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence will appear at the Park Theatre on the 20th inst. in "Facts," the successful new play written for them by Messrs. Geo. H. Jessup and William B. Gill.

Beginning next Monday evening, Messrs. Moulton & Johnson will bring the celebrated "Lights o' London" company to Mechanic Hall for one week. There will be performances every evening and Wednesday and Saturday afternoons. The scenery will be new and everything that will contribute to a first class performance will be done for the patrons.

An audience composed of the finest musical people of Salem, witnessed the performance of Virginia in Mechanic Hall, last Monday evening, by the company of the Bijou Theatre of Boston. The opera was well performed; and fully sustained the well known reputation of the company, which have played "Virginia" at the home theatre for several weeks.

We have always regarded the Troy Evening Standard to be a truth-telling paper, but what shall we think of this: "A wretched old bachelor, armed with a bell-punch, concealed himself in a picnic woods near the city and tried to count how often a certain courting couple kissed each other. In trying to keep up he overworked his hand so badly that the entire arm became paralyzed."

A day or two ago on the Central road a young man rushed into a parlor car and shouted at the top of his lungs: "Is there a minister of the gospel in this car?" "I am one," replied a tall, clerical looking young man grasping the brother by the hand. "A young lady has fainted in the next coach; won't you be kind enough to lend me your whiskey flask?"

A young couple were found out at the front gate one night recently, locked in each other's arms. They said the combination was lost, and they said they could not get it because the janitor was asleep.

The Essex So. Conference of Congregational Churches meets to-morrow, Oct. 18, with the Chestnut St. Church in this city. Rev. E. S. Atwood, of Salem, will deliver an essay in the morning. In the afternoon there will be a discussion between Revs. F. G. Clark, and J. W. Colwell of So. Peabody.

The course of free lectures which was given last season in Odd Fellows' Hall, and which was so highly satisfactory and well attended, it is proposed to follow with another similar series during the coming season. The lectures will be by Dr. Bolles of Salem, Prof. William North Rice, George Parsons Gilman and Prof. James F. Babcock.

The senior member of the law firm of Edgerly & Connell, Burlington, Kan., is believed to be Albert W. Edgerly, formerly of this city.

A considerable portion of the employes of the American Electric Lighting Company are at work at the West Lynn factory, but the entire complement will not be employed there for some time as yet.

The furnishings of the Boscobel, the new hotel being built by Minot Tirrell, are said to be very elaborate. Ex-Mayor Sanderson is to be the manager.—There are eighty rooms in the hotel. All the large and roomy stores below have been rented. The date of the formal opening will soon be announced.

Those elegant little programmes tendering the compliments of that most enterprising and successful establishment, the house of Messrs. Wm. B. Gifford & Co., to the patrons of the E. K. Hood Course on the opening night, will in the main be carefully treasured as cherished souvenirs of a most enjoyable evening.

Call men of the fire department have heretofore been paid twice a year, in February and July. They will now be paid weekly, about $1.50 each.

The elegant piano to be given to one of the patrons of the New England Clothing Co. is attracting a deal of attention.

Mildred, the little daughter of Minot Tirrell, Esq., was thrown from a carriage on So. Common street, yesterday morning. She was being driven to school by the coachman, and when near Church street, the horses became unmanageable, and the team collided with the grocery wagon of E. J. Caverly, throwing little Millie to the ground. She was picked up unconscious and conveyed to her home, where she died at about 9.30 A. M. Mr. and Mrs. Tirrell were absent from home and were hastily sent for.

A prominent citizen received yesterday at his place of business, a call from two old schoolmates, whom he had not seen for years. Of course he was delighted and invited them home to dine. Now l. c. was in the habit of lunching down town at noon and carrying his dinner home with him at night; but his friends were obliged to leave on an afternoon train, and it was necessary that they should dine at noon, but as the house had nothing provided quite up to the mark the host proceeded to procure supplies. He telephoned to his provision dealer for a pair of chickens with the request that they be sent to his wife with the information that he would bring company home at noon. What name? asked the clerk, who did not recognize his customer's voice at once.

Warren—we will call it—was the reply. Now Warren was his surname, but there was another regular customer whose given name happened to be Warren—say Warren Jones—and the clerk supposing it to be him sent the order to his house, where it was duly put under treatment. At noon l. c., with his two friends went home, to find no dinner, of course, chickens or anything else, and no wife to do the honors, as she was out shopping. To say that l. c. was surprised don't begin to express it. He explained to his friends that there was some mistake and adjourned to a hotel.—Newburyport Germ.

A GOOD THING

And a rare bargain, no matter where, or by whom offered, speedily becomes known and talked of throughout a city. The announcements of our special bargains from time to time, are responded to by customers, not so much in proportion to advertising as to the merit of the thing offered.

We make to-day the Simple Announcement of Another Special Sale for One Week, and we expect as a Result to Close out the Entire Lot.

The Special Bargain we offer is a full line of

LADIES' PEBBLE GOAT, STRAIGHT GOAT, AND FRENCH KID BUTTON,

WE DID, and our business to-day is a pleasing monument of its kindly reception by the people of Lynn, Swampscott, Saugus, Nahant, Marblehead, Peabody, Danvers, Lynnfield, Salem, &c., to whom we are more than thankful.

THE MINISTER WHO FAILS to interest his congregation and build up his church is generally accused of being a poor preacher, or of not studying hard enough. That is not always where the trouble comes from. Dyspepsia and liver disorders are responsible for many a dull sermon and many a vacant pulpit. When the Dominie's digestive apparatus is working wrong and his nerves are giving him pain, and his brain refuses to do its duty, it is almost impossible to make or to preach a good sermon. Give your suffering minister a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters. You will see its effect on next Sunday's preaching. The Rev. Mr. Zehring, of Codorus, Pa., was paralyzed, and could not walk except with crutches, until Brown's Iron Bitters made a new man of him. The Rev. Mr. White, of Rock Hill, S. C., says: "It restored me to strength and vigor." Brown's Iron Bitters is not only for the minister, but for all people.

In style, prices and patterns, we have nothing lacking. This is one of our BEST departments, and we have everything new as soon as it is in the market.

LACE DEPARTMENT.

We have an elegant assortment of French Novelties in Pompadour Fichus, Collars, Scarfs, Chemisettes and Jersey Collars. The finest assortment of goods ever shown in the market. Our sales ladies will take great pleasure in exhibiting the goods to any who wish to see them.

CLOAK & SUIT DEP'T.

We bought this season in our Cloak and Suit departments all the Ladies' and Misses' Jackets, Dolmans, Havelocks, New Markets, and Jerseys, from a leading Berlin Importer. They are made in Germany by regular tailors, perfect fitting, and of much better cloth and better made than the American make, and cost much less, saving from 50 cts. to $1. on each garment.

Misses' Sacks, from 4 to 16 years, from $2.00 to $4.00.

Havelocks, sizes from 4 to 14 years, from $2.50 to $4.00.

This is just a specimen of the way our Sacks will be sold.

In Ladies' Sacks, our $3.50 ones are a special bargain.

Our Black Dolmans, which we are selling for $8.50, make our competitors wonder and our customers smile. Our stock of Ready-Made Goods is complete in sizes, style, shade and prices.

MILLINERY DEP'T.

The Millinery Department is one of our oldest, and we can say with pride that there is no better Millinery Department in the city. We bought direct from Importers and Manufacturers. That means that we are able to sell our goods at the prices which buyers usually have to pay the Jobbers,—that is at least a saving of from 20 to 33 per cent. to all who buy of us in Millinery. Besides, you can find a large assortment of Hats, Bonnets, Velvets, Feathers, Silks, etc. Our Trimmed Hats are all made in our work-room (no borrowed goods), by an English lady trimmer. Our twenty years' experience enables us to understand what the public need, and our acquaintance with the Importers enables us to buy our goods so that we can compete in selling with one and all.

We cannot mention all our departments, it would take more than three Presses. We will only give an index to a few of them.

DRESS GOODS DEP'T.

WONDERFUL BARGAINS.

2 cases Flannel Dress Goods in choice mixtures, only 12 1-2c. cost to manufacture 19 cts.

75 pieces Armure Dress Goods, double width, in all the new Fall shades, only 37 1-2 cts. This is a rare chance to get a good dress cheap, for they are really worth 62 1-2 cts. per yard.

59 pieces all wool Chudda Dress Goods, 44 inches wide, only 50 cts. per yd. Never sold less than 75 cts.

We have just received a choice line of Gilbert's Plaid Sackings for Dress wear and Wraps.

Also a complete line of Ottoman Cords and Jersey Weaves, at prices wonderfully low.

BLACK SILKS,

AT HALF the ORIGINAL COST

20 pieces good Black Dress Silk, only 65 cts. worth 87 cts.

17 pieces heavy Black Dress Silk, 75c.; would be cheap at $1.00.

9 pieces 24 inch Black Dress Silk, $1.00 per yard; never sold less than $1.50.

8 pieces heavy Cashmere finish Black Silk, $1.25; sold everywhere for $1.75 per yard.

D. CONRAD,

SALEM, MASS.

The Peabody Press.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

THE MARBLEHEAD correspondent of the Lynn Bee appears greatly disturbed because Benj. Pitman, the nominee of the Republicans for Senator from this district is liable to get a large number of the votes of the laboring men in that town. That's just what he will do—not only there but elsewhere in the district. Mr. Pitman is a man of the people. It is to the credit of the Republicans that he was selected.

GEN. BUTLER denies the responsibility of the removal of Mr. Bovey, the well known Andersonville prisoner, but admits that he approved of the action of his subordinate. He takes occasion, also, to say that the new appointee is also a soldier and a prisoner, and that he did not think one man should keep the office for an indefinite period, but should, in common parlance, "give the other man a chance." What is the chance that he gives to the other man? Mr. Shepard, who has been appointed in place of Mr. Bovey, was city clerk of Lawrence, and enjoyed a lucrative and satisfactory position. He did not need the office which Mr. Bovey had. But Mr. Bovey must go simply because Mr. Tarbox wanted Mr. Shepard. And this is what they call "turning the rascals out." To change the quotation, Butlerism must go!

THE NOMINATION of Benj. Pitman of Marblehead as Senator from this district is one eminently fit to be made. It was generally understood that the Convention would unite upon whomsoever the Marblehead delegation should present, and when it was known that their choice was Mr. Pitman, it was generally conceded as a wise selection on their part. Mr. Pitman has been superintendent of Harris' shoe factory for many years; and in all his relations with the workmen under his charge, while faithful to the interests of his employers, has won the respect and love of the men. In the recent labor difficulty in Marblehead, his influence, in a great measure, solved the problem which gave the men their rights and a continued opportunity of earning their bread without leaving town. He served with honor in the rebellion, and is known to every Grand Army man in the district. He is a clear headed, every day sort of a man, and will do honor to the district, which we believe will elect him.

MARK ALLEN, the editor of the Woburn Advertiser, is an old line democrat, and has been ever since we knew him. This is the way the publication of the Governor's picture book strikes him: To a self-respecting Democrat it is humiliating to the last degree to witness the fact of the Governor of this Commonwealth and the candidate of a party, which has for years in the past upheld sound principles of government and contended for the best interests of the people, lending his aid and countenance in circulating broadcast throughout the State, as a campaign document, a cheaply gotten up illustrated pamphlet, which outrivals in nastiness the "Police Gazette" and other publications of that class. To us, it is sickening, as it should be to all decent-minded Democrats. If it has come to this, that any portion of the Democratic party demand such trash to stimulate them to work for the success of their ticket in the campaign before us, then, God save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts! God save the Democratic party!

AT THE Caucus of the Republican party, the other evening, Mr. Chas. A. Haskell made a speech which was not reported, but which had the true ring. He condemned the practice which has been too prevalent in times past, of sending the same men to represent the party at the different conventions. He gave an instance of a gentleman who had left the Republican party and joined the greenbackers, because, as he said, he could be sent occasionally to a convention. Mr. Haskell hit the nail on the head. The feeling which has been shared by the leaders of the party here and elsewhere, that only certain men were worthy of representing them, has alienated many and made many more indifferent and lukewarm. We are glad to know that the present town committee are heartily in sympathy with these remarks which Mr. Haskell made, and have endeavored, as far as is in their power, to give the humblest voter in the ranks equal honor with those who have been delegates to the different conventions for the past twenty years. It is, in fact, a very democratic committee. It is doing good and effective work, and its efforts are being warmly seconded and sustained by the party. Many who have taken little interest in politics of late are this year actively interested, and if we do not carry the town against Butler, we shall make such a showing as will convince our opponents that the Republicans are not yet dead.

WHEN THE prohibitory people disfellowship a man like Faxon, or a woman like Mrs. M. A. Livermore, the animus of the movement is plainly to be seen. It is not that prohibition of of the liquor traffic is a good thing, but it must be accomplished in their own way, and all who dare to express a contrary opinion, no matter what their well-known principles, in the words of the New York Sun, must go.

Now, we venture the assertion that there are just as good temperance people—prohibitionists if you will—who are not able to see how a vote for Gen. Butler will advance the cause. They also can see that a vote for Almy is a vote against the republican nominee.—The democrats never lose anything by a prohibition vote. The prohibition issue, in any campaign, never defeats the democratic candidates. It is only the republicans, who in this state have aided in all the temperance legislation that has been obtained, who must suffer.—Why is this? Is there any other reason than that these hot headed people, who were never democrats, and who could not rule the republican party, are determined to ruin it?

No legislation on temperance can be obtained in advance of public sentiment. Prohibition in this state — in any state—does not mean the suppression of the liquor traffic; it means its concealment, it means the driving of it into secret places, and the fostering of deceit, hypocrisy and fraud. But a restriction of its sale, and its possible prohibition when the people have been educated to see its advantage, can be obtained. This aid the republican party has been ready to give, and has given. But it has not been ready to follow the wild vagaries of the so-called prohibitory leaders. On the contrary the democratic party, with its entire following, has been opposed to any restriction of the traffic.

In some cases, notably in Ohio, the party has been induced to try the issue of prohibitory legislation. The result has been failure. The success of the democrats in Ohio is due principally to this cause. The defeat of Gov. St. John, in Kansas, was also on this issue. In every case the democratic party, the party of free rum, has gained by the issue; the republican party, through whose efforts an advance in temperance legislation has been obtained, has been defeated. With these facts in plain sight we fail to see how any consistent temperance man can give aid by his vote to the party from whom they have so little in common, and from whom they can expect no assistance.

WE WERE prepared for any amount of abuse of the Republicans at the hands of Gov. Butler, but nothing he has said or done exceeds in malevolence the attack upon Julius L. Clarke in his speech last week. It will be remembered that Mr. Clarke resigned the office of Insurance Commissioner at the bidding of Gen. Butler, and it is now known why he did it. Gen. Butler had detectives on his track and it was found that when a young man, nearly fifty years ago, he had been convicted of the larceny of an overcoat. Butler threatened exposure, and Mr. Clarke, who had lived down the crime, quietly retired, leaving the office at the disposal of Gen. Butler. It was understood that in consideration of such withdrawal his secret should be safe. Neither his children nor his intimate friends knew it, and for the last forty-five years there had been no stain upon his character.

But Gov. Butler, not content with the spoils of the office to be given to his followers, must break his word and expose him before the world. Nothing that Mr. Clarke had done led to it. He has not been opposing him, but has remained quietly at his home, with his invalid wife and family. The reason given by Butler for the attack was because of the republican statement that some of Mayor Palmer's appointees were men who had been convicted of crime. If Mr. Clarke were in office this might seem a reasonable excuse; the fact that Mayor Palmer's appointees have no intention of resigning is a sufficient reason for the exposure on the part of the Republicans.

We have no desire to defend the crime of Mr. Clarke, if such it was.—But we know not under what temptations it was committed, and we do know that the young man who has been guilty of such an act is more than liable to make it a stepping stone to other and greater crimes. That it was not so in this case, that he was pardoned because of his previous good character, that despite the stigma attached to his name, he rose above it, lived it down, and won instead an honorable name, is to his credit. Shame on the man who will not help his brother who is trying to reform! It is the basis of all moral and religious education, and without such encouragement who of us would be as good citizens as we are to-day? There are few men living at the age of Mr. Clarke who cannot point to some act in their lives, some youthful indiscretion or folly, which they would not wish revealed to the world. Is one such act to outweigh forty or fifty years of honor and trust?

We speak advisedly when we say honor and trust. For the past ten years or more Mr. Clarke has been Grand Treasurer of the Grand Lodge of the Order of Odd Fellows. That trust has been faithfully performed; and in that office, as well as in others within the gift of the order, he has won the confidence and respect of those with whom he has been associated. We also believe that in the office from which he was displaced by Gov. Butler, he was as faithful, efficient and trustworthy as the present incumbent.

We entirely mistake the principles of Odd Fellowship, and the feelings of the brethren throughout the state, if they do not resent, in the most pointed manner, this insult to one of their trusted officials. It will cost Gen. Butler more votes than he can easily estimate. Odd Fellowship is not a political institution; all parties — all creeds, are represented therein. But in friendship and brotherly love, we believe they will not allow such an uncalled-for indignity to one of their order to go unrebuked. Shame upon Massachusetts when its Governor must needs trample upon the past life of one of its private citizens for the furtherance of his own ends, and for his re-election to office!

PEABODY.

Saturday evening a fellow who had been hanging about one of our stores picked up a hammer and made off with t. The theft was discovered at once, and he was followed so closely that he dropped the hammer. Quite a foot race followed in which the fellow escaped.

There are some men and women in this town who are the happiest when circulating reports derogatory of the character of good and true men and women. Such people exist everywhere, and the meanest and most detestable of human beings are these same scandal mongers.

The members of the Peabody fire club having voted to donate the surplus money of the club to the Old Ladies' home, the Exchange News Room voted to abate the assessment of that club and have the sum due the News Room from the fire club go for the same worthy object.

Complaint is made of the profane language and disgraceful conduct of a number of half grown boys, last Sunday evening, on Grove street. They had been indulging in beer or whiskey, and were in a condition to have several fights and wake people up with their revolting oaths.

Mr. L. W. Mason, author of the music books and charts used in the public schools of this town, visited the Centre School to-day, and illustrated his method of teaching, by giving the pupils a lesson. Mr. Mason has for some time past been teaching music by his methods, in Japan.

It is laughable to see how closely the authorities stick to the almanac in lighting the street lamps. It does not make the least difference how dark it is, if the almanac says there is a moon sailing around somewhere in the upper region the lamps are left unlighted. And it is just as likely to be a last year's almanac as this year's one.

At the meeting of the Montana International Sunday School convention, recently held at Helena, Rev. L. L. Wood was elected permanent secretary of the organization, and also conducted a review of the Sunday school lesson for the day. Reports showed the number of schools in the territory to be 40; teachers 275, and scholars 2000.

The suit of Mr. David T. Winter against the New York, Erie & Western Railroad, was decided in favor of Mr. Winter, and damages awarded amounting to $2991.60. This is the case where Mr. W. was dropped at midnight along side the railroad, by an over officious conductor, and an attachment wa placed on a car at Aaron F. Clark's.

The Republican members of the Essex Club will have a grand time next week(probably next Wednesday evening) when they will throw to the breeze an elegant Robinson & Ames flag from their block to the other side of the street. There will be fireworks and music by the Salem Cadet Band, followed by speakers to be announced.

The fall is the best season to apply tree ink for the prevention of the ravages of canker worms during next season. The insects ascend the trees in the fall to deposit the eggs, but the application of tree ink prevents their ascent and the consequent ravages of the worms. The best kind of tree ink —Morrill's—is for sale at the PRESS office.

The tenth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Geo. M. Frost, was observed at their residence, Tuesday evening of last week. It was a very pleasant family gathering, none but immediate relatives and friends being present. A number of people from out of town were present. Numerous articles of tin ware and others more valuable were presented.

The weather on Sunday was remarkably warm, the mercury touching 80°. Early Sunday morning rain fell heavily for a short time, and there was a smart thunder shower Sunday afternoon between 3 and 4 o' clock, the total precipitation being a little more than three-fourths of an inch. The wind blew fresh from the southwest all day and in the evening shifted to the northwest.

The room of the W. C. T. Union was filled last Sabbath night to listen to Rev. Mr. Chipman, as he met the Band of Hope and spoke to them words of wisdom and encouragement, alluding to his own experience as a temperance boy from his earliest recollections. Dr. F. A. Gardner will address the meeting next Sabbath night at 6.

The chairs for the lower hall of the new Town Building have been ordered from New York. They consist of two chairs fastened together in the form of a seat, which can be folded up like a camp chair and removed when it is desired to clear the hall. Seats for 520 will thus be provided in that hall. It has been decided to tint the walls of the entrances and around the hall, and also the hall itself. It will take two weeks or more to do this job, and the chairs for the lower hall will not arrive until about that time. The stairs are all completed. The iron balustrade to be put around the front of the balcony has arrived; as well as some of the gas fixtures. It is to be regretted that there seems no possibility of using the large hall before election, and if better progress is not made than has been of late, it may be December before the building is delivered to the town.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Nearly a hundred people gathered at Buxton's field last Saturday afternoon to witness the third game of ball between the Toughs and Tenders. The Tenders took the lead in the second inning and maintained it throughout, and turned the tables on their opponents to the time of 19 to 16. Though a large part of the Toughs' Club was absent, it was strengthened by taking several good players from other local clubs. By consent of the Tender Captain, the Tonghs retired Blaney in the second inning and McCarty filled the vacancy. The playing was an improvement over previous attempts and the exhibition was more interesting. Peirce was thought too small to catch, but did well as a short stop. Ferrin and McCarthy caught finely. Some quick double plays were made by skill and not accident. Wells made a phenomenal catch that astonished everyone. All played well. Fred Carleton acted as umpire of the game, which lasted two hours and twenty minutes. Below is the score by innings.

The regular meeting of the Unity Club was held last Monday evening, at the parlors of the Unitarian Church. A constitution and by laws was adopted, a plan of the work for the winter was laid out, and officers chosen for the ensuing year. The following are the officers elected: President, H. F. Walker: Vice Presidents, Miss Carrie Lummus, G. Fred Osgood; Treasurer, Warren Wilson; Secretary, Wm. H. Osgood; Collectors, Miss Mary Forness and Marian Taylor; Literary Committee, Rev. J. W. Hudson, J. Henry Osgood, Alice C. Teel; Executive Committee, Mrs. J. W. Hudson, Nathaniel Simonds, Mrs. J. Henry Osgood; Committee on membership, A. E. Wells, Martha Barrett, Willie Hill. The meeting Monday evening was large and enthusiastic. The next regular meeting will be held with Miss L. Maria Winchester.

We have had come to us this week a maltese and white female cat. Now we have no particular use for a female maltese cat, and have thrown out all kinds of hints to have her leave, including the blacking brush and the proof roller, but still she lingers. Connected with our office force we have an old black cat of the Thomas persuasion, who has shared the hardships of the office for the past half dozen years. His life was blighted in youth by being obliged to answer to the name of "Ben. Butler." At the present time he is away on a short vacation, but when he returns we are afraid that f. m. c. will find the location not congenial to her health, and light out suddenly.

By the decease of William H. Pickering, who passed away Sunday, Oct. 7, the community has lost a respected citizen, and his neighbors a friend in time of need. Mr. Pickering had been ill for some years, not however confined to the house until within two months. After long and severe suffering, which he bore with great patience, he is at rest. He was by trade a carpenter, and was for many years in the employ of the old firm of Clark & Giddings. He leaves a widow and one daughter. His funeral was attended Tuesday afternoon of last week, Rev. Mr. Smith, assisted by Dr. Daniel Steele, his former pastor, officiating.

[This notice was in type last week, but was accidentally overlooked.—Eds. Press.]

When the town was liberally supplied with pumps there was always a cry about some one stealing the dippers. No such trouble exists at that last relic of former days, the pump, at the junction of Central and Andover streets. On the old pump log there gather daily the veterans who vie with each other in telling yarns about their big crops and former associates. And each story is washed down by a drink of water from one of the most dilapidated dippers that was ever detatched from a chain. Yet that old dipper stands the service like a veteran.

Mr. Nathaniel C. Patterson has the sympathy of the entire community in the bereavement which has come to him and his family, in the loss of a daughter, from that scourge of our New England climate. Miss Caddie E. Patterson was a young lady unusually beloved by the circle of friends who knew her; but that love was powerless against the disease which had too evidently set its seal upon her. For some months past, her family and friends have hoped against hope, until it was found that the end must come. Her age was 21 years, 1 mo. Her funeral was attended yesterday afternoon.

Many were the beautiful tokens to her memory from sorrowing friends and acquaintances. The class of '81, of the high school of which she was a member, presented an exquisite set of red and white pinks in the form of a star, crescent and pillow upon which were the words "class-mate" in blue everlasting. A large pillow of white pinks and calla lilies surmounted by the word "rest" was exceedingly beautiful. A lyre of roses with broken strings, the gift of friends at Frank Cousins' store, Salem, was very appropriate. A star in colored flowers—the gift of Mr. Frank Cousins—was very beautiful. A large anchor from a distant friend and other tokens of sympathy were placed about the open casket. Her life, like the flowers which filled the room, has always been pure and innocent and it can hardly be realized that she has passed from us. Mrs. Benj. Upton and daughter sang words of comfort before and after the service at which Rev. Mr. Atwood of Salem officiated.

Mr. A. E. Cady, who commenced a canvass of the town for the People's Cyclopedia has been obliged to leave the work unfinished in order to resume his studies in the West; he has left the agency in the hands of Mr. A. H. Merrill who will be pleased to show the Cyclopedia to any one who would like to examine it. This work should be owned by every young man in the country, whatever his position, business, or occupation, as it furnishes information in a condensed form on every subject pertaining to History, Literature, Art, Science, and the business world. It contains more topics than any other Encyclopedia yet published, including the Britannica, Chambers', Appleton's and Johnson's, and is written up to the present year, 1883. We advise every person who does not possess a Cyclopedia, and all others who want the latest and best, to make an examination of this exceedingly valuable work. The very low price at which it is sold places it within the reach of every one, especially as those who desire can make payments upon the instalment plan. The People's Cyclopedia is published in three volumes and bound in three styles of binding, fitting it for a place in the counting room, library or parlor.

Last Saturday night a resident in the rear of Elm street, saw a man prowling around near Albert Poor's hen coop at a late hour, and immediately visions of the work of an incendiary floated through his dazed brain, and hastily dressing himself, he secured an old army musket that had done service in many a fourth-of-July racket and started out intending to waylay the bold fire bug, who by this time had reached the old coaches in Mr. C. O. Stone's yard. The would-be-slayer of fire bugs quietly dropped behind a fence with his trusty musket poi ting at the placewhere the f. b. would attempt to escape. An hour passed and benumbed with the cold and wet with the dews of heaven which fall upon the just and the unjust, he arose from his cramped position and cautiously investigated the situation, but all was still and the game had fled. Upon inquiry the next morning it was found that the one who had given him all this anxiety, was Mr. Horace Hart, who lives in the vicinity and was returning home that way from Mr. George Stevens' store.

A correspondent wants to know why the PRESS don't publish at the head of its editorial columns, the Republican Ticket as in former years. "Space is as valuable as time to a newspaper which aims to offer to its readers all the news" and the PRESS' departure from the custom of its former proprietor, is due to a necessity which we know our readers will appreciate. It will be our endeavor to fill the space which the ticket would occupy, with reasons why it should be elected.

There was a glory of northern lights one night last week. Besides the usual palpitating light in the north, there was during part of the display a faint dim cloud of aurora in the northwest. After the usual show was over a narrow band of white light shot up from the northern sky, remaining for some minutes. It was very beautiful and was over before nine o'clock.

The following correspondence between postmaster Randall and the Department at Washington, in reference to the keys of the lock drawers and boxes is of interest to the readers of the PRESS. It shows that as far as our postmaster is concerned, everything has been done by him consistent with his duty, to place the matter before the Post Office department in its proper light, and places all the responsibility of the course which he is reluctantly compelled to take upon the officials at Washington:—

PEABODY, ESSEX CO., MASS.
Sept. 24th, 1883.

HON. FRANK HATTON.

Sir:—I must with all due respect, request your attention to the application of the key deposit rulings, to this office. I have had considerable correspondence already, relative to it; and should not trouble you again were I not desirous that the service of this office should be co-efficient and discriminating as to merit the approbation, both of the department and of the public. At the risk of trespassing upon your attention I again state the position of affairs here. My predecessor put in lock boxes and drawers, part of them ten years ago, and the parties who took them (who in most instances still retain them) paid him $2.75 for the box and keys. Leaving out of the question the justice or the right of such sales, it does appear to me that the box holders have made a pretty full deposit with a representative of the department. If my predecessor was not under obligation to render any account of his receipts for the boxes, it is certainly rather hard for them to pay again. If he was under obligation to do so and has not, his neglect ought not now to impose any further burden on them. I am enforcing the regulation impartially, but it is creating much dissatisfaction and unpleasant feeling, especially in view of the fact that other officials view their instructions in a different light from what they appear to me and their lock box holders are not receiving so general or imperative a demand for a deposit as have those at this office. Believing that you will see the justice of modifying the application of the order to this office, I am, etc.,

GEO. RANDALL.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

OFFICE OF THE FIRST ASSISTANT POSTMASTER GENERAL.
Washington, D. C., Oct. 1, '83.

Sir:—Your communication of the 24th ult., objecting to Circular No. 1228 from this office, relative to Deposits for Keys to Post Office Drawers and Lock Boxes, and requesting that your office be excepted from a compliance with the provisions of that Circular, is received. The provisions of Circular No. 1228 must be complied with.

Very respectfully,
JAMES H. MAN,
Acting First Assist. Postmaster Gen.

It has been stated in these columns that it was generally supposed that the Methodist Church of this town were indebted to the late Mrs. Abel Proctor for the clock on their edifice. This is now known to be a positive fact. A letter from Rev. Dr. Steele read in that church last Sabbath, explains the matter, and by a vote of the Official Board of that church we publish it:

To the Methodist Episcopal Church and Congregation in Peabody:

One year ago this Church and Congregation requested their pastor to communicate their earnest thanks to the donor of the beautiful clock which adorns the tower of this church, whose name was to be unknown till death should permit it to be published. During the past week the noble form of the donor has been carried to its burial after her long life of usefulness, and the veil of secrecy by which modesty vainly strove to hide her face from the public gaze has been removed. Be it known, therefore, to you all that the clock which indicate to you the hour of prayer, and to your children the hour of school, and to all the people of Peabody that it is time to seek the Lord, was the sole gift of Mrs. Abel Proctor, seconded and encouraged in this beneficence by her son, Mr. Thomas E. Proctor, who, doubtless, voiced the assent of all her children.

To the whole family, therefore, the thanks of this church and of the people of Peabody, are due for this public benefaction.

As when the original Endicott pear tree died, it was pleasant to find that shoots from the same root remained to bear the same kind of fruit, so it is pleasant to know that this Christian woman has left behind her children animated by the same unselfish spirit.—May they live long to bear fruit of the same grateful flavor, is the prayer of

Your former pastor,
DANIEL STEELE.

A special freight train on the E. R. R., jumped the track near Middleton last Wednesday afternoon, caused by the draw bar breaking. A brakeman named William Lane, 21 years old, who was standing on the top of the train at the time, was thrown from the car in such a way, that his leg became caught under the car, crushing it in a terrible manner. He remained under the car some 30 minutes, owing to railroad hands not having proper appliances for raising the car. The injured man after being relieved was conveyed to the Salem Hospital as soon as possible where the injured member was amputated below the knee. He did not survive the shock, and died shortly after the operation had been performed.

Mr. Murphy, the farmer, says he has raised forty-eight and one-half bushels of potatoes this year on a piece of land not larger than a garden patch. We tried to get him to make it even fifty, but he wouldn't add to or take from these figures a single bushel.

DROWNED IN BEER.

CONCERNING THIS POPULAR BEVERAGE TWO MEN EXPRESS THEIR MINDS.

"The fact is sir, and you may stick a pin there, that the people of this country are likely to be drowned in a flood of lager beer," shouted an enthusiastic teetotaler the other day into the ear of your cornered correspondent. That German drink has struck us hard. It is the second deluge."

"Yes, and the worst of this beer-drinking business is that it gets up kidney troubles, as a heavy wind raises the waves," added a city physician, who had a knowledge of the times and a tendency to metaphor. "The midnight 'schooner' leaves behind it a wake of furred tongues, headaches, torpid livers, nausea, and all that, and lays the foundation of Bright's Disease."

This melancholy fact accounts in part for the increasing sales of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER, which at once mitigates these symptoms. Price 25 cents. Ask your physician about it. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

Voice of the Massachusetts press—The medical advertising agents must go!

A VEXED CLERGYMAN.

Even the patience of Job would become exhausted were he a preacher and endeavoring to interest his audience while they were keeping up an incessant coughing making it impossible for him to be heard. Yet, how very easy can all this be avoided by simply using Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Trial Bottles given away at Hazen A. Spaulding's Drug Store.

"James Means $3.00 shoe," says an advertisement. That is all right, but if James means a $3.00 shoe and his wife means a French kid affair costing six dollars, we'll wager ten to one that it'll make no difference what James means, and that he'll have to foot the bills even if they are made to order and cost his month's profits.—Middleboro' News.

FRESH FROM THE PULPIT.

SAINTS AND SINNERS STIRRED BY A CLERGYMAN'S CONFESSION—THE FACTS IN FULL.

Eloquent writing, merely, convinces nobody. General statements and assertions are cheap. Plain words are best, and come most easily from the mouth of a witness who is conscious that he speaks truth. Let the reader judge if the following have the ring of genuine coin:

"I have long been afflicted with rheumatism, a badly disordered liver and by general debility. All my strength seemed gone. I tried a number of other medicines without obtaining relief, but I do hereby testify to the great merits of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, since after the use of two bottles I find myself feeling well and strong again—in fact like a new man. I cheerfully recommend it as an excellent strengthening and invigorating Tonic."

Names and dates are of supreme importance. Testimonies are readily manufactured, but the foregoing is from a letter dated St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 30, 1882, and signed by Rev. Edward Wills, founder of and ex-pastor of the University Street Baptist Church. Residence, No. 313 Spruce, that city. From the very fact of their responsible and prominent position, ministers of the Gospel are cautious about giving their signatures or influence to any proprietary medicine or advertised article. Hence the value of unsolicited testimonials like the foregoing.

Please note: First.—PARKER'S GINGER TONIC is not an essense of Ginger. Don't indulge that idea nor permit others to impress it upon you. It combines the choicest Jamaica Ginger with other ingredients—constituting the best Tonic known in medicine; Second.—It is pleasant to take and immediate in its action. Prices, 50c. and $1—the latter the more economical. Get it of your druggist, or send for circular to HISCOX & Co., New York.

WHAT MRS. BRUCE

OF 25 GRANT ST., SPRINGFIELD, MASS., SAYS ABOUT HER HUSBAND'S SICKNESS, AND WHAT FINALLY PROVED A REAL BOON TO HIM — WORDS OF AN AFFECTIONATE, GOOD WOMAN.

Mrs. Bruce says: "My husband is an employe in the United States Armory in Springfield. He has for years been a terrible sufferer from bilious sick headaches. He has fearful attacks of this kind. Sometimes they will come on him every week or so. He has never found any medicine which would give him any permanent relief or prove any preventive against these severe attacks until he tried Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. He has received the greatest benefit from its use." The testimony of Mrs. Bruce is like that of hundreds of others, who say: "I procured a bottle of Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY, and used it with the best of results. I have no more headache or pain in the side. Indeed, the medicine seems to have an almost magical effect, and I feel very grateful for FAVORITE REMEDY. Dr. Kennedy is glad to recommend his medicine to all who are suffering from sick headaches resulting from any of the above causes, for it is a sure, positive cure.

TO KEEP THE BLOOD PURE

is the principal end of inventions and discoveries in medicine. To this object probably no one has contributed more signally than Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y. in the production of a medicine which has become famous under the title of the FAVORITE REMEDY. It removes all impurities of the Blood, regulates the disordered Liver and Kidneys, cures Constipation, Dyspepsia and all diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females. Sold by your druggist, $1.00 a bottle.

Dio Lewis.

Dr. Dio Lewis was born at Auburn, N. Y., in 1823, studied medicine with Dr. Briggs of that city, took his medical course in the Harvard Medical School, Boston, began the practice of his profession in his native place in 1845, and two years later removed to Buffalo, where he practiced from 1847 to 1852. During his residence in Buffalo, he wrote a number of papers on the causes and treatment of Cholera, which ravaged that city during 1849 and 1851. These papers attracted much attention, and were afterwards published in book form.

In the Autumn of 1852, Dr. Lewis took his young wife, then seriously threatened with consumption, to the South. The visit to the Southern States was repeated during the two following winters.

During these three winters of leisure, Dr. Lewis seriously reconsidered his life-work, and after consultation with family and other trusted friends, resolved to "shift the switch." Since 1855 he has been engaged in lecturing and writing on the subject of public and personal hygiene. With the exception of two visits to Europe and three summers of saddle life in the mountains of California, he has been unceasingly occupied with the "ounce of prevention."

His labors have been varied, interesting and most effective. During four years he lectured almost every night, giving his days to the invention of his new system of gymnastics. In 1860, having completed this system, he abandoned the platform and settled in Boston, Mass., to establish his Normal School for Physical Training. Obtaining an Act of incorporation from the Massachusetts Legislature, he placed his scheme before the celebrated Dr. Walter Channing, Dr. Thomas Hoskins and other well-known medical men. The two gentlemen named, and others, entered heartily into the work. Dr. Channing and Dr. Hoskins both became active teachers or professors in Dr. Lewis's school. Within seven years, more than four hundred persons were graduated from the Boston Normal School, and, bearing its diploma, with the name of Dio Lewis as its President, went out into all the land, teaching the new school of physical training. Among these graduates was that admirable gentleman and scholar, Moses Coit Tyler, now Professor in Cornell University. He went abroad, remaining several years in London introducing the "Dio Lewis Gymnastics." Prof. Tyler's lectures and his contributions to the English magazines on the new school of body culture, constitute the finest portion of the literature of the new movement. In one of Prof. Tyler's papers, in a leading English Magazine, occurs this paragraph,—

"The movement of thought in America toward physical culture is thus organized upon a profound and abiding basis. An impulse has been given which vibrates through a population of twenty millions; this impulse cannot die. . . . And of this vast and beneficial movement, Dio Lewis stands clearly at the head. To him the people are looking as to an apostle and guide. He has inaugurated in America a great national reform, as distinct, as influential, as glorious, as that which was wrought in Germany by Salzman and Jahn, or in Sweden by the poet and gymnasiarch Ling."

Another interesting phase of Dr. Lewis's work is found in the great seminary which he established at Lexington, Mass.

His object was to illustrate the possibilities in the physical development of girls during their school life. His buildings accommodating 200 persons, were placed upon the first battle field of the Revolutionary war. A large corps of the best teachers in mathematics, sciences, languages, belle lettres, and music to be found in the country, were engaged, and the opening announced. The school soon grew to one hundred and fifty young women, gathered from all parts of the country, including the Pacific Coast, Central America, and the West Indies. They came to see what could be done by the new methods for their nervous enfeebled bodies. The marvellous triumphs of this institution during the years which Dr. Lewis devoted to its management, he gives in the "North American Review for December, 1882." As he says in that paper, hundreds of grateful parents are familiar with the facts. Girls who came unable to ascend a single flight of stairs without suffering, in a few months were able to walk five or ten miles without inconvenience.

In the course of his twenty-two years residence in Boston, Dr. Lewis published nine volumes on the various aspects of the health of the human body, some of which, like "Our Girls," "Our Digestion," and "Weak Lungs," have had enormous sales.

Dr. Lewis has now removed to the city of New York, to establish a large monthly magazine, to be called "Dio Lewis's Monthly," and to be devoted to Sanitary and Social Science. This will be the crowning work for his long life of labor in the interest of better bodies for American men and women.

"For Goodness' Sake Don't Say I Told You."

Ben Butler, the governor, is stumping the state,
But for goodness' sake don't say I told you;
The Tewksbury story once more he'll relate,
But for goodness' sake don't say I told you.
From now till election his horn he will blow,
But that won't prevent his complete overthrow;
The people will vote that Ben Butler must go,
But for goodness' sake don't say I told you.
The voters are not of their senses bereft,
But for goodness' sake don't say I told you;
And they are determined that Ben shall "get left,"
But for goodness' sake don't say I told you.
A mighty uprising this year there will be,
From old Berkshire hills to the shores of the sea,
And "Butler must travel" will be the decree,
But for goodness' sake don't say I told you.

COUNTRY JOURNALISM.—It makes the metropolitan editor exquisitely merry to read in the country paper—with which he exchanges by virtue of its printing a twenty dollar advertisement for his six dollar daily—that an esteemed citizen has painted his house, and a well-known merchant has gone somewhere to lay in a stock of goods. If it was a city bummer went somewhere and laid in a stock of beer, and then went and laid in the gutter and died, the city editor would consider it worth half a column with a display heading. And the little social happenings, the sickness and deaths, the hundreds of minor events that stir the quiet surface of placid country life and find their way into the local paper, are far too painfully insignificant when the eagle eye and scintillating wit of the city editor strikes them. He does not stop to think that if those who read and enjoy these trifles could only see the city paper and peruse a few bogus interviews with statesmen, a pleasing collection of scandals regarding actresses, and a choice drunk or two in a city court, they would not again consider these frivolities of country journalism. —Rockland Courier-Gazette.

Subscriber asks "How to clean out boilers." It is the easiest thing in the world. Simply let the water get too low, and the steam too high, and the boiler will not only be "cleaned out" with remarkable impetuosity, but pretty nearly everything else in the immediate vicinity will be cleaned out with it. It never fails.

Bushels of letters go to the dead letter office daily since the reduction in postage, the majority of them coming from the large cities. A great many people suppose that all rates of postage have been reduced one cent, and so mail drop letters with a one-cent stamp attached, whereas it costs as much to send a letter around the corner in the cities as to send the same to San Francisco. The postage to all foreign countries (except Canada) remains the same as heretofore, which is the cause of another common mistake.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—The Hon. Daniel W. Voorhees, United States Senator from this State, remarks: "My opinion sir, I have no objection to giving. I suffered from rheumatism of the back, used some St. Jacobs Oil, which gave me instantaneous relief and finally cured me completely. I think it is a remarkable remedy, indeed." His candid and courteous expression carries weight.

A minister in Hebron, Ct., has got himself and his church into hot water by preaching against polygamy in a manner so pointed as to indicate unmistakably the rich pillar of the church who sat in the sanctuary with wife No. 4, while No. 3 was in the congregation and Nos. 1 and 2 unaccounted for. An indiscreet parson. He should confine himself to berating Solomon and David for their weaknesses. They pay no pew rent.

THE HEAD AND EYE.—Since last October I have suffered from acute inflammation in my nose and head—often in the night having to get up and inhale salt and water for relief. My eye has been twice, for a week at a time, so I could not see. I have used no end of remedies, also employed a doctor, who said it was impure blood—but I got no help. I used Ely's Cream Balm on the recommendation of a friend. I was faithless, but in a few days was cured. My nose now, and also my eye, is well. It is wonderful how quick it helped me. MRS. GEORGIE S. The fire bug has again got at work, this time the fires being set on Foster street, in the old coal sheds at about 12 o'clock Wednesday night. It was discovered and put out by Mr. John Linehan. The second fire was in a shed in the tannery of Wilson Bros. on Sawyer street and was discovered by a man going to work early Thursday morning. The night watch had better begin practising firing at both long and short distance targets.

That Peabody has got a Board of Engineers, who look out for the interest of the town, is evident from the fact, that in their purchase of the last lot of hose, the Warwick, X. L. brand, they paid 72 cents per foot for it, or 18 cents per foot less than the city of Salem paid for their Warwick hose; the only difference in the hose being that the Salem hose has been put through a chemical process, which the Warwick folks claim as making the hose rot proof and mildew proof, but firemen who have seen and used them both, claim that the process does not add three cents to the value of the treated hose over the non-treated.

Saturday afternoon the parade of the Beverly Fire Department took place. The day was all that could be asked for, and the fire ladäies were in fine trim and made a splendid appearance. The following is the order of the procession:—

Platoon of Police.
Board of Engineers.
Salem Cadet Band.
Beverly S. F. E. Co. No. 1, 18 men.
Enterprise " " " " " 2, 18 men.
N. H. Foster H. & L., No. 1, 30 men.
Salem Brass Band.
Fair Play Hand Engine and Hose Co. 3, 35 men.
Fire King Hand Engine and Hose Co. 4, 35 men.
Perseverance Hand Engine and Hose Co. 5, 10 men.
Lynn Brass Band.
Washington Hose Co. No. 1, 18 men.
Excelsior Hose Co. No. 2 18 men.
Loner Hose Co. No. 6, 18 men.

The route of the procession was a long one as it always is in Beverly, but the "boys" were good for it. Peabody was pretty well represented both among the firemen and citizens.

The question has often been asked among the firemen, "Why don't the collector or treasurer of the town, give the firemen a receipted tax bill at the end of the fire year, as they do in Salem, instead of making them pay and then wait six months to draw it back." We took an opportunity to inquire into the facts of the case, and found that the collector would have nothing to show at the end of the year for the two or three hundred dollars of firemen's taxes, and that the town would be liable to have to support any man who should become needy, and who had served in the fire department, and could show three receipted tax bills, whether he was a citizen or not. Salem would like to get rid of her system if it could be done without any trouble.

In last week's issue we stated that the old Volunteer was the winner at the Amesbury muster. That was a mistake, as we have since found out, it being Volunteer 2 of Salisbury, a new Button machine within a few years. Volunteer 2 has been challenged to play for $200 a side by one of the Amesbury engines that they beat.

Hose three and four will both enter for the hose carriage race at the Danvers Riding Park, Wednesday, Oct. 24th. We hope the boys will capture one or more of the prizes.

The long talked of fair of Hose 4, of this department, will open this evening in Ashland hall, and continue through the week, closing Saturday night with the drawing of prizes, which will be under the charge of Engineers Littlefield, Pierce and Reed. Already over 1500 tickets have been disposed of, and the prospects are good for a large sale during the fair. The object of the fair is to raise money to purchase a new uniform and refurnish the company's hall. There will be a fine display of useful and fancy articles. Mrs. J. W. Lee will have charge of the tables for fancy articles, which are located on the right of the hall, the prize and confectionery tables taking up the left. Mrs. Galeucia has charge of the prize table and Mrs. C. H. Stanton the confectionery table. Music will be furnished to-night by the Peabody Orchestra. Among the book prizes will be a fine Carriage mat, a ship, that has been on exhibition in Spaulding's window, a Lady's Gold Watch and Chain, Watch Charm and a number of combination prizes. The season tickets are for sale at a quarter of a dollar each, entitling the holder to a chance in 41 prizes valued at about $300.

Engineer Folsom has been on the sick list for the last few days, but has got out around again to-day.

Chief Staniford, of Salem, was in the brick house Thursday evening taking the measure of the H. & L. truck, as they have got to rebuild the Salem truck.

SOUTH PEABODY.

Mr. G. F. Williams has commenced to frame his new barn. Mr. Calvin Pierce will do the work.

A very interesting missionary meeting was held at the church last Sabbath evening.

Mrs. Chas. H. Richardson, a former resident of this place but now of Wolfboro', N. H., was visiting friends here last week.

Mr. Orlando F. Newhall has so far recovered from his late accident as to be able to attend church last Sunday for the first time.

Get out your coon dog and see if you can't start a coon in the South Peabody ledges. This moon is just the time.

There is a young fellow in our neighborhood who has been making a daily practice of attempting to sing, "Let me like a soldier die." He seems to crave death, and they do say that one of the neighbors who has a musket is preparing to accommodate him.

Last Saturday a man named Guilford living on Lynnfield street discovered smoke coming out of his barn, and rushing to the scene of action he found two of a neighbor's children quietly and happily sitting around a fire on the barn floor, which they had kindled.

Arthur Walrath, a young man of this town, was in Lynn last Thursday night and endeavored to obtain admission to his brother's house at a late hour in the night. Being unable to open the door, he went to the parlor window and was just crawling in when the police caught him. He called up his brother and was identified.

Lynn cars did a large business Sunday.

The work of widening Washington street, which was begun in the spring, has been completed, and a handsome face wall has been built the entire length of the Stimpson field. It was a laborious job, and the thorough manner in which it has been done is a credit to the contractor, Mr. John Linehan.

As engine 93, engaged in hauling gravel from Lynnfield over the South Reading branch, was passing the Summit street crossing last Tuesday, it struck the milk wagon of Mr. Lewis Brown, completely demolishing it. Mr. Brown and a boy who were in the wagon escaped uninjured, as the team was nearly across the track when struck by the engine. Mr. Brown, it is understood, will claim damages.

The ladies of Peabody will bear in mind that Miss Mary B. Wilson is ready to show all the novelties in the line of Millinery Goods. No special opening day, but all are invited at any time.

At the convention of the Anti-Butler Greenbackers yesterday at Worcester, the following nominations were made. Governor, John F. Arnold of North Adams; Lieutenant-Governor, George Dutton of Boston; Secretary, A. B. Brown of Worcester; Treasurer, Washington Wendell of Orange; Attorney-General, Chas. A. Taber of Lynn; Auditor, Geo. W. Kimball of Natick.

The Murray Club have elected the following officers and committees for the ensuing year: Pres., Chas. S. Goldthwait; Vice Pres., Mary E. Bomer; Sec., A. B. Tasker; Treas., Herbert A. Harrington; Directors, Mrs. F. W. Sprague, Miss C. W. Bomer, Albert H. Merrill; Musical Committee, Miss Nellie Bartlett, Mrs. F. W. Sprague, Mrs. Albert H. The county convention of the democrats yesterday in Salem, showed conclusively that all the harmony (?) was not on the republican side. Mayor Breen of Lawrence was elected chairman, and after some discussion in reference to a conference with the greenbackers, Mr. Litchman was introduced, who said he came "bearing the olive-branch of peace." Committees of conference were appointed and the Convention adjourned till afternoon. On reassembling the report was made that all the greenbackers desired was the nomination of their Councillor, and as that could not come before the County Convention they had nothing to report. A ballot was taken for District Attorney and it proved that more votes were cast than there were delegates. After such confusion and uproar as can not be described, lasting for over an hour, an agreement was made to adjourn until this morning. While the votes for District Attorney were being counted, a ballot for County Commissioner was taken with the following result: Geo. J. L. Colby, 99; Henry Hobbs 90; Andrew Pettengill 47; Horace Longfellow 6. Mr. Colby's nomination was made unanimous.

The Convention re-assembled this morning when J. T. Mahoney was nominated for Register of Probate by acclamation, and after an address by Henry B. Lovering, a ballot was taken for District Attorney with the following result: John P. Sweeny, 111; Henry F. Hurlburt, 116.

SPECIAL GIFT BENEFIT

— TO —

OUR CUSTOMERS.

WILMOT

On and after Oct. 10th, proposes to give to his customers, an

Elegant Upright Piano

Valued at $900.00,

— AND AN —

ELEGANT PARLOR SUIT

Valued at $300.00.

Both of these rich and elegant presents are to be given away to any person purchasing any article in our numerous departments, no matter how small the sale may be, who guesses the number of beans in the jar. Below we give a description of the piano and parlor suit:

The Piano is one of the celebrated Hallett & Cumston 7 1-2 octave Grand Upright Pianos. It is 4 feet 9 inches high, 5 feet 2 inches wide and 2 feet 3 1-2 inches deep; it is triple strung throughout, has a swinging music desk, and is warranted by the manufacturers for a period of 5 years, and is valued at ($900) nine hundred dollars.

The Parlor Suit consists of eight pieces, viz.: Large sofa, one patent rocker, one gentleman's easy chair, one lady's easy chair, two large parlor chairs, corner chair and an elegant centre table. All the pieces are upholstered in different shades of the best brocade plush, and the frame is made from black walnut, made extra heavy and carved in an elegant manner. The whole is valued at ($300) three hundred dollars.

We shall use the following means to give these elegant presents to our customers, so that all will have an equal chance:

A Glass Jar will rest upon the top of the article in our window to be given away, and in the jar are a certain number of Beans. Every one of our customers will have the right to guess, and their choice in guessing between the Piano or Parlor Set, whichever he chooses to guess upon. The jar will be filled with beans and sealed, no one knowing the number contained in the jar—not even ourselves—until the counting, which will take place at 12 o'clock noon, Dec. 26, 1883, and will be open to the inspection of the public. Books for registering now open.

We Also Pledge Our Word that Our Prices have not and will not be Changed on Account of the Gifts Mentioned Above.

MRS. C. W. CHAMBERLIN,

STATE AND ARK ST., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—HER GOOD, KIND WORDS WILL DO MUCH FOR THE AFFLICTED.

Mrs. Chamberlin is the wife of C. W. Chamberlin, an employe in the United States Armory at Springfield, Mass. She says: "Every Spring I have been, for some time past, more or less troubled with nervous debility and weakness. Some years I've been completely run down. My physician has recommended various strengthening and blood medicines, but I never received any permanent benefit until I tried Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. It was recommended to me by Mrs. Newcombe, on State St. I think it a wonderful medicine to give one strength and enliven a person. I have recommended it to family after family among my acquaintances in Springfield, Mass, and FAVORITE REMEDY has done a great deal of good wherever it has been placed. I have a sister, Mrs. Harmon, 29 Tremont St., Lowell, Mass., who was troubled with nervous weakness and loss of strength and appetite, but by using Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY her health was completely restored. I consider it an excellent medicine. Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is used extensively among the Armory men here."

NO, SIR!"

A Scotch minister once said no woman could bear pain as well as man. That is not so. The fact is generally the other way. Mrs. Edward Meyers of Rondout, N. Y., submitted to the operation of the removal of her hand by amputation, without taking ether, or moving a muscle or uttering a groan. Dr. Kennedy, also of Rondout, N. Y., who performed the operation, said he never saw such heroism. The lady's disease was erysipelas, and afterwards the Docter gave his FAVORITE to cleanse the blood. Mrs. Meyers is now well and strong.

SALEM.

Two events of interest to the musical people of this city deserve a passing note. One is the congratulatory letter of Gen. H. K. Oliver to the Oratorio Society, which was read at their first rehearsal. Gen. Oliver has been a life long devotee of this art. He was boy soprano in the choir of the Park street Church in Boston in 1810, and ever since that time he has been interested particularly in sacred music. His "Federal Street" is known everywhere. In the ordinary course of nature Gen. Oliver cannot long be with us; and his farewell, as it were, to the society in whose welfare he had taken a deep interest, and with which he had been actively associated, was received with deep feeling. The president and secretary of the association were empowered to write a fitting response.

The other event is the complimentary testimonial to W. J. Winch, by the members of the Schubert Club. Mr. Winch leaves for Europe next week for a year of study. He has been the conductor of this club from the start, and while its members wish him abundant success, they regret losing his services. To-night, therefore, the club and its friends will give him a parting testimonial of regard. The concert will be at Plummer Hall and will be a notable event in musical circles.

The readers of the PRESS will notice the announcement in Kid Gloves which is made by Frank Cousins. We advise them that this opportunity will not occur again. The prices which he makes are not 50 cents on a dollar.

During the third quarter of 1883, 12,449 persons visited the East India Museum.

W. S. Nevins, the Salem Correspondent of the Boston Herald, has been elected Vice-Grand of Fraternity Lodge, I. O. O. F., in place of George W. Grant, resigned.

Mackenzie & Swan, the well-known tailors, have some very nobby goods in their windows. They are doing a nice business, and well they may, for their reputation is first class in this department.

Gen. Cogswell is understood not to be a candidate for the legislature this year.

The Unitarian and Universalist churches will begin a series of Union meetings on the first Sunday of next month. Rev. E. B. Willson and Rev. B. F. McDaniel will speak on that evening.

F. A. Wruck has gained an enviable reputation in watch repairing. He is a careful and conscientious workman, and all work entrusted to his care will be satisfactorily performed. His place of business is at 165 Essex street, opposite St. Peter street.

The Republican rally at Mechanic Hall, Saturday evening, was a rouser. Crowds could not obtain an entrance. Hon. Geo. B. Loring, Congressman Horr, William H. Sayward and E. P. Brown of Boston addressed the meeting. The Robinson men in this city are wide awake and will poll a large vote.

J. G. Lowery is now fully settled in his new quarters in Kinsman block, and his finely selected stock is receiving much praise.

The polls will be opened on election day at 7 A. M., and will close at 4.30 P. M. An additional meeting for registration has been ordered for Thursday afternoon of this week at three o'clock.

Miss L. T. Robinson has a Millinery opening to-day. It will pay the readers of the PRESS to visit her well appointed store.

The name of Charles W. Hidden no longer appears as manager of the Salem Post. It is rumored that he will return to Newburyport, where he was employed on the Germ before coming to this city.

Several people on High street were amused a few days ago, by seeing a young lady make her toilet. Her companion had left her in the carriage, while visiting one of the stores, and she took the opportunity to fix up. First, she took off her gloves and looked at her hands, cleaned them and arranged her rings; then taking out a small looking-glass she surveyed her face; it did not meet with her approval, evidently; not having conveniences to clean it sufficiently, she undertook to cover up any blemish that might exist there. The spectators watched her admiringly, as she reddened her cheeks with some coloring matter which she took from her pocket. Then her hair, which was a little rumpled (how?), received its share of attention. Then a last, long look in the glass, a smile of satisfaction, and the "show," ended.—Exchange.

Mike—"It's the Irish that does all the invinting in these days, sure."—Jonathan—"Irish be darned! The Irish don't invent anything to speak of. Americans invent everything." Mike—"Thin perhaps yez can tell me why the Irishman's name, Pat, is always next to the date on all the new invintions. Divil an American name can yez find on one, at all, at all!"

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

More people visited the Boston Theatre and more money was paid into the box office there for the past seven performances of "Jalma" than can be credited to any one dramatic entertainment brought out at that establishment for the same number of representations. That has been the story ever since the first night of the play, and it is extremely probable that this state of things will continue to the close of the run of this magnificent spectacle.

"The Lancers," that most charming of comedies, is presented at the Bijou this week. This will be the first representation of the piece in America by Mr. Charles Wyndham and his company; and it will give opportunities and make exactions such as are not to be found in modern farcical comedy. "The Lancers," which hasn't been heard in Boston for so long that it is practically a novelty, will be a great card. Mr. Wyndham plays Victor de Courey and Miss Rose Saker Estelle.

The fine qualities of Mr. Bronson Howard's drama of the heart, "Young Mrs. Winthrop," are winning much appreciation. Nightly the Park Theatre has been attended by audiences noteworthy in character as well as size, and there can be no doubt that the play, with the Madison Square company to interpret its story, would be a great attraction for weeks to come. But the career of "Young Mrs. Winthrop" ending on Saturday makes it requisite that those who have not yet seen the great success of the Madison Square company should make application for seats very early.

The first production of Pique at the Globe Theatre occurred Monday night. It is presented with new and appropriate scenery by Jos. Schell (artist of the Park Theatre), realistic effects, and an important cast. Miss Sara Jewett (late of the Union Square Theatre) will appear as Mabel Renfrew; Mr. Herbert Kelcey (formerly of Wallack's Theatre) as Capt. Arthur Standish; Miss Annie Russell (the original Esmeralda of the Madison Square Theatre) is selected for the part of Mary Standish; Mr. John Jack as Dr. Gossitt; Mr. George Parkes as Raymond Lessing; Mr. Walter Reynolds as Ragmoney Jim, (an artist who has achieved considerable fame in the prominent Australian and California theatres); Mr. J. McDonald as Thorsby Gyle; Mr. Harry Brown (the famous comedian and opera bouffe artist) as Sammy Dymple; Miss Georgia Tyler as Lucille Renfrew; Miss May Sylvie as Aunt Dorothy; Miss Lizzie McCall as Raitch; Mrs. Jane Russell as Mother Thames; Sylvie, Miss Marion Russell; Little Arthur, Master Tommy Russell; Mr. N. D. Jones as Padder; Picker Bob by Mr. J. H. Redding. This cast will afford a representation of the play never before equalled in Boston. The entire production will be characterized by a strict attention to detail and an effort to make this one of the principal dramatic features of the season.

Miss Georgia Cayvan, who has just made an emphatic success in the principal role of "La Belle Russe" at St. Louis, will play Hazel Kirke when the piece of that title is presented at the Park Theatre in December by the Madison Square company.

Dan Maguinnis couldn't ask for a better send-off than his friends and the public have given him in "Willy Reilly." He appears in Salem next week.

While Annie Pixley was playing her recent engagement at the Park Theatre, Conductor E. N. Catlin composed for her especial use a song entitled "She's Such a Love." Miss Pixley gave it the last two performances of her engagement there, and has since rendered it every night with immense success. She writes that it is the most taking song she has ever sung.

Miss Carrie Swain has a new play, written for her by Mr. Fred Maeder, and entitled "Morning Glories."

The performance of the Lights o' London in Mechanic Hall, Monday evening, was first class in every respect. The scenery is different from the old scenes, so familar in that hall. The company is a strong one, and the play one of interest, and afforded opportunity for some capital acting. It is to be played every night this week, and Wednesday and Saturday matinees. All our people should see it.

The Peabody Press, of Wednesday, expresses a natural and proper apprehension lest Mr. Robinson is not to be seen and heard in all the clusters of towns in this neighborhood, but only in Salem, on the last day of the campaign. That he should be seen and heard in Beverly, Marblehead, Danvers and Peabody as well, is a statement upon which there can be no two opinions. That Mr. Robinson so intends, and has put himself into the hands of the State Central Committeeman from this district, Mr. Rantoul, for that purpose, is equally true. He will devote the afternoon and evening of November fifth to these engagements, and it is only necessary for the towns and city of Salem to agree which shall have him in the afternoon and which in the evening.—Salem Gazette.

LYNN.

Senator Baldwin, who was elected last year from this district, which comprises Lynn, Saugus, Swampscott and Nahant, will have Mr. Allen again as a competitor, and the republicans feel encouraged to hope that Mr. Baldwin will be defeated. The vote last year was Baldwin 3952; Allen 3786.

Mrs. M. A. Davidson has the largest stock of pianos and organs in Essex County. Every instrument is fully warranted and it will be found a good place to trade.

The Odd Fellows of this city are solid for Robinson,—and that means a good deal in Lynn. They are making no noise but will vote their indignation.

Charles B. Whitney will be the manager of the new skating rink.

Plans for a new ward 3 engine house are being made.

S. J. Berry & Co., the ladies' parlor shoe store, receive much patronage from the Peabody ladies, who find it a desirable place to trade.

The Essex Conference of liberal churches meets to-morrow at the Unitarian Church.

W. H. Niles, the well-known attorney of this city, will spend the coming winter in Florida.

The fine tablet erected to the memory of W. F. Shumway, of your town, has caused many favorable comments, and the Lynn Marble and Granite Co. may well be proud of the work. They have many original and choice designs in monuments and stones, and are very reasonable in their prices.

Dan Maguinnis appears to-morrow evening in Music Hall, under the management of Rock & Bachert. We think it would pay president Breed to run a late car to Wyoma, So. Peabody and the square after these shows, occasionally. Lynn's entertainments are first-class, and many of your readers might patronize them, if the facilities for reaching home could be obtained.

For the largest and finest assortment of boots and shoes of all kinds call at the Market street store of Wellman Osborne.

Burglars are about the city, having entered the laundry of J. W. Hurd, on Mullbery street, Sunday morning, and also the clothing store of M. Butaman & Co. on Union street.

W. L. Brockway, superintendent of the West Lynn stables of the Lynn & Boston horse railroad, was surprised last Saturday evening by his friends who presented him with a handsome easy chair.

Smith & Robinson, 42 Market street, are agents for the celebrated Rogers groups, and show a fine selection of art work and artist's materials.

A new theatre to be managed by Rock & Bachert is one of the possibilities of next season.

Last Sunday the Hungarian Gipsy band gave a concert in Music Hall, and were assisted by Miss Alice C. Newton of your town, as reader.

The Sham and the Real.

Every good thing has its host of imitators; every genuine article its counterfeits. Bad manners and wicked habits have theirs also; but he who shams the bad never boasts of it, while they who ape the virtues of the good or simulate the genuine never hesitate to place the counterfeit before the public in their most alluring tones. When these people imitate they always choose a pronounced type or popular subject to copy from; and when they claim to be as good as "So-and-So," or to sell an article equal to "So-and-So," the public may depend upon it that Mr. "So-and-So" and his article are always the best of the kind. Thus the sham is always proving the genuine merit of the thing it copies.

A firm of enterprising gentlemen produce and popularize an article of household use, such as the Royal Baking Powder, whose convenience, usefulness and real merit make for itself an immense and universal sale. A hundred imitators arise on every hand, and as they hold out their sham articles to the public, yelp in chorus, "Buy this; it's just as good as Royal, and much cheaper!" The Royal Baking Powder is the standard the world over, and its imitators in their cry that theirs is "as good as Royal" are all the time emphasizing this fact. In their laborious attempts to show by analysis and otherwise that the "Snowball" brand has as much raising power "as the Royal;" or that the "Resurrection" powder is as wholesome "as Royal;" or that the "Earthquake" brand is "as pure as the Royal," as well as by their contortive twistings of chemical certificates and labored efforts to obtain recognition from the Government chemists and prominent scientists who have certified the superiority of Royal over all others, they all admit the "Royal" to be the acme of perfection, which it is their highest ambition to imitate. But the difference between the real and these imitations, which copy only its general appearance, is as wide as that between the paste and the true diamond. The shams all pay homage to th "Royal!"

Now that the shooting season has opened, the man who takes his gun by the muzzle and draws it towards him, will stand a very good chance to get himself shot and to furnish a local item for the newspaper.

Three Particular Points.

Point the First.—BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is not an intoxicating compound. It is a tonic medicine, not a drink. It is a skillfully compounded preparation made to restore strength and health; not a beverage to be sold in bar-rooms and taverns.

Point the Second.—BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is free from everything injurious. The most delicate ladies and the most enfeebled infants may use it with perfect safety and with great advantage. While it is powerful in its remedial agency, it is gentle in its operation, restoring wasted strength and imparting robust health in the most efficient manner.

Point the Third.—BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is made by the Brown Chemical Company of Baltimore, a long-established house, whose reputation is well-known to the business world and the general community. There is no risk in buying such a medicine. 6

The Peabody Press.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

THE SUPREME Executive Magistrate has provoked another source of opposition in trying to remove Mrs. Clara A. Leonard. How does this strike brother Shepard of the Mirror? We should think it would convert him.

IT IS SAID Butler proposes to make another attack upon Julius L. Clarke before the close of the campaign. Fire away, Governor Butler. By the last shot, 99-100th of the Odd Fellows have wheeled solidly into line for Robinson. Another one will bring in the other 1-100th.

EVERY MAN who desires to vote for Robinson, this fall, should see that his name is on the voting list. Don't trust to any one else to see to it, but look for yourself. If it is not there, have it put there at once. Every Butler man will be prepared to vote. If they can't pay their tax it will be paid for them. The sooner your name is added, the less time and work it will give the town committee. Help them out by attending to this without delay.

ONE OF Butler's complaints is that newspapers continually misreport his utterances. This is by no means new. When he was stumping this district for Congress he found the same fault with the press. Funny, is it not? Other speakers have no such trouble. Mr. Robinson is not mentioning every night that the papers did not quote him correctly. What a terrible set of men these reporters must be! And what is there so peculiar about Butler's speeches that the stenographers can correctly report every other speech in the campaign save his?

THERE OUGHT to be more of a protest against the change in time which is proposed by the convention of railroad magnates. It may be more convenient for the different lines to adopt a standard and uniform time of running their trains. It undoubtedly is so. And if they think it wise to adopt the time of Philadelphia as a standard, well and good. But that is not a sufficient reason for the change in local time.

There are two reasons for opposition to it. First, the great railroad system of this country is sufficient of a monopoly. They have secured the aid of Harvard College and by the promulgation of their order, the entire country east of Philadelphia must submit. Secondly, Philadelphia time does not correspond with our local time, because it is not the correct time here. To substitute the correct time for incorrect at the bidding of the railroad is, to say the least, "cheeky." In some places in the West and in the Provinces, railroad time is different from the local, and is so understood. And while, when this time differs but a few moments, its agreement is desirable, the change of 15 minutes and 44 seconds is sufficient to destroy entirely the value, in the vicinity of Boston, of local time.

THE NEATEST thing Mr. Robinson has done in the campaign, was his speech at Barnstable, in which he exposed Butler's inconsistency on the river and harbor bill. Now it is not of the least consequence as far as the qualifications of the candidate for governor of the State is concerned, whether or not he is in favor of the last river and harbor bill of Congress, or whether or not he would have voted for had he been a member of Congress. The bill was passed, and was condemned as severely by democrats as republicans: and from Butler's previous record we believe he would have voted for it had he been in Congress.

But in Butler's letter of acceptance last year and in his speech at Music Hall, he condemned the bill and asked how any member of Congress could excuse himself for voting for it. He also heartily praised President Arthur for daring to veto it. This year when down in Mr. Crapo's district, where generally they believe in the bill, Butler says that had he been in Congress he should have voted as Crapo did. This inconsistency he tried Saturday night to explain away by saying that while the entire bill was wrong, he could not blame the representatives from districts where improvements were voted for favoring it. This only makes the matter worse. For this was just the fault of the bill. No one asserted that improvements in this direction were not advisable; it was this wholesale appropriation, this you-vote-for-mine and-I'll-vote-for-yours that was the objectionable feature. This we understand Butler now to approve, in direct opposition to his last year's position. Here is consistency for you! This is the man we are asked to support for Governor!

GEN. BUTLER will be left this year. Because the voters of the State see that he has not fulfilled the promises made in his inaugural address.

Because all the abuses which he proved about Tewksbury had been rectified and reformed under Republican administration, and before he was elected.

Because this is confirmed by the recent report of the Board of Lunacy and Charity, and signed by all of the members, including the 3 new appointees who are known to be Butler men.

Because of his continual misrepresentations and misstatements, which increase nightly, and the truth of which is not a matter of opinion, but of record.

Because of the opposition of many prominent democrats, who fear him next year as a presidential candidate—if re-elected for Governor.

Because of his attack upon the 45th regiment, calling it the "seed cake" regiment, and claiming that Col. Codman's report of the killed and wounded was incorrect. Both statements are false, and have provoked the indignation, not only of that regiment, but of the rest of the "boys in blue."

Because of his cowardly attack upon the character of Julius L. Clarke, who hao been Grand Treasurer of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows.

Because he has ignored all the principles of civil service reform, so loudly professed by his party last year, and has said that the "government belongs to his friends."

Because by his sanction, Bovey, the Andersonville prisoner, was removed, not to make way for a needy soldier, but for one who was already in possession of a fat salary.

Because of his attempt to displace Mrs. Leonard on the Board of Lunacy and Charity. A woman who when she writes about our public institutions first visits them.

Because he claims that the power given him by the Constitution of the State is not sufficient to enable him to carry out his purposes, and because Massachusetts is not ready to appoint a dictator in place of a governor.

Because the entire republican party is aroused, and when they all vote, there is no difference of opinion as to the result.

Mr. Gallup, the enterprising manager of the Naumkeag Clothing House in Salem, is full of surprises for his friends and patrons. One of them occurred last Wednesday night. At the opening of his Fall and Winter stock of Clothing he had engaged the Salem Brass Band, which was stationed on the balcony of the Essex House where they played some of their finest selections during the evening. In addition to this there was a fine exhibition of stereopticon views which were loudly commended by the large crowd of people assembled. Inside the store the gentlemanly attendants were kept busy showing the styles in suits and overcoats, as well as the other goods for sale by the firm. Suffice it to say that those who were not purchasers that evening know where to go when they are ready to buy.

Mr. Robinson will speak in Malden and Woburn, Thursday, October 25; in Quincy and Weymouth, Friday, October 26; in Ware and Spencer, Saturday, October 27; in Lawrence, Monday, October 29; in Natick, Tuesday, October 30; in Lowell, Wednesday, October 31.

PENALTY FOR SIN.—Oct. 23, Thomas Rainville, drunk, $5.83.

Edward Cunningham and John Sullivan, for assault on Maurice O'Shea, with stones. Case settled, by both parties paying costs, amounting to $4.50.

"G. S." Cigars all the rage—nothing like them—at George Stevens'.

Buy your Confectionery of Geo. Steven and get it fresh.

WITH A single exception, all the candidates the people of our town will be asked to vote for, are placed in nomination. Without reference just now, to the claims of either Butler or Robinson, there are several county officers which claim the attention of our voters at the polls. The late Conventions at Salem by the greenbackers and democrats, have developed anything but harmony. While it is understood that there will be no other nominations, democrats have announced their determination not to vote for either Tarr or Colby who are greenbackers, which will of course be followed by retaliation on the part of the greenbackers as to the rest of the ticket. Yet the Butler vote in Essex County will carry its ticket as to county offices along with it in most cases, and there is need of earnest work on the part of Republicans to elect their candidates.

To our credit it may be said that the nomination of J. T. Mahoney for Register of Probate has removed any doubt as to the result in his case. He will receive very nearly a unanimous vote in the county—as handsome a compliment to his services as any man could desire.

For district attorney we should elect Mr. Moulton by a large majority. He was appointed last year to fill the vacancy caused by the election of Mr. Sherman to the more important office of Attorney General, and is deservedly popular in this vicinity. He is a man who has earned his position by unremitting labor and hard work. He was obliged to work his own way through college—and by his own ability and careful attention to the wants of his clients and the duties of his profession has won an enviable reputation. He is a man of the people. Every laboring man should be his friend and hearty supporter in this campaign. We are glad to know that in Salem and this vicinity all parties will rally to his election.

Against the election of Col. Haskell as Councillor, there has been placed a coalition candidate. Haskell owed his election last year to the fact that there were three candidates in the field. But in this particular contest Butler is interested, and by the nomination of a greenbacker it is expected that the united opposition vote will be polled for Tarr. We say expected. Yet the Lynn democrats are not pleased with the defeat of their favorite Mr. Mower. Especially are they not satisfied with the manner in which his nomination was brought about in the Convention. It will not be safe, however, to reckon on any serious defections on this account, nor to anticipate that Haskell will receive any but Republican votes. We therefore urge our friends to see to it that Col. Haskell's name is on their ticket. He will need every vote. His opponents will make a desperate fight, and their candidate is a Butler man clear through.

We have no fear of the result in the case of Sheriff Herrick. His opponent is another greenbacker. But Mr. Herrick has been long in the office. All parties respect him, and prominent democrats and greenbackers in the entire county concede his election.

For County Commissioner the democrats have nominated George J. L. Colby, a man who ought not to receive a single vote in the whole county. We notice a disposition hereabouts to say as little as possible about him, even by those who will vote the ticket upon which his name will be placed. On the other hand is Mr. Graves, of Lynn, a man who would not take an election to the office when counted in, because he believed he was not honestly entitled to it—a man who has served the county well and who should be triumphantly elected.

For Senator from this district we hope Capt. Benj. Pitman, of Marblehead, will be elected. It is a close district, even Hon. N. A. Horton, the popular editor of the Salem Gazette, narrowly escaping defeat the last year of his election. Personally we do not find any fault with Mr. Sparhawk, except that he has followed the other democrats of the Legislature—sneezing just when Butler directed. The republicans ought to elect their man in this district. The Grand Army ought to elect Capt. Pitman. He has done valiant service when the nation needed defenders — and he is a comrade of whom all the boys are proud. The laboring men of Marblehead and Peabody should elect Pitman. For it was he who dared while himself the superintendent of a large shoe factory, to tell the men on a strike to "stick." He it was who so adjusted the labor difficulty in his own town as to command the respect of all parties. We commend Mr. Pitman to the voters of this town and district.

Last Saturday some hoodlums were observed throwing stones through the Butler & Prince flag which was out, and it allowed the stones to go through it easily.

A young folks party will be given at Upton's hall next Wednesday afternoon by A. L. Poor and Hazen Quint. Admission 50 cents. Dancing commences at 2 P. M.

The Republicans will probably have a grand torchlight procession some night next week, with several out of town companies in line. A collation will be given at town hall.

Employes at Brown & Stanley's, according to the usual custom, will go to work at six o'clock A. M., and leave off at five o'clock, P. M., for a few weeks. This saves lighting up.

Two engines are employed daily on the Lawrence freight, to convey the large freight between Salem and Lawrence. The shifter frequently comes up with two engines and all the way from twenty-five to thirty cars attached. This looks like business.

A good many people are complaining of the boys who have rubber attached to a forked stick, making a powerful sling. These boys are in the habit of slinging small stones and other articles against window panes, cracking them, etc. Boys, you mustn't.

A vicious horse belonging to F. Osborn Jr., while standing near the sidewalk at Allen's block, attempted to catch a little girl that was passing, in his teeth, but only struck her, throwing her to the ground, also striking her with his foot. She was picked up and a physician called but was found not to be seriously injured.

Butler's picture book is being freely circulated in town this week, and a number of copies have been noticed among the school children. Teachers should not permit a book which will injure the morals of the young by reading it, to circulate among their pupils.

Every man should use envelopes with his name and address on them that they may be returned in case they are not called for. We can furnish the very best with name and business printed on them for less money than you can buy the envelopes for. Call and see us.

It is said that the presiding officer at the Democratic rally last Thursday evening, who by the way is an old line Democrat, called for three cheers for Butler, and then sat down. It is supposed his courage failed him at the last minute, and he could not lead in the cheers.

The many specials in this paper call attention to the coming of Robinson & McAllister's Minstrels. This company have been received by "big houses" wherever they have appeared. Those who enjoy minstrelsy should not miss the opportunity of seeing a first class company.

It seems strange that some people will endanger life and limb by attempting to cross a railroad track in front of a moving train. This is frequently seen on the Square, and nearly resulted fatally last Monday. As the 3.45 train from Boston on the South Reading branch was approaching the station, a lady was seen trying to cross the track; she was repeatedly warned by the flagman not to cross, the engineer blew his whistle and she narrowly escaped being struck. This experience may learn her to be more careful next time.

Recent storms are rough on campaign flags.

Mr. Arthur Elliott is driving for C. A. Thomas.

Mr. Augustus Sanger, Sr., has gone on a short vacation to Keene, N. H.

The Essex Club Butler flag was blown down last night. It was torn off some ten inches from the top.

The Republican members of the Essex Club will have a flag raising to-night at 7.30—after which a rally will take place at Town Hall. Hon. Geo. B. Loring of Salem, Hon. Frank D. Allen or Lynn, and E. W. Burdette, Esq., of Boston, will speak. Music by Salem Cadet Band. The old Garfield Guards will also parade.

The Band of Hope grows in numbers, almost outgrowing the room in which it was formed. Dr. F. A. Gardner addressed the meeting last Sabbath night in well chosen words, setting forth the shelter from temptation, which the children will have, from sign ing the pledge against intoxicating liquors and tobacco.

PAINE'S FURNITURE Manufacturing Establishment in Boston should be visited by all who are about to purchase new furniture.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The many friends in this town of Rev. L. L. Wood, of Helena, Montana, will be interested in the following description of his church there, the corner stone of which was laid with great ceremony recently, according to the rites of Masons of Helena:—The corner stone was laid after the walls were up and the building well advanced. The edifice is now approaching completion and promises to be the finest Protestant meeting house in the territory. Yet by economical management it is to cost less than any other church building in the city of Helena. It is situated on a corner lot in one of the best locations in the place; the walls are of brick; the architecture is in the form of a Greek cross which brings the pulpit near the centre of the audience; it is roofed with metallic shingles—which is something new in Montana—and has a bell tower in the centre, surmounted with an ornamental finial; has stained glass windows; inclined floor in the auditory; Sunday school room, lady's parlor, pastor's study, etc., is to be heated by furnaces and lighted with electric lights, which are used in place of gas, in Helena. The parsonage, also of brick, adjoins the church in the rear, has twelve rooms and will be ready for occupancy in December. We trust the pastor may live many years to enjoy his beautiful surroundings.

The famous minstrel, Billy McAllister, will be at the Institute, Friday night.

The Essex South Conference met at the Chestnut street Congregational Church in Lynn, Thursday. The attendance was very large, and the meeting one of the most successful and interesting held in several years. The Rev. Walter Barton was Moderator, and the Rev. T. F. Waters, of Ipswich, Assistant Scribe. The exercises commenced at 9 A. M. with a prayer meeting led by the Rev. H. L. Brickett of Lynnfield, after which a business meeting was held. The essay upon "The ritualistic element in public worship" was read by Rev. Dr. Atwood of Salem. The topic "Does Christianity make progress in doctrine?" was discussed in the affirmative by the Revs. A. W. Moore of Lynn, and S. Linton Bell, and in the negative by Rev. O. T. Lanphear, of Beverly. A basket dinner was served at noon. The Rev. A. E. Winship, Miss Sybil Carter, a teacher in Utah, and Rev. A. J. Sessions made interesting remarks upon the work of the New West Commission in combating Mormanism in Utah and Catholicism in New Mexico. An interesting discussion upon the topic, "What responsibility have Christians for religious and reformatory work not connected with our churches?" by Revs. F. G. Clark of Gloucester, J. W. Colwell of Peabody, and R. B. Howard of Rockport, closed the afternoon.

If you want to enjoy a pleasant evening, go to the Minstrels Friday night.

The Democrats held their first rally last Thursday evening. Early in the evening headed by the Salem Brass Band, with some thirty men and boys carrying torches, and a large crowd on the side walks, they marched down Main street to Washington as far as the Washington House, where the proprietor, "Billy" Hayes, threw to the breeze a flag bearing the names of Benj F. Butler and Aaron F. Clark. After cheers and fireworks they countermarched down Washington street to the residence of Aaron F. Clark, where the speakers of the evening were received and escorted to the square, when a flag, bearing the names of Butler and Prince was put out amid the usual amount of red fire and fireworks, while a cannon boomed away at intervals. After the flag raising they marched to the town hall which was soon filled, and were addressed by Forrest L. Evans, Esq., Senator Baldwin and Hon. Wm. D. Northend. The gentlemen's remarks were appropriate for the Butler men assembled, and they were frequently applauded. Mr. Nathan Bushby presided. An imperturbable greenbacker was on hand to ask a few questions, but was speedily squelched.

Seats for the grand Minstrel show at the Institute, Friday night, are now on sale at B. F. Stevens'.

Public bars, where men resort for liquor and not for food, cannot be licensed under the present liquor law. So decides our supreme court. This has been generally understood all the time, but hundreds of bars have been licensed every year all the same, because of the desire to please the rumsellers, or from a lack of backbone in licensing officials.

The old three cent postage stamps are good for their face value in paying postage, though they cannot be exchanged for the new two cent ones. Nearly every day some one will bring in three or four threes and ask the postmaster to exchange them.

A nice assortment of grapes at Geo Stevens'.

The Methodist Sunday School last Sunday evening held a Harvest concert at their church. The congregation crowded the church, while hundreds left for want of room. The decorations were very appropriate and displayed excellent taste. Upon an arch which spanned the front of the pulpit platform, was the word "Welcome," the letters of which were made of ears of corn; upon a background of evergreen and hanging from beneath like pendants, were large and different colored clusters of grapes, while the various products of garden and field, of tree and vine, tastefully piled upon the platform, rose in graceful pyramids amid vines, flowers and vases of prepared and variagated grasses, while a large basket of splendid flowers rose above and crowned the whole. In the rear, vines ran along the front of the balustrade of the orchestra, among which were hanging large ears of golden corn, while extending along the rail above were placed various vases and pots of flowers, flanked at either end by a splendid pot of Chrysanthemums, the whole presenting a picture elegant and beautiful. The exercises, under the popular and efficient superintendent, Walter A. Baker, were very interesting, holding the interest of the large audience tot he last. The hour was occupied in dialogues and recitations, interspersed with singing. The Secretary and Treasurer's reports showed the school in a flourishing condition, full of life, growing and prosperous. There has been an increase of 31 scholars since last April; the membership at present being 170. Since April 100 volumes have been added to the Library. And thus far during the year, $170.61 has been raised by the School. The Superintendent and Pastor's remarks were full of hope and encouragement.

Secure your ticket for the Minstrel show Friday night and avoid the rush at the door.

The class in elocution to which we called attention last week, had a very auspicious opening at the room of the Women's Christian Union, over Whidden's store, last evening; sixteen members were present, all of whom showed great interest in the teacher and her methods. No one interested in elocution should miss this opportunity to take up the work under a competent teacher whose terms are certainly lower than they merit. The first lesson will be given at the above named room at 7.30 o'clock on Thursday of next week. Any information in regard to terms, etc., can be obtained of Miss Eva Raddin or at the store of B. F. Stevens.

We have had our joke about the profanity and wire and other crooked things requisite to putting up the stove, but this week some of our neighbors have had the experience. Every second man's wife has a towel wrapped around her head and a broomstick in her hand, with which she frantically jabs him under the chin, while he endeavors to do the balancing act upon a parlor chair covered with a newspaper, at the same time trying to get the end joint into the stove-pipe hole. A fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind, but a woman feeling to support a stove-pipe with a broomhandle would make good St. Anthony shudder.

There isn't any room to doubt that the coming winter is to be "awful cold." The prophets all say so, and a man is insane that disputes the prophets. They have found moss growing thick on the trees, frogs standing on their heads, sunflowers pointing towards the north pole, grape vines running around the poles instead of up them, the hair is growing thicker on "our boys" head, and there are a thousand other signs to show that every human being will be frozen as stiff as a chip before January.

The Baptist society was the first to inaugurate a series of church festivals Last Thursday evening, notwithstanding a brass band paraded the streets and a flag raising was going on at the Square, there was a good attendance. Beans and brown bread, ice cream and cake were offered for sale. Vocal music was furnished by the choir. Games and a social time was enjoyed. About $20 was made for the society. The next will be an oyster supper in about two weeks.

Mrs. M. S. Richardson of Middleton, and her sister, met with a serious accident last Saturday evening, which very fortunately resulted without great injury to either ladies. They were driving through Elm street, when by some means the carriage whiffletree became detached and the horse started to run, and both ladies were jerked violently over the dash board. Aside from a few bruises and ruin to their clothes, the ladies escaped.

One day last week as a lady named Morton, living on Pleasant street, was washing a child only a few months old, a safety pin which was sticking in her dress fell into the child's mouth and became lodged in its throat. A physician was called and the pin removed. Fortunately it fell with the pointed part downward or the throat must have been terribly lacerated in relieving the child of it.

SOUTH PEABODY.

Mr. Levi Spaulding is building an addition to the store of Mr. J. H. Keith, on Lynn street, to be used as a horse car station.

Robinson & McAllister's minstrels, have the reputation of being the best company on the road.

Mr. H. A. Besse is doing a good job on Lynn street, above S. K. Newhall's house.

Prof. Bill did not have a sufficient number at the meeting, Tuesday, Oct. 16, to warrant the starting of a singing school in this place. Quite a number have joined his class at the South church.

The water in Spring Pond is the lowest ever known at this season of the year.

Considerable complaint is being made of the side walks and gutters in this section of the town. After a heavy rain the water in the gutters runs over the sidewalks and makes them impassible. If it is the fault of our surveyor, we respectfully call his attention to it, as it should be remedied before it freezes. Take for instance the sidewalk on Lynn street, from County street to Lynnfield street. During every rain the water floods the sidewalk so that foot passers have to get into the road to avoid wetting their feet; and on County street, from the pastor's to Mr. Sylvester Needham's the walks look more like cow paths than public highways. On Brown and Maple streets they are about the same. It is hoped that something will be done towards repairing them.

Mr. Frank Newhall shot three ducks in Spring pond last week.

Mr. J. B. Newhall has taken all of the ice from his houses at Brown's pond.

The Ladies' Aid Society met at the house of Rev. J. W. Colwell last Tuesday afternoon and evening and a very enjoyable time was had by all present.

Rev. F. G. Clark of Gloucester and Rev. Mr. Colwell exchange pulpits next Sabbath, October 28. Mr. Clark preaches at West Peabody Hall at 10.30 A. M. and at South Peabody, at 2.15 P. M.

There will be a social gathering at the house of Mr. Luther French, on Lynn street, to-morrow (Thursday) evening. It is hoped that a large party will assemble.

The season for putting up stoves and heaters is now at hand, and the chilly mornings and evenings induce people to build fires for comfort. Before doing so, however, the flues and pipes should be thoroughly examined and all defects remedied at once. A little carelessness in this respect may make it decidedly warm for the family in more ways than was intended. Caskin Bros. will attend to it for you.

Messrs. Scott Brothers, who own Raddin's Ledge in this town, commenced last Wednesday on a foundation for a new Ocean House at Swampscott, on the site of the one burned there over a year ago. It is to be rebuilt by the proprietors of the former house. Scott Bros. also have a contract for the foundation of a factory to be built by the Magee Furnace Co. at Chelsea.

How swiftly the seasons roll by us! Especially as we grow older, the years seem to pass by with railroad speed. Nature's changes of aspect come in such quick succession that we hardly realize a year has begun until we are forced to contemplate its end. Spring, summer, autumn and winter, are kaleidoscope presentiments of the years as they come to us.

It has been decided that on Sunday, Nov. 18, at noon, the standard time in Boston shall be changed to conform to what is known as the "75th Meridian." The Harvard observatory and the public clocks of Boston will from that time be 15 minutes 44.5 seconds later than heretofore, and exactly 5 hours later than that of Greenwich time.

Last Friday while the Democratic flag was caught on a telephone wire, forming a kind of bag, a lot of wicked boys returning from school soon had a quantity of stones thrown into it. Shortly after a lady passing under the flag received the shower of stones upon her head and hands. She was considerably bruised, and the accident might have been more serious.

The little fly enjoyed his summer sport and had his own way for a time. But now he stands on the window pane in a cool ray of sunshine, rubbing his legs together vainly trying to keep warm. His heart is sad for he knows that he as well as Uncle Benjamin must go.

Our local friends are beginning to understand the amount of assistance they can be to us by making it a point to hand us everything of a local nature. We can't be everywhere, hence many times items of local interest escape our attention.

When our lady readers are in Lynn, they should purchase their confectionery of Nador & Taylor on Market street. They have a large stock of the best goods of their own manufacture.

Don't fail to see Robinson & McAllister's minstrels at the Institute, Friday night.

ALL FOR NOTHING.

WHY THE DOCTOR WAS DISGUSTED, AND WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN DONE WITHOUT HIM.

"Well, wife," said Dr. E.—, as he entered his house, which was situated in a cosy village in central New York, "I have got back from a long and dreary ride away down among the mountains, and all to no purpose whatever. The messenger said the man wouldn't live till morning, when the fact is he had only an ordinary attack of colic. If the simpletons had only had sense enough to put a BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER on his stomach he would have been all right in an hour or two. But some folks are slow to learn, added the old physician, swallowing the cup of steaming tea which his wife had just poured for him.

Doctor E— was right, yet people do learn, even though slowly. The rapid increasing use of Benson's plaster proves this beyond question, and the good doctors are certain to be saved much of their needless toil. In all diseases, capable of being affected by a plaster Benson's acts efficiently and at once. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the centre. Price 25 cents. Book Notices.

Something to Read for November, contains a fine illustrated colored engraving. Yes. It's a beauty. Something to Read contains interesting serials and short stories. For sale by Peabody News Co.

The Season, the leading ladies' illustrated fashion magazine, for November, contains rich colored plates, national costume pictures, embroidery designs, etc. International News Co., 31 Beekman street, N. Y.

Besides the usual amount of articles, news and notes the Musical Herald for October contains the following musical selections:—"Et Incarnatus," Henry Farmer, and "In Shadowland," Ciro Pinsuti, vocal; and "Marche Triompale," L. Streabbog, instrumental.

BALLOU'S MAGAZINE for November has a long and interesting chapter of Mr. William H. Thomes's "Belle of Australia." One more issue in the magazine, and it will be finished; and then the author will begin a new tale, called, "On Land and Sea, or California in the Years 1843, '44, 45," when Mr. Thomes was on the coast, collecting hides. Besides "The Belle," Ballou has some thirty-five different articles, illustrations, poems, stories, household and puzzle pages, and other matters of interest. Remember, the magazine is only $1.50 per annum, or 15 cents a single copy. Just send 10 cents for a sample copy, and see what a nice magazine it is. For sale everywhere. Published by Thomes & Talbot, 23 Hawley Street, Boston.

The November ATLANTIC continues several of the features which made the October number one of unusual excellence. The serial stories, "A Roman Singer" and "Newport," have each two new chapters. One of the most delightful articles is a biographical sketch of Dr. Ezra Ripley, of Concord, by Ralph Waldo Emerson. Rev. Brooke Herford contributes an engaging and valuable paper on "The Trustworthiness of the Hebrew Traditions." Albert S. Bolles furnishes some important suggestions toward a proper answer to the question "What Instruction should be given in our Colleges?" Olive Thorne Miller writes in an attractive style of the robin, which she names "The Bird of the Morning." There are poems by Edith M. Thomas, C. P. Cranch, and John Boyle O'Reilly. Reviews of new books and the Contributors' Club conclude an excellent number of this magazine. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

The opening article of LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE for November has for its subject "Henry Irving." It is a sketch and a criticism, by Rev. Robert Laird Collier. The illustrations are extremely fine, and give a vivid idea of Mr. Irving's looks and attitudes both on and off the stage. Other papers are "Curiosities of Instinct," by Felix L. Oswald, "Housekeeping in Normandy," by Margaret Bertha Wright, "On the Mountain-Trails of Montana," by W. A. Baillie-Grohman, the Anglo-Austrian sportsman, and "Out After Tiger," another sporting sketch by Phil Robinson, author of "Under the Sun," etc. "The Jewel in the Lotos" draws towards its close with deepening force and interest, and is embellished by a striking and finely executed frontispiece; and the book notices are unusually full and well suited to guide the choice of intending purchasers. It will be seen that the number is a very varied and attractive one.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for November is a very attractive one and in the way of illustration is the equal of any. The striking frontispiece by Abbey is an illustration of a poem by Austin Dobson. "Some Glimpses of Artistic London," is the title of an illustrated article on several famous artists and is accompanied by glimpses of their studios. "A Vacation in Vermont" and "The Metropolitan Opera House" in New York are other illustrated articles which will find interested readers. The latter article shows many of the artistic beauties of the decoration of the great opera house which it describes. The "Evacuation of New York by the British, 1783," by Montgomery Schuyler, will be of especial interest in view of the centennial anniversary of that event. Besides these, there are other interesting papers, short stories, poems, and the usual departments. The publishers announce many attractions for the Christmas, or December number of the magazine, in which will be commenced a new story by Wm. Black—"Judith Shakespeare."

The NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW for November, satisfies the requirements of the most exacting reader. Senator H. B. Anthony writes of "Limited Suffrage in Rhode Island." Dr. Norvin Green, President of the Western Union Company, in an article entitled "The Government and the Telegraph," presents statistics designed to prove that the service in this country is both cheaper and more efficient than in any of the countries of Europe where the governments own the lines. The Rev. David N. Utter brings out from oblivion the record of certain alleged atrocious crimes of "John Brown of Osawatomie." There are two scientific articles, namely, "Solar Physics," by Professor Balfour Stewart, and "Modern Explosives," by Gen. John Newton. In "Suggestions in regard to the Public Service," Green B. Raum offers certain facts going to prove that the clerks and other employes of the government departments at Washington, even before the passage of the Civil Service act, were in the main both faithful and efficient. Finally, "Dr. Hammond's Estimate of Woman," is reviewed by Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake, Miss Nina Morais, Mrs. Sara A. Underwood and Dr. Clemence S. Lozier. Fifty cents a copy; $5 a year. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, and sold by newsdealers generally.

OUTWITTING THE OLD MAN.—A nice young man got into a tramway carriage, and saw, to his delight, the only vacant seat was by the side of a young lady acquaintance. He made for that seat with joyous strides, and her eyes answered his delighted looks. But just as he got there an elderly party walked up the aisle and dropped into the coveted seat. The young man approached more slowly, and accosted the young lady.

"How is your brother?" he asked; "is he able to get out?"

"Oh, yes," she answered.

"Will he be very badly marked?" he continued, and the old gentleman grew suddenly interested.

"Oh, no," said the fair deceiver; "with the exception of a few small marks on his forehead, you would never know he had ever had it."

"Were you not afraid of taking it?" the young man went on, while the old man broke out in cold perspiration.

"Not at all," she replied, "I had been vaccinated, you know."

The seat was vacated instantly, the two young hearts beat as half-a-dozen, and the prattle of "nice talk" strewed that of the carriage, while a gray-haired old man scowled upon them from the farthest corner.

Women are fond of arms. They always want them around them.

Now is the time to treat Catarrh of long standing. Ely's Cream Balm reaches obstinate cases, where other remedies fail. In it lies the relief you seek. Price 50 cents. Apply into nostrils with the finger.

A gentleman from Orwell, Pa., called my attention to Ely's Cream Balm as a remedy for Catarrh, Hay Fever, &c. He was so earnest in asserting it to be a positive cure (himself having been cured by it) that I purchased a stock. The Balm has already effected cures. P. F. Hyatt, M. D., Bordentown, N. J.

I have been a severe sufferer from Catarrh for 15 years, with distressing pain over my eyes, gradually the disease worked down upon my lungs. About a year and a half ago I began using Ely's Cream Balm, with most gratifying results and am to-day apparently cured. Z. C. Warren, Rutland, Vt.

You may depend upon it that he is a good man whose intimate friends are all good.

GONE NEVER TO RETURN.—Gardiner, Me.—Mr. Daniel Gray, a prominent lumber merchant, writes that his wife had severe rheumatic pains, so severe as to render her unable to sleep. From the first application of the famous German Remedy, St. Jacobs Oil, she experienced unspeakable relief, and in two hours the pain had entirely gone.

BEATEN BY WIND AND RAIN.

SAILORS ON THE SEA AND LABORERS ON THE LAND—HELP FOR THE LARBOARD WATCH.

"There is no telling the force of the wind; and the height and rush of the sea was simply appalling. When Cornish, the boatswain, and myself came down from aloft, after furling the main-royal, we were wet through and half dead from the hard toil and the exposure."

So said the mate of the "Grosvenor," when relating the incidents of an Atlantic cyclone, after nearly all the crew had mutinied and left the ship in boats to escape punishment.

Mechanics who labor upon lofty buildings; carpenters, masons, painters and bricklayers, may be called a kind of shore sailors, and that their numbers are not more largely decimated by accident and disease is a marvel. Mr. Jabez Rogers, tuck pointer, house painter, etc., of No. 608 Madison street, Chicago, over a pipe and autumn fire, said to your correspondent:

"No. I am only a young man yet—thirty-five, that's all; but the kind of work I do tells on a fellow's looks and constitution. Last Spring I was about run down with overwork and exposure. I had to give up doing any work myself, and just made out to oversee my men in a sort of half-and-half way. I thought I was played out for good and all. I was racked with a cough, stupified with a cold, and torn and disabled with Rheumatism. Do? I took PARKER'S GINGER TONIC and it cured me. Those three words tell the story—it cured me."

To all persons subject to risk from exposure, PARKER'S GINGER TONIC will commend itself. It purifies the Blood, incites the torpid Liver to healthy activity, and opens the pores of the skin. This is the season of outdoor perils to health. Keep the Tonic near you. Prices 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Hiscox & Co., Chemists, New York.

We don't say that all the bargains in the city are to be found at our establishment or that no one understands how to run a great retail store except ourselves.

But we do say that our assortments are so complete that there is scarcely anything you can ask for that we have not got on hand; that our prices are low because our while our business is very large, we can afford to sell cheaply and we do it. All our departments are stocked with new, seasonable goods, our prices as a rule are lower than those charged elsewhere, and we are making this week several special offerings at remarkably low prices.

RENT AND OTHER EXPENSES ARE COMPARATIVELY SMALL

SPARKS.

There is one thing that should be done at the brick house, and that is to have a new set of keys and new locks. as there are more keys held by those outside of the department than there are by firemen, and some of the men have not got keys for the outside doors.

Steamer one has been thoroughly overhauled and cleaned lately, and last Friday she was taken to the brook on Endicott street and was tested. She made steam from cold water in a very short time, and threw a fine stream of water for a time, but there was not enough water in the brook and the machine had to be shifted to the hydrant on Warren street. After everything was in readiness the water was let on, and the engine started up, the water guage showing 140 pounds pressure, when all of a sudden the air seemed to be filled with flying hosemen. One was seen picking rocks from the gutter, another took a flying leap into an adjoining field, while the third lovingly embraced the pipe and rolled in the mud. If any one wants to try the same fun, let him tackle steamer one with a short line of hose, a small nozzle and 140 pounds water pressure, and he will think he was struck by lightning.

We give in this issue a short history of the old Torrent Engine, as we find it in looking over the old records, from the date of the formation of the company, April 29th, 1830, to the first day of May, 1882, or a period of fifty-two years. The engine went into commission in 1832, at that time being located near the square on Central street, where the old hearse house used to stand. The records show that they used to go to all fires within a radius of ten miles, and always did good service As there are quite a number of the members of the first company still living we will give the roll for the fire year of 1830 and 31.

The engine was located on the square until 1833 or 4, when it was moved to their new quarters on the site of the house now owned and occupied by Joshua Buxton. The roll for the next few years was principally filled with the Buxtons, Bushbys and Osborns, thus showing that the company was "solid" in every respect. At the great fire on the square, Sept. 22d, 1843, the company and machine kept up their record. The pay of the firemen in those days was one shilling per hour, and a stated sum allowed by the state law. In 1849 the new Torrent was put into service, and did good service up to the time of the introduction of the high service. There was always a spirit of rivalry between the "Garp Laners" as they were called, and the "Down Alongers," and many is the race and "washes" that have been given and taken. On the fourth of June, 1860, the Torrent and Eagle had a trial on the square and both engines threw streams 20 feet higher than the steeple of the South Church, or 187 feet, after which the two companies sat down to a supper. But the greatest interest to the "boys" came, when in 1874 they began to try their luck at the musters, the first one being at South Weymouth in 1874, when she took the first prize of $200. When the little "tub" arrived in South Weymouth, she was christened the "onion sprinkler" and the name stuck by her the rest of her days in Peabody. During the next nine years she attended ten musters and captured prizes at seven of them, amounting in all to about $850.

TORRENT'S MUSTER RECORD.

South Weymouth, Sept. 17, 1874, 204 ft., 11½ in., first prize, $200.
Wyoma Driving Park, Sept. 16, 1875, 184 ft., 7 in., first prize, $200.
Wyoma Driving Park, Aug 25, 1876, 195ft., 11in., third prize, Silver Trumpet.
Wyoma Park, Sept. 20, 1877, 163 ft., 2 in., first prize, $150.
Danvers Park, Oct. 11, 1877, 180 ft., 5½ in., fourth prize $76.
Danvers Park, July 24, 1879, 206 ft., fifth prize, $75.
South Weymouth, 1882, 196 ft., 1½ in., second prize $100.
Hudson, Mass., 1875, 156 ft., 3 in., no prize.
South Weymouth, Sept. 26, 1878, 183 ft., no prize.
Hingham, Sept. 14, 1880, 207 ft., 7 in., no prize.

Besides the above victories the hosemen of the Torrent company won in two races about $100, the first one being at Wyoma Park, Aug. 25, 1876, when they run 1-2 mile in 2 minutes 20 seconds, taking the second prize. Again at Waltham, Oct. 5, 1876, they ran 1-2 mile in 2 minutes, taking the second prize at that place. The boys of Hose 3, if they cannot have the chance to attend musters as the old company did, can at least point with pride to the old record, and can claim to be the oldest established organization in the department. The old tub has gone into a part of the State, where there is more interest in firemen's musters, and in all probability we shall hear from the "little onion sprinkler" again.

Hose 3 are not going to take part in the race at Danvers.

The fair of Hose 4, which closed Monday evening has proved a success both financially and otherwise. The table sales were good and the book prizes all turned in large profits. The hall was crowded every evening during the fair. One of the pleasant features of the fair, was the presentation, on Saturday evening, of a handsome gold badge to the foreman, Mr. A. E. Johnson. Mr. Geo. M. Wilson presented the badge, with the following speech:

MR. FOREMAN:—It is usually our duty to pay attention to what you say, but just now I want your attention to a few words in behalf of your command. It is my duty, which I propose to do at all hazards, to insist that you obey the members of the Hose company, so far as to accept from them, with their respect and good wishes, this badge, which they hope you may be spared to wear, since it is so strongly desired.

Foreman Johnson was taken completely by surprise, but he accepted the badge and thanked the givers in his usual happy style. The badge is of gold in the shape of a fancy hat front, with the engraving on the face, "Foreman, A. E. Johnson, Hose 4, Peabody," with a four wheel hose carriage. The badge was designed and furnished by J. F. Moreland. The drawing of the season ticket prizes took place, under the charge of the committee from the Board of Engineers, with the following result. David A. Larrabee of Hose 2, sold the largest number of season tickets, 245, and was awarded the gold badge. The fair will net about three hundred dollars for the company.

The Relief Association held a meeting Monday evening in Temperance Hall, and took steps toward getting a Charter. After the business was explained by the committee the meeting took action on it and then adjourned, subject to the call of the committee.

The goat and the unknown prize at the fair, caused no little merriment.

Engineer Lord and Foreman Buxton of Hose 3, were in Concord yesterday and visited the Abbott Downing Co's works, where the Horse Hose carriage was built. The Engineers are looking around to see what they can get in the shape of carriages for the hose companies 3 and 4.

Ira Cheeney of Hose 1, is very sick with Typhoid fever.

There was a slight fire in the house of Mr. John W. Osborne in Bowditch Court, last Monday afternoon, caused by a horse full of clothes falling on the stove. The fire was extinguished by two boys, without giving an alarm.

The goat was drawn by a man by the name of O'Shea, living on Hancock street in this town. The boys of Hose 4 are glad to get rid of the beast, as it was considerable trouble to take care of. Some of Hose 4's boys bear the marks of the goat's butting qualities.

Hose 4 wish to return their sincere thanks to all who helped them make their fair a success.

The harness was drawn by Miss Etta Noyes of this town.

Andrew Dodge, of Steamer one, got his hand and wrist badly lacerated at the trial of the steamer last Friday afternoon, by being thrown on the ground. ZERO.

Poet's Corner.

My First Pair of Boots.

(1829—1879.)

BY RICHARD OULAHAN.

'Twas the vigil of Christmas, away in the past,
When a loving young mother, of rich raven locks,
Plagued with coaxing and teasing, had promis'd, at last,
That the "gift" to her boy should be no baby's box;
Full of hopes for the morrow, Queen Mab spun a dream
About candy-framed pictures, and fairest of fruits,
'Till my eyelids unlock'd, in the morning's first gleam,
And I found, on the pillow, my first pair of boots!

Oh, the joy of that waking!—Now fifty long years
Since I kiss'd their red tops with uproarious glee;
And, in free dishabille, amid laughter and cheers,
Hugg'd the old mastiff, Wolf, barking "encore!" at me,
When the red-leggin'd jack-daw, so humanly vain,
Struts about, like a fop, and exultingly hoots,
I can fancy a little fat coxcomb again,
To his fellows displaying his first pair of boots.

In my waterproof armor, right up to the knees,
How I daringly dash'd where the boys fear'd to go;
Making light of the warning that "somebody'll freeze,"
As I plung'd through a miniature mountain of snow;
If these memories sadden, I'm glad when they come,
To attest that the heart is still fresh at the roots,
And remembers each scene, round its infancy's home,
Where my last Christmas box was my first pair of boots.

As we jostle along o'er the rocks of Life's track,—
In the dim distance leaving the schoolhouse and play,
From the brain-busy Present we seldom look back
Till the tablets of childhood are lost on the way—
Let the soldier have trophies, the poet green bays,
And the soul-troubled Shylock, his golden pursuits;
Heaven's angel of Happiness lovingly plays
With the boisterous boy in his first pair of boots.

(From the Fireside Favorite.)

To A Sleeping Babe.

BY LYDIA DAVIS THOMSON.

Beautiful babe, thou art sleeping now,
And the light of love plays over thy brow;
Tis the light of a holy and sinless love
That followed thee out from the realm above.
When thou from its radiant, sinless band
Didst wander away to this stranger land—
Beautiful babe thou art sleeping now,
Beautiful dreamer, what dreamest thou?

Over thee slumber her mantle throws;
Beneath it thou liest in careless repose,
And the deep, dark fringe of thy laughing eyes
Down on each dimpled cheek lovingly lies,
And over thy half parted lips the while
Thou'rt sleeping there flitteth an angel's smile;
Ah, yes in thy dreams thou art smiling now,
Beautiful dreamer, what dreamest thou?

Is the land thou dost wander in free from pain?
And free as thyself from sin's dark stain?
Does a holy light all thy dreamland grace,
Like that which plays over thy innocent face?
And do angel attendants walk ever with thee?
From thy half-opened lips, oh breathe it to me,
What visions of loveliness float 'round thee now,
Beautiful dreamer, what dreamest thou?

Are there sweet songs sung in thy dreamland world,
Is love's bright banner forever unfurled,
Are those who are dwelling there happy alway,
And does never a night close over the day?
But the thoughts I am breathing out softly to thee,
Are calling thee back to earth and to me;
So wake, blue eyes, wake, and tell to me now,
Beautiful dreamer, what dreamest thou?

Bad books are the prolific fountains of vice. They bring disgrace and destruction upon all weak enough to be influenced by their baneful teachings. The accursed hunger for gold, sacra auri fames, drives men to publish the productions of the "Devil's pen," and the cravings of fallen human nature for what is carnal and gross lead men and women, as well as men and boys to read them.

Somebody says that snoring is the spontaneous escape of those malignant feelings which the sleeper has not time to vent while awake.

Selected Story.

HER NEW SHOES.

She was a woman. If you ever ran a shoe store you will know what followed as she entered the store. She looked all around, picked up a pair of shoes off the counter, rubbed her thumbs along the soles, and timidly asked of the smiling clerk:

'Do you keep ladies' shoes here?'

'We do,' he promptly answered. 'What style shall I show you?'

For more than two weeks she had had her mind made up for a pair which laced on the inside, and all her friends had encouraged her idea, but it wouldn't have been like a woman to ask the clerk for a particular style.

'Let's see? Let's see!' she mused. 'I suppose you have the French heels?'

'Oh, yes,' he answered, and he soon had twenty pairs before her. She closely inspected each pair, from No. 2 up to No. 6; asked the grade of material in each, and twice during the fifteen minutes she seemed on the point of trying on a pair.

'Are you sure they are the French heels?' she finally asked.

'Oh, yes, you can be sure of that.'

'Well, I guess I won't buy any to-day. I did think something of looking at some button shoes?'

'Certainly; here is a large variety. Do you wish kid?'

'I presume,' she answered, as she wet her finger, and rubbed the heel of a shoe, 'that kid will wear longer than morocco?'

'Of course. These are patent buttons, you see.'

'Yes, I see. If I ever buy a pair of button shoes, I shall insist on having the patent button.'

'Did you wan't a pair of these?'

'Let's see,' she mused again, fastening her eyes on the top shelf.

She was buried in the deepest thought for a long minute, and the clerk hardly dared draw his breath. Then her head gradually dropped from shelf till they rested on his garnet neck-tie, and she said:

'Not to-day. Have you shoes with lace?'

'Oh, yes.'

'Those which lace in front?'

'Yes'm. Here is something fine. I can sell you a pair of these for twenty shillings.'

'Can you? Why shoes must have gone up or down! Shoes which lace in front are stylish, aren't they?'

'Oh, yes.'

'And they wear as good as any?'

'Just as good. I can recommend the material in these shoes as they were made for us here in Detroit. Will you try a pair?'

She seemed about to do so. She looked over at the lounge, seized a pair of threes, and was then halted by a new idea. She put the shoes down, let her eyes drop to the floor, and after a mental calculation of seventy seconds she suddenly inquired:

'Did you say you had shoes that lace on the side?'

'Yes, we have. Would you like to see them?'

She hesitated, looked up and down the shelves as if perplexed, and finally said she would. He emptied two boxes, praised the style and material, and advised her by all means to get those if she wanted to be in style and have a good fit.

'I can wear threes,' she observed, partly turning away, 'but owing—'

'Yes'm. You do want a glove fitting shoe. You are very sensible on that point. Fives are much too large, of course, but they are better for the feet in winter. These are fives, but very small ones. In some stores they would be marked threes.'

'I guess I'll try them on,' she faintly remarked, as she sat down.

'Yes'm. I'm sure—'

No, he wasn't. She had suddenly paused again. What if there was a big hole in the heel of her stocking! Suppose her big toe had worked through, as big toes sometimes will!

'I can try them on alone,' she finally said, and while the clerk was busy on the other side of the counter she ripped the buttons off her right shoe, pulled it off and got her foot into the new one. It was a pinch. Her toes felt cramped and her heel complained.

'Do they fit?' asked the clerk, leaning over the counter.

She didn't say.

'Perhaps you had better try sixes, with a broad sole and a low instep,' he suggested.

'What!' she exclaimed, as her face reddened, 'why, I can hardly find my foot in these! I'll take them on account of my chilblains, but I'll only wear them around the house.'

'Very well; I'll wrap them up.'

She paid for the shoes, took them in her hand, and went out with a sweet smile on her face, but she was the woman who was heard saying to herself on a street car:

'Gone and made a dunce of myself again by getting tight shoes. I wish I'd thrown the money into the fire.'

Choosing Your Associates.—One of the most endearing connections with this life is to know that we have friends whom we have tried and can trust. Such friends are very scarce, and, perhaps, rarer still are those who know or are capable of judging when they have such friends. Our characters are for good or bad from the company we keep. Confidence in our power to refrain from the vices of others too often inveigles us with the risk of mingling with associates whom we know to be our inferiors both mentally and morally. The daily influence of such company will blind us to what we know to be wrong, and we are unconsciously led into acting in such a manner as we would have formerly condemned. In forming friendships avoid these lower types, and let your mode of living be directed by comparing your daily actions with the standard of what you conscientiously consider morally right. Beware of the two-faced man. A slur coming from one that is supposed to be your friend carries with it more destruction than many things equally untruthful from every known enemy you have. You had better make such your outright enemies, rather than have them counted as your apparent friends.

Cure for Newspaper Borrowing.—We offer the following as a certain cure for the disease of borrowing newspapers. Immediately upon receiving your paper carefully cut out some item—it makes no difference what it is. The borrower's boy will come after the paper—he will take it home—within three minutes he will scoot down street to the newspaper office and return with a paper of the same date as the one borrowed. By the time the clipped paper has circulated among the female borrowers, the street will be alive with hurrying boys. Not one woman will sleep a wink without knowing what the cut item was. Next day pursue the same course and similar results will follow. In obstinate neighborhoods these proceedings may last three or four days, but no longer. The rule is infallible.

Anecdote of Ben. Butler.—He was called on by a person who wanted to have a talk with him.

'Mr. Butler,' said he, 'one of my neighbor's cows jumped my garden gate and destroyed my flower beds. The gate was the height required by law. Now I wish to know whether I can obtain damages.'

'Most assuredly,' replied the widow's friend.

'Well, Mr. Butler, how much?'

'Oh, about ten dollars.'

'But, Mr. Butler,' triumphantly, 'the cow was yours.'

'Ah!' said Mr. Butler, thoughtfully; and he looked unutterable things out of his bad eye. Then he turned to his desk, scratched off a few lines on a piece of paper, and handed it to his visitor. It was in the form of an account, and read as follows;

'B. F. Butler to Mr.——, Dr., to damages caused by cow, $10; Cr., by legal advice, $5, balance due $5.'

'Mr.——,' said Mr. Butler, softly, 'you needn't hurry about the payment.'

That was a frank reply to a friend's intimation of his approaching marriage: 'I should make my compliments to both of you; but as I don't know the lady I cannot felicitate you, and I know you so well that I can't felicitate her.'

Many candidates are called but few are chosen.

Consumption. — Theodore Parker came of a sturdy stock of New England farmers, intellectual, long-lived and capable of continuous toil. But of his nine brothers and sisters all but one died of consumption. Theodore, himself, died of the same disease at forty-nine, though his constitution had seemed of iron. But he had crowded the work of a long life-time into less than fifty years, and that toil brought out the seed-implanted disease. He gave a natural explanation as to how the fatal disease entered into a family which ought to have been long-lived. His father's house stood on a hill-side, which sloped into a large, spongy meadow. The meadow was always wet. The mists were heavy nights and mornings, and thus the seeds of pulmonary disease were gradually sown. Under favoring circumstances they invariably ripened into death. Mr. Parker says: "Three generations of stout and long-lived men were born and grew up there; and if the fourth be now puny, and sink quicker to the grave, it is from no fault of the old house, but from the consumption which such spongy meadows in New England seldom fail to produce in the course of time. Even children, who have removed to healthier situations, carry with them the fatal poison in their blood, and transmit it to their sons and daughters.—Youth's Companion.

A Western paper, announcing the illness of the editor, piously adds: "All subscribers who have paid in advance are requested to remember him in their prayers. The others need not, as the prayers of the wicked avail nothing."

"How old would you think my daughter was," asked a mother of a lady friend at one of our Summer resorts; "would you think she was eighteen?" "Oh, yes," was the candid reply, "I should think she was eighteen—about ten years ago." They "never speak as they pass by," now.

How often you are irresistibly drawn to a plain, unassuming woman, whose soft, silvery tones render her positively attractive! In the social circle, how pleasant it is to hear a woman talk in a low key which always characterizes a true lady. In the sanctuary of home, how such a voice soothes the fretful child and cheers the weary husband!

The custom of appointing young lawyers to defend pauper criminals, says the San Antonio Herald, received a backset in our District Court. His Honor, Judge Noonan, had appointed two young lawyers to defend an old and experienced horse-thief. After inspecting his counsel for some time in silence, the prisoner rose in his place and addressed the bench. "Air them to defend me?" "Yes, sir," said his Honor. "Both of 'em?" inquired the prisoner. "Both of them," responded the Judge. "Then I plead guilty," and the poor wretch took his seat and sighed heavily.

LYNN.

It is rumored that the county ticket will be cut and slashed this year as never before, and Haskell and Graves will profit thereby.

The New England Clothing Co.'s piano scheme is attracting large numbers of purchasers at their finely appointed clothing house.

The Bijou Theatre Company, under Rock & Bachert's management, are doing an immense business on the New England Circuit.

When Graves, of this city, ran for County Commissioner in 1880, he received 334 more votes than did Garfield. He is very popular, and will leave Colby far behind.

Wouldn't Let Him In.—When Jay Gould was on his last trip West, a Chicago reporter was sent out to head him off and write up an interview. He overhauled the magnate down in Indiana, and, as Mr. Gould was in his special car, the reporter sent in his card by the conductor and soon followed it in person, or at least, tried to. The door of the car was locked. He rapped on it, and Mr. Gould appeared. The reporter held up his card. Mr. Gould stared at it. The reporter shouted his name. Mr. Gould didn't seem to hear it. The shover of the quill then called out:

"The Chicago —— wants your opinion on the question of refunding the six per cents!"

Mr. Gould regarded him through the glass with such a frigid expression that the interviewer has had cold feet ever since, but finally opened the door and asked:

"Young man, do you want me?"

"Yes, sir, Mr. Gould, I want to interview you on the subject of—:"

Mr. Gould began to shut the door.

"On the subject of the devil!" yelled the indignant reporter, as he saw all hopes fading away.

"Young man," said Mr. Gould as he opened the door an inch or two, "on that subject you had better see Jim Keene. He's got all the points, and is anxious to give them away to spite old Flood!"

The Paper Collar.—Didn't anybody ever notice how quickly the paper collar dropped out of sight? I can remember, and it is not so many years ago, when the paper collar held a mighty sway, except in summer, when the heat made it soft at the back of the neck and caused the corners under the chin to turn and assume a brownish hue. It was in general demand, and the thirteen and one-half neck man and the seventeen and one-half neck man alike carried a fifteen or twenty-cent box home under his arm rejoicing. There were several large factories here employing numerous hands, and not only the clothing and dry-goods, but cigar and grocery stores kept the collars for sale. You could get straight paper or linen finish just as you called for it, and you wern't at any expense for laundering. If a man was a little hard up for cash and the weather was any way fine, he could turn his collar inside out. But those days are gone, the factories are gone, and nearly all the paper collars are gone. You rarely see them now except in auction stores or upon some country dandy who comes to town with a white band around his neck over a check shirt. Cheap linen and laundrying have driven the paper collar to the wall.—St. Louis Post-Despatch.

A clergyman had been invited to fill a vacant pulpit. He was the guest of a leading member, and his host said he hoped he would avoid saying anything in his sermon to offend Spiritualists, as there were many in the town who attended their church. While walking down the street, another light of the church was met, who hoped he wouldn't say anything to offend the Universalists as many of them attended their church. Just as he was entering the pulpit, one of the deacons button-holed him and said:— "Largest liquor dealer in town is here in his pew; I hope you will not find it necessary to refer to that business." The perplexed clergyman then inquired: "What shall I preach about?" "Oh, replied, the deacon, "give to the Jews, they haven't a friend in town!"

The Children We Keep.

The children kept coming one by one,
Till the boys were five and the girls were three,
And the big brown house was live with fun
From the basement door to the old roof tree.
Like garden flowers the little ones grew,
Nurtured and trained with the tenderest care,
Warmed by love's sunshine, bathed in its dew,
They bloomed into beauty, like roses rare.

But one of the boys grew weary one day,
And leaning his head on his mother's breast,
He said, "I'm tired and cannot play:
Let me sit awhile on your knee and rest."
She cradled him close in her fond embrace,
She hushed him to sleep with her sweetest song,
And rapturous love still lighted his face
When his spirit had joined the heavenly throng.

Then the eldest girl with her thoughtful eyes,
Who stood where "the brook and the river meet,"
Stole softly away into paradise
Ere "the river" had reached her slender feet,
When the father's eyes on the grave were bent,
The mother looked upward beyond the skies:
"Our treasures," she whispered, "were only lent,
Our darling were angels in earth's disguise."

The years flew by and the children began
With longing to think of the world outside;
And as each in his turn become a man,
The boys proudly went from the father's side.
The girls were women so gentle and fair,
That lovers were speedy to win;
And with orange blossoms in braided hair,
The old homes was left, new homes to begin.

So, one by one, the children have gone—
The boys were five and the girls were three;
And the big brown house is gloomy and lone,
With but two old folks for its company.
They talk to each other about the past,
As they sit together at eventide,
And say, "All the children we keep at last
Are the boy and girl who in childhood died."

Harvey's Brave Deed.

He was a little bit of a chap, only twelve years old, and so pinched, and stunted, and wenzened, that you would have thought he could not be more than eight. His eyes were large and brown, and wistful, like those of an intelligent dog, and it was the pathetic language of these same brown eyes that aroused the compassion of an elderly, well-to-do farmer one morning.

Mr. Adams (the farmer) stood on a corner waiting for a car, and above all the din and bustle of the crowd that hurried past, he heard a shrill, boyish voice calling,—

"'Star!' 'Herald!' 'Sun!' Dreadful murder in the sixth ward! Full acount of the tragedy!"

"Hello, Starvey! Sold any yet?" broke in a second voice.

Mr. Adam turned sharply around, and decided that the first voice belonged to as miserable a specimen of rags and bones as it had ever been his bad fortune to see, and he waited rather anxiously for the answer, which soon followed in a patient, uncomplaining tone.

"Not yet, but the old woman down yonder gave me an apple from her stall, so I'm not so very hungry now."

"Poor little chap!" said the second voice, with real sympathy; "times is hard on ye, that's a fact. Try that old fellow on the corner; country, I guess! Mebbe he'll take one."

Acting upon this advice, Number One approached and spoke up hopefully,—

"'Star!' 'Herald!' 'Sun!' Take one, sir?"

"Yes, let's have a 'Herald,'" said the old gentleman, diving into his pocket for change. "What is your name, my boy?"

"Harvey, sir, but the boys and the folks in our alley most generally call me Starvey."

"Starvey! yes, yes," said the old gentleman, with another rapid survey of the rags and bones. "Why doesn't your mother mend your clothes, and how does it happen that you are so thin? Have you been ill?"

"Sick, sir? Oh, no, I rather guess it's because I don't get enough to eat, and mother she's dead!" The last in a hopeless tone, with a brush of his ragged sleeve across the brown eyes. "She died last winter, and there's no one to look after me now. Thanky, sir," as he received the change, which the old gentleman had all this time been holding in his hand.

"Here, don't go!" said the worthy individual, as the bundle of rags turned to leave. "How would you like to go home with me? I live where there is always enough to eat, and you could take care of the horses, and weed, and help round generally. Come, what do you say?"

"Horses!" said the mite, eagerly. "Oh! I loves horses, sir! We used to live in the country when I was a little chap, and father, he owned a horse. I used to ride him, too! Go into the country? Golly! I guess so!"

"Well, well, give your papers to that boy, then; he has sold most of his. That's right! Come along, now; I can't take such a looking object home with me. Why, Maria wouldn't let us in!"

The mite was fitted with a decent suit of clothes, and finally arrived at the place where there was plenty to eat; as happy as a king, and ready to worship the kind old gentleman who had rescued him from his miserable street life.

He was called Harvey, now, and soon ceased to deserve his old appellation. He did willingly whatever was given him to do, but his chief delight was the sleek span of bays, "Kitty" and "Jess," who occupied comfortable quarters in the large barn. He watered, and fed, and groomed them untiringly, and when, sitting beside his master in the new spring wagon, he was allowed to hold the reins, his cup of bliss was full.

But one day trouble appeared in the shape of a rough looking fellow who applied to Mr. Adam for work. It was in the busy season, and he was engaged without much attention to references. For a time all went well, but Mr. Adam soon discovered that his new hand had a trick of beating the horses, kicking the cows, and otherwise maltreating the animals about the place; and, being a humane man, he dismissed him with a lecture upon the wickedness and cruelty of his conduct.

Then the farm-hand became abusive, and swore with many oaths that he would have revenge. Mrs. Adams was alarmed, and begged her husband to have the man arrested, but he only laughed at her fears saying,—

"Oh, such talk never amounts to anything."

One lovely afternoon in autumn, Harvey had a half-holiday, and he wandered along through the woods, drinking in the beauty around him; the gorgeous tints of the trees, the purple and gold of the wood flowers at his feet, and the dreamy blue of the sky that showed in patches overhead.

Suddenly a sound of voices broke the stillness, and Harvey, peering through the bushes, saw the man who had worked for Mr. Adams, and another man, still more rough and evil-looking, lounging upon the ground with their guns beside them. They had built a fire, at which they were cooking some rabbits; and as Harvey looked, a dog bounded through the undergrowth and crouched down beside it.

The men were discussing a plan which made Harvey's heart beat so violently, as he listened, that he shivered with dread lest they should hear it and discover his retreat.

They had decided to burn Mr. Adams' barn, in which was stored all the fruits of his long summer's work, and the ex-farm-hand added a contemptuously,—

"Since he sets such store by his horses and cows, it will be a mercy to send them where they will never be 'abused' any more. There's 'Brindle' and 'Daisy' and 'Rose,' beside the horses, that ought to keep good Mr. Adams' family in roasted meat for some time to come."

The two wretches burst into a loud laugh at this sally, and at the same time the branch upon which Harvey was leaning, broke with a sharp crack. Even then he might have escaped, but the dog sprang up with a low growl, and a moment after the unfortunate lad was held a most unwilling prisoner.

Poor Harvey! as he looked up into the cruel, scowling faces of his captors, he felt that he could hope for very little mercy from men who could deliberately plan to roast alive unoffending, helpless animals. Indeed, the rougher of the two men advised that Harvey should be put out of the way at once.

"He's heard what we've had to say, and he'll blab. 'Dead men,' and young ones, too, 'tell no tales,'" he added, grimly, seeing that his companion hesitated.

"But we might swing for it," objected the farm hand. "See, here, young one, we'll let you go scot free, on one condition. You hold up your hand and swear like I show you, not to breath a word of what you've heard, or by——! you'll not live long enough to say your prayers." He picked up his gun as he spoke, and held the muzzle against Harvey's breast.

Poor Harvey! A sickening feeling of fear and faintness seemed to stifle his breathing, and arrest his very heart beats. The cruel, determined faces of the men, seemed like demons, and he looked around the lonely woods, then at the gun, and then he took the awful oath which the man bade him repeat, that he would not reveal anything they had said.

He was at last allowed to go, and the farm hand called after him,—

"I say, young one, you can tell when the deed is done, and don't you forget it. I want the old man to know who his good luck comes from;" and he added to his companion, "No danger of his giving us away, he's got no more pluck than a chicken, and he's scar't most to death."

When Harvey reached home, supper was laid in the large kitchen. Mollie, the "help" was turning flannel cakes, Mrs. Adam was pouring the tea, and Mr. Adam turned from the sink where he had been washing his hands, and spoke with a genial smile,—

"Well, Harvey, my lad, did you have a good time? Had a nice walk, eh?"

"Yes sir,—no sir,—part of the time." stammered poor Harvey, with such a miserable face that the good farmer started in astonishment, and Mrs. Adams noting his pale face and trembling limbs, exclaimed,— "Bless the boy! he looks fit to drop! What is the matter, child?"

"Nothing," sobbed Harvey, and bursting into tears he rushed away from them all, up to his own little room under the eaves.

Pretty soon Mrs. Adam bustled up with a cup of hot tea and some nicely buttered toast, and when she found that he could not eat, she bathed his aching head, tucked him into bed, and even left a motherly kiss on his cheek.

The kiss made Harvey feel ten times more miserable than before. How kind they were to him! How could he let them be wronged out of so much of their hard-earned property? Then the horses! ah! that was the bitterest of all! "Kitty" and "Jess," whom he had loved and petted, and who also knew him and would whinney with delight whenever he entered the barn. He had taught them to bow their heads when he gave them an apple or anything especially nice, and now he was going to let them suffer a horrible death! Great beads of sweet started on his forehead, and he sprang from his bed intending to rush down stairs and reveal the whole wicked plot, but he stopped before a picture of Christ blessing little children which good Mrs. Adams had hung in his room. The moonlight fell broadly upon it. Had not Mrs. Adams said that God hated liars, and had he not solemnly sworn to keep silence?

Harvey never forgot the terrible hour that followed. He heard the family retire, and waited fearfully for any sound outside. At last he knelt and prayed earnestly that God should show him some way out of his trouble. Then he went to the window and looked out at the great barn.

Suddenly a thought flashed into his mind. he stole softly down stairs, seized the tin horn which Mrs. Adams used to call her husband to dinner, and letting himself out, ran swiftly across the moonlit space between the house and the barn.

He stopped a moment to think, and then climbed up over the mows and hid himself in a nook under the rafters.

One hour passed! two! Harvey's courage seemed to ooze out at his finger tips. If they came they would surely kill him, and then— Ah! what was that? A stealthy tread outside, and the great doors creaked softly as they were shoved apart, then a whisper which seemed to freeze Harvey's blood,—

"Here, pour on plenty of ile, and—"

Toot! toot! toooot!

"It's that devil's brat!" exclaimed one of the men with a furious oath. "Help me to find him quick, or we shall have the neighbors on us."

Toot! toooot! toot! toot! went the old horn. Bow! wow! wow! came from the dog in his kennel, and the chickens on their roosts near by, set up a tremendous cackle.

Toooot! toooot! toot! The two ruffins seeing that their game was up, rushed for the door, but were met by Mr. Adams and a crowd of neighbors, who half-dressed, had rushed out to discover the cause of the commotion.

Well "Kitty" and "Jess" were saved, the men were sent to prison, and to-day Harvey writes his name, Harvey Adams, with a flourish, and calls the farmer and his wife, father and mother. He goes to school, and his teacher assures his proud parents that he is a fine scholar, and will be sure to make his mark one of these days.

CALIFORNIA STAGE DRIVING.

The skill of the drivers in the downward drives is something wonderful. The roads are a continuous succession of the letter S, winding in and about the heads of gulches, in many places the turn being so sharp as to let the horses form the three sides of it. They are also rough and rutty at this season of the year, and at the rapid motion the roughest places must be avoided.

The driver, on his high seat with his six lines and long whip in hand, and one foot on the break, with the other as a brace on the footboard, appears to have as perfect control of the whole turnout, as if it was a puppet. He will throw those six horses from one side of the road to the other to straddle a rut or avoid a stone, as if they were one animal. Sometimes the hub will scrape the bank on the upper side, and the next instant the wheels will be on the very verge of the down side. When approaching a sharp corner, and one's impulse is to slow down, crack will go his whip, and we dash around it like a gust of wind. The reins seem to be nerves or living tissues, conveying the driver's thoughts, and their pulses beat, and their hearts throb in unison.

And accident seldom happens with those drivers, for extreme caution, coupled with absolute control of their team and vehicle, and perfect knowledge of the laws of stage motion, governs all their acts. They are compelled to make rapid progress down hill to compensate for the slower motion up, and they have learned by experience all its safeguards, and practise them. One driver will make this drive of seventy-five miles into the mountains one day, and back the next, every day of his life, until he knows every turn and rut and stone on the entire line, and his sinews are as strong as the lash of his whip.

From the snow and mud of the Upper Sierras, to the flowers of the foothills, and the ripening grain of the valley below, is only a daylight drive, and we rejoice again in the presence of early summer.

EDISON AND THE FOOL EDITOR.

The Vicksburg Herald says: "Edison used to work the other end of a circuit with me, and I knew him when he was in Memphis, thirteen or fourteen years ago. He always looked ratty and never spent his money on clothes, but the reason was he was always tinkering with some new contrivance or other and spent his money in paying for material to work out his inventions. He used to take press in Memphis. He was as fast as they make 'em, and his copy never gave a telegraph editor a bit of trouble. He had a way while waiting for copy of drawing caricatures illustrating the character of the news he was getting, and putting them along in the spaces of the copy he sent in to the press. This made one of the papers up there—I forget which—red-hot, and it opened on him, and had a good deal to do with his being fired by the manager. Edison didn't want the fool editor to print his funny pictures in his telegraphic news. When he went to Boston with his yellow linen breeches on, in the middle of Winter, the manager of the office, finding he was an expert, hired him to keep the repeaters in order. Edison worked at the instruments part of two days, and then was caught by the manager of the office fooling with some new contrivance of his own.

"'Thought I hired you to keep those repeaters in order,' said the manager.

"'You did,' said Edison; 'but I've put a kink or two in them that will make them keep themselves in order."

"From that day his fortune was made."

STILL DIFFERENT.

"I married you," said a romantic young woman turning to her husband who came home drunk, "because you were different from others, but now I find that you are the meanest man I ever saw."

"Thaz all ride," he rejoined, "fur yer ze'm still different, being th' meanest man yer know."—Traveler.

THE FAIRNESS with which the government cases have been conducted by Mr. Moulton in our criminal court, has been the subject of much favorable comment. It has been confined to no party. He should be elected district attorney by a large majority.

DON'T FORGET Councillor Haskell next Tuesday. Let every Republican do his duty and sustain him in his manly course in refusing to be a tool of Governor Butler. There is no man on the county ticket more worthy to be elected than Col. Edward H. Haskell.

WE HOPE no republican will stay away from the polls next Tuesday. And we urge those who can do so, to make an effort to deposit their vote early in the day. Let it be your first duty after the polls are open. You can then consistently ask your neighbor to do likewise. There are always some to be looked after. Let that number be as small as possible. Vote early!

WE CONTINUE every Republican who desires the election of Robinson, of the danger of too much confidence. Our town has been awakened as seldom before. But torches and rallies and brass bands are not votes; and it is the vote that counts. Let every man vote and see that his neighbor votes. Every Butler man will be at the polls; let every Republican be there also.

WE ASK those of our readers who do business in Boston, or who are in the habit of going there daily, to make arrangements to vote before leaving Peabody. The polls open at eight o'clock, and most of you can arrange to wait until the nine o'clock train. Don't leave it until you return in the afternoon. The ballot box is the surest place for your vote. Put it there in the morning!

WE HAVE BEEN desired to give the record of the vote in the House of Representatives on the subject of bi-ennial elections and sessions of the Legislature. The resolve passed the House, March 28th, by a vote of 133 to 64. Representative Clark of this town voted yea, as did Willson of Salem. Gen. Cogswell voted nay, as did Stetson, of Danvers, Parker and Baker of Lynn, and Baker of Beverly.

THERE WILL be no opposition to the name of Oliver Ames for Lieutenant Governor. Some of the delegates at the Convention may have preferred some one else; but the large vote which he obtained decided the question, and all preferences were buried from that hour. The entire republican ticket is worthy the hearty support of the party. It will be given, and among republicans we think there will be less scratching than usual at a State election.

WE HOPE the entire republican vote of Peabody will be cast for Capt. Benj. Pitman, of Marblehead, for Senator from this district. The district is a close one, and he will need every vote. See to it that his name is on your ticket. Don't be deceived. Every Grand Army man, whether voting for Robinson or Butler, should esteem it a pleasure to honor an old comrade, by voting for Pitman. Every laboring man, every greenbacker should vote for Pitman, for he represents more fully their principles, and that equality of the rights of the people which they claim to hold dear. We believe he will poll a large vote in this town. If the rest of the district do as well he will be elected.

THE WOBURN Advertiser, Democratic, gives Butler another thrust. This is what he says: When Gen. B. F. Butler first became Governor of Massachusetts, he announced that he should not again be candidate for that office. This announcement was a great relief to the minds of many good Democrats who had strained their consciences somehow to place him in that position; it was a relief because they thought and hoped that his great ambition was satisfied and that they were relieved of a mighty incubus, but the Governor has again relapsed into his great hankering after the highest positions in the gift of the people. We take him at his word and many more Democrats will do the same.

THE INDICATIONS are that the democrats of Essex County are realizing that the greenbackers obtained the lion's share in the appointment of county officers. The nominees for councillor, county commissioner and sheriff are all understood to belong to the greenback party. Take out Mr. Mahoney who was first nominated by the Republicans, and they have left nothing but the district attorney.

It looks as if there would be considerable scratching on the county ticket, and that the voters will not only scan well the head of the ticket but the entire ticket as well. With the republican ticket there is no dissatisfaction. Every man was nominated by acclamation, and we don't believe one of the nominees is unacceptable to a half dozen voters in the county. We think they will all be elected.

AN ELABORATE charge on the subject of libel has recently been given in the courts of Rhode Island—and its similarity to the instructions given by the judge in the case of Mr. Damon, leads us to a few suggestions as to the responsibility of the press in such cases. The law was plainly stated by the Chief Justice of Rhode Island when he said that the press of the country has a right to criticise the acts of public officers freely, even to the extent of injustice, provided that officer is at fault. No matter how unfair the criticism of his acts, it is not actionable. But when such criticism involves a charge of facts, especially dereliction of duty, which cannot be substantiated, it is actionable. The question naturally arises, who shall decide when a public officer is at fault in his acts. And in such cases we presume the largest liberty would be granted the press. Indeed such has always been the decisions of the courts. But dereliction of duty is a personal matter. That is forbidden ground, unless the statements can be fully proven.

WE HEAR some talk among the Butler men, in reference to the reduction of taxes, and they seem to think that in some way or other they are benefited by the reduction of half a million of dollars in the state tax this year. It was stated in these columns when the rate of taxation in this town was announced, that the difference would hardly be appreciable to the tax payer of this or any other town. Every one knows, or ought to know, that the taxes which are raised are for town purposes; that whether they are high or low depends entirely upon the voters of the town itself—whether they make improvements, such as a new town hall, water works, etc., as has been the case here. The state nor the governor has no control over it.

Then, again, whether the tax for state purposes was reduced or increased to the extent of a million of dollars, it would make no difference to the poll tax. And, in this town, it is safe to say that three-fourths of Butler's supporters pay nothing but a poll tax. What, then, is the use of such a cry about the reduction of taxes? It is merely a subterfuge on the part of the Butler leaders to deceive the people. Whether Butler or Robinson is governor, your taxes will be just what the town decrees.

WE CANNOT understand the confidence with which the democratic leaders assert the re-election of Gov. Butler. We have looked the matter fairly in the face, and there are three indications which will not be denied by any candid man, be he Butler man or otherwise, which certainly must be overcome in order to secure the election of the present governor.

A year ago, the Republicans were apathetic and inharmonious. Despite the attempts at encouragement, there was no enthusiasm—nothing like what has been witnessed here for the past few weeks. This is the same all over the state. The rallies are large and enthusiastic, and money for campaign purposes easily raised. We admit that these things of themselves do not signify votes. But does any man doubt that, here in Peabody, there will be a large number of voters, and Republicans, too, at the polls, who stayed at home last year? We are told that in other places the excitement is much more than in Peabody. There is, therefore, no doubt that more Republicans will vote this year for Robinson than cast their ballots last year for Bishop.

Again, many men who voted for Butler last year will vote for Robinson this. This is true in Peabody. We all of us know such. They can be placed and can be counted. It is but natural to suppose that if this is the case here, it is also the case elsewhere. And we have reason to believe that outside of Essex County the change will be more marked and decisive.

There are in addition to these changes, many democrats who will not vote for him. Some of them did not last year, but the number has been largely re-inforced. Butler may call them "copperheads," or rejoice that the democratic party is rid of them, but he cannot so easily read them out of a party of which they have been members for a long number of years. These men understand what his re-election means. They say little. They don't talk much against him. But quietly they intend to vote against him.

All this Butler must overcome to win. In his favor are the accessions of new voters, and it is his only reliance, so far as we can see. There is no change, of any account, from Bishop last year to Butler this. Let us, therefore, be encouraged at the outlook. In the hands of the Republicans of the State is the issue. Let every man do his duty next Tuesday, and vote.

ALL THAT the most ardent Republican can ask of the friends of Butler is that they will endeavor to ascertain for themselves the truth or falsity of the reckless statements made by him from night to night. It is said that two gentlemen, one a supporter of Butler, the other not, after reading His Excellency's statement of the cost of the Danvers Asylum, went to the State House, with the agreement between them that if the Governor was right both were to support him; if wrong, both would vote for Robinson. It is needless to say that they were shown the books by the State Auditor, covering every item of expense at that Institution. Further, they were told they could see the vouchers for every item, if they cared to look into it to that extent. There could be no difference of opinion on this expense. Figures do not lie, and Governor Butler lost one vote.

It is this spirit that we would commend to our voters. Gen. Butler tells his audiences to believe no one but himself; that the papers and the Republican speakers all lie about him. We ask no one to believe anything that is said in the campaign without verifying it. In most cases it can be done. Butler has said there are but two lines of steamships coming in to Boston harbor, with which our people have anything to do. The Republican press has denied it. It can be ascertained by anyone seeking the truth, which is right. Will Butler's friends do it? He has stated that our taxes are higher than in England; that the Church tax there is included; that after we have paid the government tax, we have local taxes to meet, which is different from what it is in England. All three of these statements have been denied by the press. Which is right? Will Butler's friends ascertain for themselves?

It is hardly possible to follow all the errors made by Butler on the stump. They are of small consequence in themselves, but when we consider that his opponent make no such blunders, that every time he has contradicted Butler he has been in the right, which of these men is the better fitted to serve the State? When we say Butler has been wrong, we do not say it because we are Republicans, but because the truth or falsity of the matters can be verified by any one, and is a matter of record.

We suspect Butler is aware that his followers will not attempt any such verification. We can see no other reason why he should continue the repetition of untruths. If Mr. Robinson had been guilty of such misrepresentations, what a howl would have gone up! All we ask is fair play, gentlemen. Don't believe a thing simply because Gov. Butler says so, or because our candidate says so. Ascertain for yourself. Follow this advice and we have no doubt of the result.

Our readers will observe the new advertisement of J. E. Hodgkins, No. 22 Market St, Lynn. Mr. Hodgkins has been in the boot and shoe business in that city for over twenty years, and by fair dealing, reliable goods and low prices, has built up a trade worthy the admiration of all honest men. We commend what he has to say to the attention of our readers. The Lynn horse cars pass his door.

Elsewhere in our paper this week the well-known clothing house of J. B. BARNABY & Co., of Boston, offer our readers free tickets to either the American or Foreign Exhibitions now open in their city. The well-known reputation of this house, for low prices and square dealing, is proverbial.

ADVICE TO BOYS.—You are learning a trade. That is a good thing to have. It is better than gold. Brings always a premium. The trade must be perfect—no silver plated affair. When you go to learn a trade, do so with a determination to win. Make up your mind what you will be, and be it. Determine in your own mind to be a good workman. Have pluck and patience. Look out for the interests of your employer—thus you will learn to look out for your own. Do not wait to be told everything. Remember. Act as though you wished to learn. If you have an errand to do, start off like a boy with some life. Look about you. See how the best workman in the shop does, and copy after him. Learn to do well. Whatever is worth doing at all, is worth doing well. Never slight your work. Every job you do is a sign. If you have done one in ten minutes, see if you cannot do the next in nine.

Too many boys spoil a life-time by not having patience. They work at a trade until they see about one-half of its mysteries, and then strike for higher wages. Act as if your interest and the interest of your employer were the same. Good mechanics are the props of society. They are those who stuck to their trades until they learned them. People always speak well of a boy who minds his own business—who is willing to work, and who seems disposed to be somebody in time. Learn the whole of your trade.—M. M. Ponaroy.

The moral power of the press was well illustrated in this village last Sunday morning. In this wise: Mr. Mark Allen, our esteemed fellow-craftsman and journalistic coadjutor, was on his way to Horton's for a Sunday paper. At a certain point on the route—somewhere on Main street we believe—he was commanded by a policeman to progress hitherward with all possible despatch and aid him in arresting a very ugly drunken man whom he could not handle alone. The fellow was strong, gritty, and drunk, and refused peremptorily to go along to the lockup. Mr. Allen forthwith crossed over, with due deference to the majesty of the law, to aid the officer. On inquiry the intoxicated individual was informed that the just-arrived posse comitatus was the editor of the Woburn Advertiser. "Hold your horses, gentlemen, hold right on where you are—you say he is an editor, eh?" He received an affirmative reply. "Then I cave," and without the least resistance or trouble to the officer he proceeded to jail, and seemed to feel relieved when securely locked inside of it. So much for the power of the press.—Woburn Journal.

A man at Long Branch recently entered a restaurant and said:

"Have you any clam chowder?"

"We have," replied the waiter.

"Bring me a plate."

A plateful was placed before him, and he set to work with great gusto. After he had taken about a dozen spoonfuls, he drew a pair of opera-glasses from his pocket and looked intently at the chowder for some time.

Then he jumped up in the air and shouted: "Eureka!"

"What's that?" asked the proprietor.

"I've got it!" yelled the diner.

"Got what?" asked the restaurateur.

"A clam!"

"Great Scott!" yelled the proprietor, "he's got the clam!"

And before the diner could say a word, the proprietor picked the clam up in a pair of gold pincers and bore it triumphantly to the kitchen and threw it back into a huge boiler of chowder, and said:

"Who dealt the chowder to that dark haired man over there?"

"I did," said the assistant cook.

"Then you are discharged for dealing out the clam that we use for flavoring purposes."—Puck.

Why so much ado about nothing? Nearly all those high toned moralists, who talk of the depravity of tanning human skins at Tewksbury, had their own hides tannned, by the old folks, when they were naughty youngsters.

A compo in a printing office, not many miles from here, recently "set up" promiscuously, births, marriages and deaths under the heading "Chaff and Clippings." 'Twas chaff and clipping for him when the editor caught on to his "funny business."

Candle-light is generally considered to enchance the beauty of one's face and complexion, and we are told that it will be the fashion this winter to use wax candles at parties instead of gas. Young ladies who have more freckles than they know what to do with will read this with gratification.

Slander is a two edged sword, whose thrust cannot be parried. It not only injures the person whom it strikes, but often rebounds and severely wounds the one who wields it. There is no greater enemy to the social life of a community than the slanderer. Well may we exclaim against him in the words of Shakespeare:—

"Oh! Heaven,
put in every honest hand a whip
To lash the rascal naked through the world."

The curious discovery is made that the returns of the election in Boston for governor last year, as printed in the Manual, contain an error of a thousand votes. The official return was 17, 105 for Mr. Bishop. It is printed in the manual 16,105. The error is carried through the county and state vote.

The total should be,—

For Butler 133,946
For Bishop 120,997

In Boston General Butler had 13,270 plurality, not 14,270, as has been printed many times. It is one thousand less to gain to overcome the Butler majority,—or what is the same thiug, it adds a thousand to the majority under which he is to be swamped.—Boston Advertiser.

Brother Hobbs of the Woburn Journal, does not take kindly to independent journalism. We think he is about right. A paper to have any influence, should have a mind of its own, and not be afraid to speak it.—Peabody Press.

We don't see how the Press, if it really believes its own utterance, can agree with the Journal. What is "independence" if it is not found in a paper which has "a mind of its own and not afraid to speak it?"—Waltham Record.

It is singular that the "independents" are the only journalistic thinkers there are in the land. The party editors, who constitute the great bulk of the craft, are to be commiserated on their weak-mindedness and subjection to partisan leaders. The inside of the matter is, the "independents" are "independent" for the sole purpose of making their feed. It is purely a question of bread-and-butter with them. —Woburn Journal.

We have no difficulty in agreeing with the Journal. The "independent" journals, in distinction from the party journals, which is the way the term is constantly used, so far as we know them, are not the papers which "have a mind of their own."

The Valley Visitor says: "Mayor Breen of Lawrence, who presided at the Salem democratic county convention this week, did himself much credit by the easy and pleasant way in which he kept an earnest and excited meeting in good humor. Quiet and happy himself he made everybody feel his influence."—This comes the nearest to a joke of anything we have heard during the campaign.

We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of J. H. Pray, Sons & Co., the well-known carpet dealers of Boston. This firm is one of the oldest in that city, doing a large wholesale as well as retail business, and control a number of special patterns which can not be obtained elsewhere. They are a reliable house to deal with, as is well known by all their customers.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The Essex Unitarian Conference met Thursday at the Unitarian Church in Lynn, at half past ten. After the transaction of business, the Rev. F. Frothingham of Milton delivered a discourse upon the topic "What is Religion?" He named the various manifestations of it in the world, such as ritual, doctrine, a divine law, an experience, a feeling, and good conduct. These he would combine into religion in its entirety—a divine contact of God and man, spirit with spirit, issuing out into complete conformity of the human life with the divine. At the close of the sermon, a letter was read from R. S. Rantoul, Esq., of Salem, declining further services as President, and new officers were reported and elected, with N. A. Horton, of Salem, as President; Rev. S. B. Stewart, of Lynn, as Vice President; Rev. George H. Hosmer, of Salem, as Secretary. At half past two an essay was read by Rev. W. H. Lyon, on Congregational Worship. A discussion followed by Messrs. Stewart, Israel, McDaniel, Parton, Frothingham, Wilson, and the essayist.

"Our Boy" soliloquizes thus: Did you ever think that when we get to heaven—if we do get there—most professional gentlemen will be thrown out of employment? The doctor will have nothing to do, because everybody will be well; the lawyer will take his sign down and seek some other employment, because there will be no quarrels and litigation, and the minister can't preach his old sermon any more, because the people will be too good to listen to them. The printer will be there reaping his reward for the abuse he received here below. Big head.

An autumn concert was given by the Sabbath School of the Universalist Church last Sabbath evening, which was very successfully carried out. The church was crowded and was handsomely decorated with ferns, grasses and flowers. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Sprague, delivered an address, and there were recitations by different members of the school, appropriate to the subject of the concert, including the members of Mrs. Sprague's class, Miss Ada Hill and others. The music wes also interesting, and the whole concert was calculated to increase the interest already manifest in this school.

Last Monday evening the regular meeting of the Murray Club was held, the subject being "An Evening with Trollope." A biographical sketch of the author was given followed by selections from a number of his works, which were given by different members of the club. The selections were from "Macdermots of Bally Cloran," "Dr. Barchester Towers," "Brown, Jones and Robinson," and "Can you Forgive Her?" Various selections of music were interspersed during the evening.

There is no branch of sanitary science which needs study and practice more than that of the ventilation of dwelling houses. Many of the ills to which we are subject are owing to the bad air in our houses, and it is a fact that more attention is paid to the proper ventilation of barns and stables than to human habitations. If we had more pure air in our houses we should have much less use for physicians.

The rally of the Republican members of the Essex Club, last Wednesday evening, despite the inclement weather, was a success. The battalion turned out 108 torches, and town hall was filled. Stirring speeches were made by Hon. Frank D. Allen, E. W. Burdette and Dr. Loring. Samuel W. King presided.

Mrs. Stephen Peabody, wife of the well known pump manufacturer, on Central street, died suddenly last Sunday morning, although she had been suffering from asthma and dropsy combined for a time. She was a kind neighbor and faithful wife and mother. She leaves a husband and one daughter.

We understand that Mr. Robert Buxton is contemplating a trip to New Hampshire, and it is hinted that it will be a bridal trip.

The Republicans of this town and the Republican members of the Essex Club have reason to congratulate themselves on the vigorous impulse which was given the campaign last Friday evening. Never before for years has there been seen anything like it, and old and young turned out and bore a torch in testimony of where they stood on the present political issue. Fully three thousand people were on the street to witness the demonstration. The Robinson battalion, under the command of Major E. W. Abbott, paraded the streets and an elegant Robinson and Ames flag was thrown across the street at the Essex Club Block amid a grand patriotic display. After the flag raising the crowd proceeded to the town hall and listened to speeches by O. W. H. Upham, N. A. Horton and F. L. Greenhalge. On the same evening the Democratic members of the Club held a parade and a Butler flag was thrown across the street from the other corner of the building. They also had a fine show of fireworks and there was lots of enthusiasm. Everything was orderly and both flag raisings were a success.

Union Post 50 G. A. R., of this town, under command of Wm. H. Hildreth, left their hall at 6.30 last evening, taking the cars of the Lynn & Boston road for Chelsea, to attend a grand camp fire, held by Winthrop Post 35 of Chelsea. The Post turned out 50 men. They arrived in Chelsea at about 8.30 P. M. and fell into line, marched to the hall, amid a perfect blaze of fireworks, where the usual exercises, consisting of music, speeches, etc., were gone through with, winding up with the usual pipes and tobacco. The boys arrived home at 2.30 this morning, well pleased with the best camp fire that the Peabody Post ever attended. Music was furnished for the parade by the Chelsea Band and a drum corps. Seven Posts took part in the entertainment. The committee of reception were Chas. A. Campbell, Geo. H. Buck, Henry T. Holmes, Eben Hutchinson, Col. Porter, James P. Wade, Geo. T. Roberts and Theodore Pinkham.

The Republicans will have a grand torchlight parade Friday evening, in which the old Garfield Guards will participate, under the command of Major E. W. Abbott. All republicans are invited to turn out and join in making it a grand success. The Flambeau Guards of Newburyport will also be present and the Salem Brass Band will furnish the music. The route of the procession will be as follows: They will form at the depot, where the Newburyport battalion will be received, march up Lowell to Endicott, Central, Tremont, Wallis, Elm, Central, Main to Salem line; countermarch through Main, Holten, Aborn, Washington to pumping station; countermarch, Washington, Main, Central, Stevens to Town Hall, where a collation will be furnished.

Mr. L. R. Power has sold his shoe store at the corner of Main and Caller street, to Mr. L. Buck, of Somerville, Mass., a gentleman who has had a life long experience in this business. He will retain the services of Mr. J. T. Bartlett, who has been the successful manager of the store for Mr. Power. The new proprietor will re-stock the store with a better grade of goods.

George Dutton, the candidate for lieutenant governor on the greenback ticket, and who speaks Saturday night in Town Hall, was once a teacher in our public schools. He taught in the old No. 2 district, now the Center School, succeeding C. J. Gleason. This was about 1856. He is now a physician and professor of anatomy, located in Boston, at No. 459 Tremont street.

The Republicans have arranged for a grand rally the night before the battle, to be addressed by Senator Geo. G. Crocker, Col. E. W. Hinks, and Hon. Geo. D. Robinson, candidate for Governor. The latter will arrive shortly after eight o'clock and deliver an address of half an hour, and immediately leave for Beverly.

The Democrats held a caucus at town hall last evening at which Thos. Carroll acted as chairman and Thos. H. McGrath as secretary. A. F. Clark was nominated by acclamation on motion of Frank Winchester. A rallying committee of fifty was appointed. Words of encouragement were spoken by Thos. Carroll, Thos. McGrath and John Linehan.

Mr. Kiley, a resident of Shillaber street, dropped dead at his residence, last night, of heart disease.

A tramp printer, giving his name as Cole, dropped into our sanctum on last Monday morning. Traces of a pint bottle were plainly visible in the region of his neck and his breath told of frequent potions and our pocket contained just as many nickles as before he smiled upon us.

Yesterday morning a bill poster was distributing "Liverpool's Medical Adviser" on the square, and there was a great rush for them by the crowd who were in the vicinity. It contained pictures of nude people and most of them that got one, thought it was Butler's nasty picture book.

Last Monday forenoon while moving it about in his team to make room for other things, a Lynn express man dropped a box containing a lot of window glass, in front of John Pickering's store. It was found on examination that most of it had been shivered in atoms.

Mr. Howard Bott of this town, clerk in the well known dry goods establishment of Almy, Bigelow & Webber, was united in marriage last Thursday evening to Miss Mary Etta, daughter of Albert Carlton. The newly married pair left for a short bridal trip, and have our congratulations.

This year has been one of plenty. The grass crop was good, the potato grand, and the fruit fair. In a time of such wonderful plenty, it seems ungrateful to complain; but then, what is poor human nature to do when there are so many worms in the chestnuts?

The following is the roll of honor of the lower classes of the Wallis School: Class 5, Eliza Osborne, Carrie Wilson; class 6, Theodore Graves; class 7, Ella Berry, Helen Bushby, Flora Lynch, Alice Sawyer, Annie Stevens, Willie Knowlton, Willie Shea, James Sheehan.

If the Lynn horse railroad company would consult the interest of its patrons, they would either remove conductor Churchill or transfer him to some more appropriate work in the stable. His assumption of authority is only exceeded by his impudence and ignorance.

The head of the family now wakes up, smells the cool morning air, and then goes so sound asleep that his wife exhausts her liveliest efforts in waking him, and finally in despair gets up and makes the fire herself, while the old hypocrite in bed smiles internally.

The following is the roll of honor of the first two classes of the Wallis School for this month: First class, Sadie Peirce, Mabel Rowell, Nellie Warner, Arthur Foote, Frank Palfray. Second class, Lillie Bailey, Caddie Dalton, Fred Bushby, George Rowell.

Several of the members of the Republican batallion were injured more or less by being struck with the ball from the Roman candles, but not seriously. Among them were W. C. Merrill, G. Fred Osgood, H. W. Thomas and Herbert Foan.

A rally is announced to take place at town hall this evening, under the auspices of the workingmen in the interest of Butler and labor reform. Remarks are expected by Gustavus A. Rahn of Iowa, E. H. Lomansey and A. A. Carlton.

It is desired that the Republican voters who go to Boston on that day should vote before they go. The polls open at 8 o'clock, and teams will be provided to take such voters to Salem so they can catch the 8.32 train from that city.

There will be an anti-fusion Greenback rally at town hall next Saturday evening, to be addressed by Geo. Dutton, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and Dr. T. A. Bland of Washington, D. C.

WHY THE DOCTOR WAS DISGUSTED, AND WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN DONE WITHOUT HIM.

"Well, wife," said Dr. E.—, as he entered his house, which was situated in a cosy village in central New York, "I have got back from a long and dreary ride away down among the mountains, and all to no purpose whatever. The messenger said the man wouldn't live till morning, when the fact is he had only an ordinary attack of colic. If the simpletons had only had sense enough to put a BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER on his stomach he would have been all right in an hour or two. But some folks are slow to learn, added the old physician, swallowing the cup of steaming tea which his wife had just poured for him.

Doctor E— was right, yet people do learn, even though slowly. The rapid increasing use of Benson's plaster proves this beyond question, and the good doctors are certain to be saved much of their needless toil. In all diseases, capable of being affected by a plaster Benson's acts efficiently and at once. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the centre. Price 25 cents. LOVE'S MELODRAMA.

Act one, they meet as in a pleasing dream,
Act two, he'll treat to soda and ice cream,
Act three, his cash alas! is nearly played;
Act four, his girl grows cold, sedate and staid;
Act five, just as his love is ripe and mellow,
His girl is sporting with another fellow.

WHERE TO SEE THE GREAT TROTTERS OF NEW YORK.—No two men in America have had more experience with fine trotting stock, and none are better judges than Calvin M. Priest, of the New York Club Stables, 28th street near Fifth avenue, and Dan Mace, of the Excelsior Stables, West 29th street, New York, the champion double-team driver of the United States. Both of these gentlemen say, that for painful ailments in horses, such as cuts, bruises, swellings, lameness and stiffness, St. Jacobs Oil is superior to anything they have ever used or heard of. This is also the opinion of Prof. David Robarge, the celebrated horseshoer of the metropolis, and thousands of stock-owners throughout the country. As a pain cure for man and beast St. Jacobs Oil has no equal. Mr. Priest recites the case of a valuable trotter so stiff with rheumatism that he could not move an inch, By one thorough application of St. Jacobs Oil at night, the animal was completely cured, and was fit for the race-track, next day.

The light that lies in woman's eyes, so radiant with splendor, to lightning turns and like it burns the moment you offend her.

Now is the time to treat Catarrh of long standing. Ely's Cream Balm reaches obstinate cases, where other remedies fail. In it lies the relief you seek. Price 50 cents. Apply into nostrils with the finger.

A gentleman from Orwell, Pa., called my attention to Ely's Cream Balm as a remedy for Catarrh, Hay Fever, &c. He was so earnest in asserting it to be a positive cure (himself having been cured by it) that I purchased a stock. The Balm has already effected cures. P. F. Hyatt, M. D., Bordentown, N. J.

I have been a severe sufferer from Catarrh for 15 years, with distressing pain over my eyes, gradually the disease worked down upon my lungs. About a year and a half ago I began using Ely's Cream Balm, with most gratifying results and am to-day apparently cured. Z. C. Warren, Rutland, Vt.

Teach, oh! teach the little children:
They are yours to mold at will.
In the children lies the future,
All the future, good or ill.
Teach them, train them into beauty,
Love of God and human duty.

BEATEN BY WIND AND RAIN.

SAILORS ON THE SEA AND LABORERS ON THE LAND—HELP FOR THE LARBOARD WATCH.

"There is no telling the force of the wind; and the height and rush of the sea was simply appalling. When Cornish, the boatswain, and myself came down from aloft, after furling the main-royal, we were wet through and half dead from the hard toil and the exposure."

So said the mate of the "Grosvenor," when relating the incidents of an Atlantic cyclone, after nearly all the crew had mutinied and left the ship in boats to escape punishment.

Mechanics who labor upon lofty buildings; carpenters, masons, painters and bricklayers, may be called a kind of shore sailors, and that their numbers are not more largely decimated by accident and disease is a marvel. Mr. Jabez Rogers, tuck pointer, house painter, etc., of No. 608 Madison street, Chicago, over a pipe and autumn fire, said to your correspondent:

"No, I am only a young man yet—thirty-five, that's all; but the kind of work I do tells on a fellow's looks and constitution. Last Spring I was about run down with overwork and exposure. I had to give up doing any work myself, and just made out to oversee my men in a sort of half-and-half way. I thought I was played out for good and all. I was racked with a cough, stupified with a cold, and torn and disabled with Rheumatism. Do? I took PARKER'S GINGER TONIC and it cured me. Those three words tell the story—it cured me."

To all persons subject to risk from exposure, PARKER'S GINGER TONIC will commend itself. It purifies the Blood, incites the torpid Liver to healthy activity, and opens the pores of the skin. This is the season of outdoor perils to health. Keep the Tonic near you. Prices 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Hiscox & Co., Chemists, New York.

MRS. C. W. CHAMBERLIN,

STATE AND ARK ST., SPRINGFIELD, MASS —HER GOOD, KIND WORDS WILL DO MUCH FOR THE AFFLICTED.

Mrs. Chamberlin is the wife of C. W. Chamberlin, an employe in the United States Armory at Springfield, Mass. She says: "Every Spring I have been, for some time past, more or less troubled with nervous debility and weakness. Some years I've been completely run down. My physician has recommended various strengthening and blood medicines, but I never received any permanent benefit until I tried Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. It was recommended to me by Mrs. Newcombe, on State St. I think it a wonderful medicine to give one strength and enliven a person. I have recommended it to family after family among my acquaintances in Springfield, Mass, and FAVORITE REMEDY has done a great deal of good wherever it has been placed. I have a sister, Mrs. Harmon, 29 Tremont St., Lowell, Mass., who was troubled with nervous weakness and loss of strength and appetite, but by using Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY her health was completely restored. I consider it an excellent medicine. Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is used extensively among the Armory men here."

NO, SIR!"

A Scotch minister once said no woman could bear pain as well as man. That is not so. The fact is generally the other way. Mrs. Edward Meyers of Roudout, N. Y., submitted to the operation of the removal of her hand by amputation, without taking ether, or moving a muscle or uttering a groan. Dr. Kennedy, also of Roudout, N. Y., who performed the operation, said he never saw such heroism. The lady's disease was erysipelas, and afterwards the Doctor gave his FAVORITE to cleanse the blood. Mrs. Meyers is now well and strong.

Book Notices.

Something new in a monthly magazine is found in the November MANHATTAN, which has an article on "Wordsworth and the Modern Age," illustrated by seven ideal scenes, drawn and engraved with an elaborateness which has hitherto been seen in holiday editions of poets only. Another very handsomely illustrated paper is on the famous actor, "Henry Irving and his Work." The frontispiece, depicting Miss Ellen Terry and Mrs. Sterling in "Romeo and Juliet," is one of the masterpieces of G. Kruell, and he considers it his finest work. A paper on "The Cradle of Liberty"—Faneuil Hall, has cuts which are reproductions of old engravings and drawings. Valuable is a paper by Dr. McCosh, ex-President of Princeton, on "Thomas Carlyle and His Influence on the English Language." The fiction is a tantalizing installment of Julian Hawthorne's "Beatrix Randolph," now approaching a conclusion; the first part of a new serial "Tinkling Cymbals," by Edgar Fawcett, whose story now running through the New York Tribune, has been a phenomenal success; and an amusing short story, "John Emerson Gaines' Love Affairs." "Town Talk" and "Salmagundi" are amusing. In the latter appear some "Whittlings" by Zeke Fairchild, who must be at least first cousin to Josh Billings, whose wit and wisdom Zeke fairly rivals.

The NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW for November, satisfies the requirements of the most exacting reader. Senator H. B. Anthony writes of "Limited Suffrage in Rhode Island." Dr. Norvin Green, President of the Western Union Company, in an article entitled "The Government and the Telegraph," presents statistics designed to prove that the service in this country is both cheaper and more efficient than in any of the countries of Europe where the governments own the lines. The Rev. David N. Utter brings out from oblivion the record of certain alleged atrocious crimes of "John Brown of Osawatomie." There are two scientific articles, namely, "Solar Physics," by Professor Balfour Stewart, and "Modern Explosives," by Gen. John Newton. In "Suggestions in regard to the Public Service," Green B. Raum offers certain facts going to prove that the clerks and other employes of the government departments at Washington, even before the passage of the Civil Service act, were in the main both faithful and efficient. Finally, "Dr. Hammond's Estimate of Woman," is reviewed by Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake, Miss Nina Morais, Mrs. Sara A. Underwood and Dr. Clemence S. Lozier. Fifty cents a copy; $5 a year. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, and sold by newsdealers generally.

THE ART AMATEUR for November gives a series of six admirable drawings by Walter Crane of the superb frieze, illustrating Longfellow's "Skeleton in Armor," recently painted by Mr. Crane for the Newport residence of Miss Catherine Wolfe. A biographical notice of this popular artist is accompanied by a portrait drawn by him from his reflection in a mirror, and by a spirited drawing of his picture of "The Angel of Love Averting the Hand of Fate." The designs for wood carving, china painting, embroidery and sketching on linen are numerous and excellent. Dramatic and operatic feuilletons form new and interesting features; the Munich, Louisville and Cincinnati exhibitions are noticed, and Montezuma's "Note Book" is as full as ever of readable paragraphs. Price, 35 cents; per year, $4. Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, N. Y.

THE WHEELMAN.—To the lovers of the bicycle, "The Wheelman" cannot fail to be a perpetual source of enjoyment. It is one of the best magazines of the day, full of choice reading, the poems being especially fine, and the illustrations contributing largely to its charms. It contains many stories of the most interesting and exciting adventures on the wheel, as well as the latest news from many bicycle clubs in the United States and other countries. The November number contains together with much other interesting matter, a full account of the Springfield meeting and of several other bicycle tournaments. Price $2.00 per year. The Wheelman Company, 608 Washington St., Boston.

THE COTTAGE HEARTH for November has the following table of contents; Frontisbiece; The Sisters of Bon Secours; Israel; Romance and Cranberries; Burying the Boulder; A Green Spot in London; My Cross; Domine quo Vadis; Bessie, my Boy; An Autumn Memory; Music—Falling Leaves, On the Water, Sea Bogin; Household Hints; Approved Receipts; Ladies' Fancy Work; The Fashions; Weighed and Wanting; Editor's Basket. Several of the articles are finely illustrated. This favorite monthly magazine is published at 11 Bromfield street, Boston, at $1.50 a year, or 15 cents a number.

THE CONTINENTAL MAGAZINE for November has the following contents: North Mountain; Perils of the West, with 3 illustrations; A Bitter Requital; A Prayer for Faith; Indian Summer; Shadows in Outline; Money and its Origin; Saved: The Story of a Ross; Miscellaneous, Editorirl, Editorial, Farm and Fireside, Popular Science, Correspondence, Editor's Record, etc. This monthly is published by A. C, Meyer & Co., Baltimore, Md., at 50 cents a year.

The single story "Saved" in this number is worth a year's subscription to the magazine.

For Young Ladies Only.

Notwithstanding the fact that young men are being continually lectured they are not the only cause of all earthly misery. To be sure they sometimes give the moral peace of the family a regular cholera morbus twist, but the young ladies very often give the moral peace a shaking up. Parents are, to a certain extent, as much to blame for this state of affairs, as are their children. They do not teach them, especially the girls, to cultivate a spirit of self-reliance and independence. They don't teach them what it means to be thrown on their own resources, and what it is to earn an honest living. If there is anything in this world that is to be pitied, it is a houseplant of a woman. She is of no earthly good. Her listless, affected airs make her anything but ornamental, and beyond that she is of no earthly good. She might be taught to play a golden harp in the sweet future, but never having cultivated her talents in any direction here, it is questionable about there being a place for her in the angelic choir. Too great a number of our young women are brought up to believe that they are to be taken care of all their lives. Not three in eight of the young women in this country are taught to make a good wholesome batch of bread, to keep the house tidy, they leave that to "Bridget;" to cut, fit and make a dress, but nearly all of them can sing a little, play the piano a little, and those who can't paint pictures can their cheeks, so this includes painting. But the happiest moments of their lives are when they are eating sweet meats purchased with some foolish young man's money. Too many aspire to nothing greater than spending money and looking sweet. The latter part of their ambition requires hours of patient study and a free use of paint and powder to accomplish, and then many fail, but don't know it There may be some gratification in this that some young man is getting terribly fooled!

There are, however, hundreds of sensible young women in the country. Women who have common sense mothers, mothers who know and appreciate the duties of woman. Who teach their daughters self-reliance and independence, thus giving to them that which is far more valuable than gold, and putting them in positious to meet any emergency. We know not what the morrow may have in store. Riches and all wordly possessions may vanish, but with true independence to fall back on the young woman is fully prepared to meet it and not drift to the bad or give up, discouraged. Young woman, you who have never thought of these things, remember that the true man more highly values the friendship of a woman of self-reliance and independence, than the butterfly of fashion. The neat, tidy, refined and intelligent woman draws the prize every time. To be self-reliant and posted on things of benefit to you through life, does not cut off, but adds to passing pleasures. Think of these points and look about you for the evidence. Gentlemen are not expected to read this, it's for ladies only.

A stranger who had made a purchase of a second-hand dealer on Chatham street grew confidential, and said he would like some advice.

"Vhel, go aheadt."

"If you were in my place and wanted to go into business here, would you lend your money and live on the interest, or would you go into the second-hand clothing business?"

"My frendt," replied the other, with a very serious look on his face, "let me tell you shust like a fadder. Doan' go into the second-hand beesness yourself, but lend me your money and become a silent partner."

"Are the profits large?"

"Large? How much you tinks I made on dot west I sold you for $2? I make shust twelve shillings."

"Not by a blamed sight, for I have not paid for it and won't take it," exclaimed the stranger, as he dropped the bundle and walked out. "Vhel, vhel," sighed Moses, as he looked after him, "efery time I tell der truth I lose money, und efery time I tell a lie I lose a customer. How can an honest man make a living in New York?"—Wall Street News.

A Willimantic factory girl wrote her name and address, and her desire to be married, in a nice little note which she placed in the band of the hat she had just finished. Her father bought the hat. On his way home that evening he paused at a house they were plastering and obtained a slender and supple lath.

"You have driven horses a great deal, haven't you, George dear?" said a girly voice from the depths of a $350 sealskin sacque last night. "Oh, yes," replied George, chirping to his trotter. "I flatter myself that I can handle a horse about as well as the next one. Do you think you could drive with one hand without any danger of the horse running away?" came softly through the night air. An hour later we noticed George driving with one hand, and it looked very dangerous, but not that the horse would run away; oh, no, indeed; the "danger" was of different kind.

We don't say that all the bargains in the city are to be found at our establishment or that no one understands how to run a great retail store except ourselves.

But we do say that our assortments are so complete that there is scarcely anything you can ask for that we have not got on hand; that our prices are low because our

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

At the Boston Theatre "Jalma" enters upon the seventh week of its phenomenally successful career. Fully 120,000 persons have witnessed this magnificent spectacle, and the demand for seats is as brisk as it has been heretofore, ensuring another week of crowded houses. The Saturday matinees afford opportunities for the little folks to see the glittering splendors of this work, and the audiences on these occasions are a delightful sight for all who like to watch children enjoying themselves.

At the Globe Theatre Mr. Stetson's Fifth Avenue company has been playing "Pique" the past week to audiences which, large at first, have increased nightly, until late comers have found it scarcely possible to obtain seats at curtain-rise. The play is admirably performed. Miss Jewett's impersonation of Mabel Renfrew has gained greatly in dramatic force since her first performance, while it has lost nothing in delicacy of treatment, and is still instinct with the sympathetic qualities with which she endowed it at the onset. Mr. Kelcey's Capt. Standish is manly and sincere. Mr. Varrey gives the finest possible performance of the stern but tender hearted father. Miss Annie Russell's Mary Standish is the most charming and lovable of characterizations. The comedians have toned down their work, and their scenes are highly relished by the audiences, who applaud them nightly.

Mr. Booth's season at the Globe Theatre, will be opened on Monday, Nov. 5, and the performances will be as follows: First week—Monday and Tuesday, "Richelieu;" Wednesday, "Macbeth;" Thursday and Friday "King Lear;" Saturday matinee, "Richelieu." Second week — Monday, "Othello;" Tuesday, "Iago;" Wednesday and Thursday, "Fool's Revenge;" Friday, "Merchant of Venice," "Katherine and Petruchio;" Saturday matinee, "Iago."

"The Madison Square Theatre in Boston is almost a certainty," said Manager Daniel Frohman. "Only a few arrangements need to be made. How long it will take to settle them is uncertain. A new house under our management here would not in the least interfere with contracts made at the Park; for we have a large number of excellent plays that at present cannot be produced, but would, I feel sure, be successful if brought out with a Madison Square cast. Boston has always been very generous in its appreciation of Madison Square productions; and personally, it would be a pleasure to see a the atre established here under Madison Square management."

At the Bijou Theatre, Chas. Wyndham's Company are having a prosperous engagement, and perform for the first time in Boston, "The Great Divorce Case," which had a remarkable run at the Criterion in London. Mr. George H. Tyler, who resumes the general management of the Bijou Theatre tomorrow (succeeding Mr. E. H. Hastings, elected to the presidency of the Bijou Theatre Company), was in New York last week concluding a number of engagements for the cosey little house.

At the Park Theatre, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence play this week only in a new play entitled "Facts; or His Little Hatchet." It is understood that these well known favorites have a play which is equal to any thing they have appeared in—and that is saying a great deal. Lawrence Barrett will shortly appear. Miss Georgia Cayvan will create the title role in Belasco's comedy drama, "May Blossom," which will be produced under the management of Messrs. Charles and Gustave Frohman.

Read the Lynn Item One Cent.

Nobody's Claim, a drama which has had crowded houses in Boston the past week, will be presented in Mechanic Hall, Salem, to-morrow (Thursday) evening. Seats are now on sale at Geo. F. Ropes' drug store.

SPARKS.

A canvass of the firemen in the Peabody department shows about an even thing between Robinson and Butler. In the brick house the canvass shows Robinson 31, Butler 25, and Almy 1.

The engineers have been trying the hydrants the past week.

We have received a copy of the Troy Press, containing an account of the trial of a new Button steam fire engine in that city, which we will give below. The steamer made steam in a little over four minutes, and the tests were made with a steam pressure averaging 140 pounds. The first trial was through a line of hose of 625 feet, with a 1 1-4 inch nozzle, and threw a stream 193 feet. The next trial was through 300 feet of hose, 1 1-4 nozzle—205 feet. Third trial was from a line of 150 feet with a 1 3-8 inch nozzle—230 feet, 2 inches. Two lines of 150 feet each, with a 1 1-8 nozzle, and the streams were thrown a distance of 185 feet each. Two lines of 100 feet each, connected with one of De Forrest's Siamese twin connections, and a stream was thrown 240 feet, from a nozzle 1 3-8 inches. Two more trials, using the Siamese connection, were made; the first with a 1 1-4 nozzle, throwing 275 feet and the second with 1 1-2 inch nozzle—213 feet. The engine was highly finished, is a first-class machine and weighs 7,400 pounds. She gave perfect satisfaction.

During the Republican demonstration last Friday evening, an excited politician belonging to the opposite party, severely assaulted Asst. Foreman Wilson of Hook and Ladder No. 1. He was arrested and taken to the police station.

Foreman Larrabee of Hose 2 received his gold badge won at the Hose 4 fair. It is a very handsome affair in the shape of a shield, engraved on the front, "Foreman Hose 2, Peabody, David Larrabee." The badge was made and engraved by Starr C. Hewitt, and was the prize for selling the largest number of tickets to the late fair.

All the hydrants in town are being treated to a coat of black paint.

The last prize of the Fireman's Relief Association was called for and delivered this week. It was the parlor stove, and went to Mr. Geo. Kimball, of Danversport. ZERO.

Mr. Orlando F. Newhall is building a green house at his residence on Lynnfield street.

The estate of the late Geo. Raddin has had extensive improvements made on it the past week.

Postmaster Tudbury's daughter is the youngest pupil in the High school, being only 13 years of age.

The horse railroad office will be ready for occupancy in about ten days.

The people in this vicinity are determined to complete their house of worship this year, if possible, and they feel very confident of success. An appeal was made last Sabbath by Rev. Mr. Colwell, and $184.50 was pledged—and that, too, without any intimation of such a thing being done. Thus far they have raised $400 towards the completion of the edifice, and it is anticipated that several entertainments by home talent will be given, for the benefit of the fund. The members of the parish feel much encouraged by the outlook, and they are certainly entitled to great credit, for the determination to have their house of worship free from debt.

It is a little late for snake stories but Mr. Chas. Hayward, the butcher, killed a black snake on Lynnfield street last Saturday, that measured five feet and one inch in length.

Hon. George B. Loring has an acre of sunflowers growing on his Salem farm. It goes without the saying that he has a political bee buzzing in his bonnet. The wintry frosts may nip the tender hopes of the sunflower, but the Loring bee knoweth not the meaning of the term suspended animation.—Milford Journal.

Every Butler man should register. Every Robinson man should register. Every Almy man should register. Every Arnold man should register. Every legal voter in Boston should register. Let us have a full vote and a fair count, and may the devil take the hindmost one if he can catch him.—Boston Post.

Two similar bracelets on the same wrist and an odd one on the other is now the popular fashion among young ladies.

WHAT OUR BOY SAYS.

That both the Butler flags in this town were lodged upon the telephone wire.

That it is supposed that it was intentional, and that the Boston Globe gets its "telephone talks" in this way.

That the "chief executive magistrate" calls Republican editors "dudes."

That "our boy" and other assistants cannot be sub-dude.

That some folks say they sympathize with the under dog.

That they always bet their money on the other one all the same.

That the Democrats have nominated for sheriff a man named Day.

That it will be a cold Day, and he will get left.

That he will be glad of the change of the standard time.

That he can then lay in bed sixteen minutes longer in the morning and not have it count.

That he was disappointed in the Democratic rally the other night.

That his chum told him they were going to have a collation.

That he had been preparing for it until he got so thin he couldn't tell whether it was his back or his stomach that was aching.

That he expects to fare better Friday night.

That these are chilly nights and he wishes there were steam pipes on the street corners so he could warm his fingers.

That the Ipswich Chronicle says under the "Signs of the Times"—Dr. Loring looks like Lord Macauley.

That that is probably a sign that the Doctor won't be returned to Congress from this district.

That:—

'Tis growing cold and chilly;
And Mary, Jane and Willie
No more upon the front stoop chew their gum.
Gone the buzzing fly's weird chorus,
And mosquitoes cease to bore us,
And the bumblebee no more doth sweetly bum.

That Gen. Butler calls his party "the anointed."

That Gen. Butler is the fly in that pot of grease.

We are pleased to note the evidences of a prosperous trade, which the passer by the store of Wilmot's in Salem cannot fail to perceive. During the last week the weather was inauspicious for any trade in clothing. Yet there has been a steady stream of customers at this popular store, and what is more, they have been suited. Their stock of goods was never larger than it is at the present time, and in the cosy parlor, which is devoted to the children's department, all the boys in Essex County can find something to their taste. A specialty is made of fine goods—taken from their custom department—made and trimmed in the finest manner, and which are sold at lower prices than we should think would cover the cost of the material. There are also suits as low as $2.50—complete and guaranteed to fit. There is every variety of style and kind. And what is true here, is true in all the other departments of this store. A large stock, an unusually fine variety to select from, and the lowest prices. Gents' underwear and furnishings are to be found in abundance, and can be purchased here at wholesale prices. There is an enormous stock of hats and caps—we don't see where they all go to, but Mr. Boynton says they will all be sold and more too. In the mammoth windows can be seen an elegant Hallet & Cumston upright piano, also a parlor set of seven pieces, made by Shaw, Applin & Co., of Boston. These two valuable presents will be given to some one of the patrons of the establishment Dec. 26th. Every one who purchases any article will have the privilege of guessing the number of beans in a jar, on the article to be given. When the books are closed the beans will be publicly counted, and the nearest guesser will receive the article. There have been guesses all the way from 150 to 70,000, and from parties in Texas, Maine, New Hampshire and elsewhere. The fortunate guesser will have a prize which is of real value, and we do not wonder that all Mr. Boynton's patrons are availing themselves of the opportunity afforded.

It did not look very well, and the Globe amended it. At Faneuil Hall the supreme executive magistrate said:

Now, gentlemen, I should have made all the speech I should need to make if I should say to you: "Choose ye this day whom you will serve, Butler or the Marshes; that is the question."

As it appears in his excellency's own organ this sentence reads:—

Now, gentlemen, I shall have made all the speech I intend to make if I shall say this to you: Who will you have serve you, Butler or the Marshes? because this is the question.

This latter version has three disadvantages. It is ungrammatical; it is not what the governor said; and it is not what he meant. On the whole, the people of Massachusetts will think twice before they "serve" any man.—Boston Advertiser.

Who are those fellows tagging on behind? They look like the men who formerly rode that bicycle.—Boston Herald.

Campaign Song.

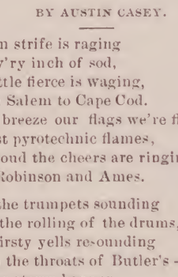
BY AUSTIN CASEY.

Election strife is raging
On ev'ry inch of sod,
The battle fierce is waging,
From Salem to Cape Cod.
To the breeze our flags we're flinging,
'Midst pyrotechnic flames,
While loud the cheers are ringing
For Robinson and Ames.

I hear the trumpets sounding
And the rolling of the drums,
And thirsty yells resounding
From the throats of Butler's ——
I see our starry banner,
And it bears the glorious names
Of men of faith and honor,
Of Robinson and Ames.

We tried him once in office,
Our gallant lawyer Ben,
He tries again to "stuff us,"
With the voice and with the pen.
But we've seen a little too much
Of his funny little games,
And we shall not tolerate such,
While we've Robinson and Ames.

O you who love the honor,
And the glory of our state,
Come march beneath our banner,
And save it from its fate,
And let our cheers to Heaven rise,
While the nation's voice proclaims,
The victory of all we prize,
Of Robinson and Ames.



Rabid prohibitionists are a stumbling block in the way of all temperance reform rather than a help. They assume a "holier than thou" attitude, thanking God that they are not as other men; and, like Butler, they see no good in a man unless he blindly follows their lead. He may be a prohibitionist in principle and practice, but that is nothing if he does not vote their ticket. There certainly is no occasion or excuse for a prohibitory ticket this year. Prohibition is not and cannot be made an issue of the campaign. Either Robinson or Butler will be elected Governor of this state for the coming year, and every reasonable prohibitionist will vote for the one of these men who will be most likely to stand on the side of purity and sobriety. And that man will be George D. Robinson.—Palmer Journal.

Poet's Corner.

To a Friend.

BY FRANCIS NUGENT.

Perchance, in after years, dear friend,
In diverse ways our paths may tend,
Far from these friends, and scenes of pleasure,
Which we'll in mem'ry always treasure.

How sweet to think, when you doth gaze
These lines upon, they'll fondly raise
Sweet thoughts of me, and these bright days,
Untaint'd by worldly sins and ways.

I'll never thee forget, dear friend,
May God blithe years to thee extend,
And grant thee, at long life's surcease,
A home in the land of 'ternal peace!

Omens.

BY EDITH M. THOMAS.

As, ere the storm, a silence fills the world,
No blade is stirred, no banner is unfurled
In conscious field or wood;
So, all the morning, hushed and tranced with fear,
I seemed to see a messenger draw near,
Whose errand was not good,
I turned, and lo! within the open door,
The one I deemed beset with perils sore,
Close by me, smiling, stood.

I know not why (I said that summer night)
The heart in me should be so wondrous light,
So sweet each moment's breath;
Assurance kind greets me from every star;
The all-gathering breeze, that hastens from afar,—
How glad a thing it saith!
That was the night my friend beyond the seas,
Within a tent beneath the olive-trees,
Turned his blue eyes on death.

Work is Worship.

BY MRS. M. A. FORD.

Toiling brothers, are you weary
Struggling 'neath life's bitter weight?
Dream not idleness is honor,
Envy not the proud and great;
Noble is your humble lot;
Work is worship, scorn it not.

Sigh not for the gilded glory
That the crown or sceptre brings;
If ye rule the fields of labor
Ye are God-created kings;
Oft a regal heart may rest,
'Neath a coarse and tattered vest.

Though the worldly great may scorn you
Ye are men—what more are they?
Have they not the same Creator?
Are they made of finer clay?
'Tis by noble deeds alone
That a noble soul is known.

Let the voice of prayer and labor,
Blend in one harmonious chime;
Useful works are glorious anthems,
Toil is prayer the most sublime.
Though ye suffer scorn and pain,
Think not that ye live in vain.

Think of Him, the "Meek and Lowly,"
When in weariness ye groan;
How He lived, and toiled, and suffered,
Poor, unhonored and unknown;
He, the universal Lord,
Worshiped by both deed and word.

Honored be the earnest worker,
Blessed the rough, toil-hardened hand,
While the glorious hymn of labor
Upward floats from wave to land.
Toilers, noble is your lot;
Work is worship, scorn it not.

An amusing piece of repartee which occured during the Tewksbury investigation between Mr. Brown and Governor Butler, and which, we believe, has never appeared in print was told us recently, and it is so sharp we give it below. It was right after the morning session of the hearing, when the reporters had all sent the testimony to their respective papers. Mr. Brown had opened the discussion, when in reply to what he had said, Governor Butler remarked:

"Mr. Brown, that is incorrect."

Mr. Brown—"Governor, that is correct."

Governor Butler—"Brother Brown, do you know what penalty the good Lord inflicted upon liars as given in the Bible."

Mr. Brown—"Oh, yes. They came to death."

Governor Butler—"Tis so."

Mr. Brown—"But Governor, you must admit that God has since been very lenient with you."—Hingham Journal.

A CORNER IN PEANUTS.—A great peanut speculation is going on. Boston and New York dealers have agents scouring the country, and buying all the peanuts they can from middle men and retailers. Peanuts are worth $3 a bushel in Boston. L. S. Ruggles, of Auburn, sold out his stock of 200 bushels to a Boston house for $2.75 a bushel, on Friday. The reason for the recent jump in the peanut is said to be a poor crop in the peanut raising States. In Virginia, 10 bushels of peanuts will not afford more than one bushel of good ones. There is equally great excitement in the bean market. Pea beans have gone up 40 cents a bushel in Boston within 48 hours.

Book Notices.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for November, like its predecessors, is extremely interesting, entertaining and instructive. The engravings are voluminous, and as varied as the articles they illustrate. N. Robinson's contribution "The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston," and those on "Man Monarchs," "Book Decoration, Historical and Artistic," will well repay the reader. There are serial and short stories, sketches of adventures, poems, etc., by Amanda Douglass, Oscar Doyle Mary A. Dennison, etc., etc., and large and varied miscellany, replete with information and entertainment. There are 128 quarto pages, and over 100 embellishments. Price, 25 cents a number or $3 a year, post-paid. Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

St. Nicholas for November is the first of a new volume, and is full of promise of good things for the coming year. Louisa M. Alcott has the first half of a bright story, Sophie's Secret, J. T. Trowbridge contributes a thrilling biographical sketch of Capt. Mayne Reid, whose serial story' In the Land of Fire, begins in the Christmas issue. Then, appropriate to the Thanksgiving season is a down-east sketch, A Thanksgiving Dinner that flew away. Another article of much more than ordinary historical interest is the paper on The Origin of the Stars and Stripes.

The premium engraving for "Peterson's Magazine" for 1884 has been received, and a very beautiful one it is: a picture of a mother carrying her little one up-stairs to bed, and called "Tired Out." It is a picture that will go to every mother's heart. It can be had gratis, by getting up a club for "Peterson." "Peterson" is the best and cheapest of the lady's books, the price being but two dollars a year. Now is the time to get up the clubs for 1884. Address, Charles J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

We have received from Henry P. Ives, of Salem, Robert B. Thomas' Old Farmer's Almanac for the year 1884. It is the earliest in the field and the first on our table.

The Century for November attempts to raise even its own standard of exellence. Of the engravers for this number five of them are women. Its contents are unusually full. There is a contribution to the history of the war, "The Capture of Jefferson Davis," by the private secretary of Davis himself. There is in addition Chas. Dudley Warner's recollections of "The Bull Fight in Spain," "Glimpses of Paris," by J. D. Osborne, and the opening chapters of Cable's new romance "Dr. Sevier." The fourth part of the "Bread Winners" continues the interest in this remarkable production. The poetry, "Topics of the Times" and editorials are apt and timely.

The Young Ladies' Journal appears to grow in favor. It is replete with useful information to the ladies in the way of plate design for needle and art work. Call at the Peabody News Company and see a copy of the magazine.

A Baltimore dealer in hosiery has been giving an inquisitive reporter some points on the size of stockings worn by lady purchasers. He says: "The sizes ange from eight to ten. In Baltimore the average is from eight to eight and a half. In Boston and Chicago it is from nine to nine and a half and in New York from eight and a half to nine. It is a well-known fact among hosiery dealers that the women of Baltimore have the smallest feet in the country."

It must make life appear a barren waste to the average Boston woman to reflect that her stockings are the same in size that are worn by women in Chicago.—New York Graphic.

MESSRS. EDITORS,—A valuable dog named Ruff, belonging to Mr. C. O. Stone of this town, died last Sunday at the advanced age of fifteen years and six months. He will be remembered by most of your readers as a dog of great intelligence and pleasant disposition, being a great favorite with children in the neighborhood. In his younger days he was harnessed to a little wagon made expressly for him, and was always driven by the son through the public streets. As old age crept on, his favorite pursuits were forgotten and for the past two years he has hardly walked four rods from the house, always choosing to lie upon the front piazza, taking notice of every thing so far as he could see. Although the family had long been aware that his death was drawing near, they were never-theless, prostrate with grief when the final event did occur, for they felt they had indeed lost a friend who had shared their joys and sorrows for so many years past. We called upon them to day and extended our sympathy when shown the little grave, neatly sodded and covered with flowers, also a fine photograph taken a few years ago, and a fine oil painting which the family prize very highly. NEIGHBOR.

SALEM.

The Gazette says your new Town Hall will be dedicated the 18th inst. Kind of funny that this should be just the announcement in the News of the previous evening. The 18th comes on Sunday, whereas the dedication takes place Thursday, Nov. 22.

The Salem Schubert Club has sent $220 to Mr. William J. Winch as the proceeds of its testimonial concert, and has received a response from Mr. Winch. The Club is rehearsing Gade's "Erl King's Daughter" under the direction of Mr. G. W. Chadwick.

Have you seen those superb flowers at Reith's?

On the evening of Sunday the 11th there will be a memorial service of Luther—the man and his work—at the First Church at 7 o'clock; speakers, Rev. B. F. McDaniel and Rev. G. H. Hosmer. This will be the second of the union meetings of the Unitarian and Universalist churches.

Frank Cousins has been astonishing his customers the past week by his bargains in ribbons at 25 cents per yard. Some of them we should think were worth $1.00. And while we are about it, we would say to the readers of the PRESS that Mr. Cousins has something new on his bargain counter every day. It is quite a feature, and no lady can afford to pass it on shopping days.

Mr. Reed's new skating rink will be opened to-morrow evening. Mr. Reed is well known to the public by his connection with the rink at the Willows, and his new building is in every way fitted for the purpose. It will be heated with steam, and furnished with six electric lights. It will have separate dressing rooms for ladies and gentlemen, and a balcony for the orchestra and a gallery for the spectators.

J. H. Riley has a large assortment of tablets and monuments which he will be pleased to show to the readers of the PRESS. His store is at No. 11 St. Peter street. Patrons will be visited at their residences if desired.

A charter has been granted to Salem encampment of Odd Fellows. William E. Meade will be Chief Patriarch.

H. W. French will give another course of illustrated lectures this year.

A. W. Lloyd, the dealer in picture frames and pictures of all kinds, has removed to No. 182 Essex street, next to the Essex House.

George Riddle will give his second reading at the Essex Institute Rooms to-morrow evening.

A subscription list has been opened to secure a lecture by Matthew Arnold. 150 tickets will secure the lecture. Subscription books are open at O. U. H. Upham's art store.

Since the opening at the Naumkeag Clothing Store, this establishment has had an unprecedented call for overcoats. They have an elegantly selected stock, and we were amazed at some of the prices, made on the best of them, as well as those of ordinary grade. Their children's department is a large feature,—plenty of light, and what is better plenty of good goods at marvellous prices.

We are glad to see city clerk Meek at his post again.

The case of the publisher of the News, which goes to the full bench of the Supreme Court on exceptions, is early in order for hearing at this term of the Court.

It is understood that Mayor Hill will be a candidate for re-election for next year.

The second of the autumnal months is passing before us. Nature begins to assume new beauties worthy of our contemplation. No longer the bright and verdant color of the leaves is seen, yet the various tints of red and yellow which deck the forest present a pleasing contrast. The appearance becomes more striking as autumn advances, and the process of decay becomes more visible.

This visible change which is gradually extending over the face of nature at this season, is well calculated to remind man of the change which he too is shortly to undergo. Even the young may learn from it many lessons. They should reflect when they see the signs of decay upon the plants and trees, that thus it will be with themselves that, though now they are full of life, and vigor and strength, the time will come when the freshness of youth will fade, and all the infirmities of age will settle upon them.

"Ah, I have an impression!" exclaimed Dr. McCosh, the President of Princeton College, to the mental philosophy class. "Now, young gentlemen," continued the Doctor, as he touched his head with his forefinger, "can you tell me what an impression is?" No answer. "What! no one knows? No one can tell me what an impression is!" exclaimed the Doctor, looking up and down the class. "I know," said Mr. Arthur. "An impression is a dent in a soft place." "Young gentleman," said the Doctor, removing his hand from his forehead and growing red in the face, "you are excused for the day."

THE FIREPALACES.—Every house should have in the principal, or living room, at least, a fireplace, if only for use in summer, or in the warm months, says the Agriculturist. There is rarely a month in which there is not a long and cold storm, or if it is not cold, there is an all-pervading dampness, which requires a fire to remove it. In the Northern States the present month and the next are among the most enjoyable, as to weather, of all the twelve. Yet cold storms of several days duration are frequent, and if there are not such storms, warm, genial days are followed by chilly nights, bringing a change so great that none but the most robust can endure it, and the foundation of serious illness is often laid at this time.

At this season a fire, especially at night, is often needed for both comfort and health, and no house should be without a provision for it. While a fire in a stove is vastly better than none at all, by all means, where possible, have it in an open fireplace. Aside from its social effect, the air of cheerfulness which a fire on the hearth brings with it, such a fire also brings ventilation, a change of air, a removal of dampness and stagnation, such as a close stove does not afford. In our climate we rarely have a month, even in summer, in which a fire is not at times needed. Were the provisions for making it more general, we should hear much less of "malaria." Malaria means bad air; good air comes with an open fire, as well as brightness and cheerfulness.

Many teachers who fail to inspire their pupils with the fancied thirst for knowledge which all youth is supposed to possess, complain that the parents do not do their part. Few take the trouble to "visit school," and most seem to have little regard for their children's progress. But one mother who has for some time made it a rule to visit her child's school testifies that even so slight an exertion pays. That child now uniformly maintains a good record in scholarship and deportment. The witchery and heedlessness of most school-children is due not so much to natural depravity or dullness as to the consciousness on the part of the children that there is no co-operation between the teachers and their parents. Last year a newly elected member of the school committee quite astonished the teachers by a round of visits during ordinary school hours. They said they had read of such things in the annual reports of the state board of education but had never seen them exemplified here in Springfield, save on exhibition days.—Springfield Republican.

CONSCIENCE WHISPER.—It was a n Indiana man, who, when a terrible storm began one night, rushed into the house of a neighbor and cried out:

"Jones, this is the ending up of earth!"

"I am afraid so," was the reply.

"And what shall we do?"

"Make our peace with heaven."

The wind blew still stronger, the house began to shake, and the excited man exclaimed:

"Jones, you lost five bushels of wheat last fall?"

"Yes."

"And you have your suspicions?"

"I have. The man who took my wheat had better own up."

"Can you forgive him?"

"I can."

"Well—"

Here the wind suddenly dropped, and after a look through the window the conscience-stricken man turned and finished.

"Yes, if ever I meet him, I'll advise him to call around."

WHY THE "ROYAL" IS THE BEST.—The improved method by which it has been made possible to produce pure cream of tartar, has had an important bearing upon the manufacture of baking powder. By the process heretofore generally employed, it has been found impossible to remove all impurities, more particularly the tartrate of lime, which remained to such an extent as to greatly impair the quality of the cream of tartar, and to interfere seriously with the strength and wholesomeness of the baking powders into which it entered.

In the new process, which is owned by the Royal Baking Powder Company of New York, and exclusively used in its tartar works, the imported crude grape acid is so treated as to remove all vestige of tartrate of lime or other impurities, giving a product before unknown—a chemically pure cream of tartar.

By the employment of these superior facilities, the Royal Baking Powder Company has made the Royal Baking Powder as the chemists all certify, of the highest possible degree of strength, "absolutely pure" and wholesome, and with an always uniform leavening power. It is for these reasons that the "Royal" never fails to produce bread, biscuit, cake, etc., that are light, sweet, digestible and wholesome; the eating of which is never followed by indigestion, or any of those physical discomforts attendant upon the partaking of improperly prepared food. In rendering possible the production of a baking powder possessed of these qualifications, the improved method of refining cream of tartar becomes a matter of importance to the culinary world.

LYNN.

The new hotel Boscobel is being largely patronized.

J. G. Olin is now in his new store, 61 Market street, and makes a fine show of Jewelry. He is one of Lynn's oldest merchants, and our readers will find reliable goods there for holiday trade or wedding presents.

Work has been commenced on the stretching of wires and the setting of poles about the city for the introduction of electric lights. There will be 20 in number, located at Market square, between the park and Common, City Hall square, Broad street engine house, Central square, Narrow gauge depot, Union and Pearl streets, Central avenue and Washington street, Washington square and various other localities. They will burn until midnight. The experiment of electric lighting will be tried for two months and cost about $800. Lights cost 58 cents each per night.

A petition is being circulated in Nahant, calling for a town meeting to consider the matter of a steam railway between that place and Lynn.

The First Universalist church appropriately observed All Souls' Day last Sabbath.

The cars on the Lynn & Boston railroad leaving West Lynn stable at 6:40 A. M. for Swampscott, and leaving central depot at 7.40 A. M., for Boston, have been discontinued. The 9:20 A. M. car from Boston has also been discontinued.

The window of Smith & Robinson on Market street, attracts much attention. In it is a Rogers group of "Neighboring Pews." This is a new design and this firm are agents for these groups in this vicinity. There is also a portrait of the monument to be erected to the unknown Confederate dead, buried around Winchester, Va., and which was forwarded by the mayor of that city to Mayor Baird of Lynn. The window of this firm is always attractive, and the admiration of passers.

It is proposed to hold a grand prohibitory mass meeting Nov. 22d, to influence a vote for No License at the coming election.

Mr. William H. Boss, formerly station master at the Eastern railroad central depot in this city, is occupying a similar capacity on the line of the New York & New England railroad.

Calanthe Lodge K. of P., is soon to hold a Fair in the Coliseum.

Wellman Osborne is getting ready for an enormous bargain sale, to commence Saturday, Nov. 10. His stores will be closed all day Friday, and on Saturday morning he announces that he shall make prices unheard of in this city. Osborne means business, and the readers of the PRESS will do well to bear it in miud.

The Grand Army Fair opened Monday evening, and is confidently expected to be a grand success.

At the extensive and model establishment of the L. A. May Co., 137 and 141 Union street, will be found a full line of the Walker and Pratt Co.'s goods. First comes the Walker furnace, hundreds of which are to-day in use in Lynn and immediate vicinity. This furnace is undoubtedly the best, in all respects, ever offered to the public, for efficiency, durability, economy of fuel, and convenience of management. The Railway King is the name of a very powerful heater, especially adapted for use in railway stations, factories, work-shops, offices, schoolrooms, etc. Last but perhaps the most important of all comes the indispensable, elegant and unequalled cooking apparatus, known as the Crawford Range. The claims for this range are superiority of construction and general excellence and that it combines more desirable and essential features than can be found in any other. The readers of the PRESS are cordially invited to visit this establishment where they will be shown every attention by the obliging clerks.

WHAT HE HAD TO SAY.—Mr. Jenks had an eye to the beautiful, and when his wife brought into the domestic economy a real pretty house girl, Mr. Jenks began to scout around for game. Mrs. Jenks had her eyes open, and one day caught her lord unsuccessfully trying to kiss the girl.

"Well, sir," she said with frozen dignity and unutterable scorn, "I've caught you, have I?"

"The indications would warrant such a conclusion, my dear," he replied, coolly.

"What have you to say, sir?"

"Well, my dear, it isn't exactly in order for any lengthy remarks, but I should say if it was half as hard to kiss you as it was to kiss that girl, I don't really believe I could stand the racket oftener than once in ten years."

Then he mopped his perspiring brow and took a long breath, and hired a colored woman.

After the political contests, the partisan papers, having no more candidates to bleed, will change their principles in order to regain the subscribers their political abuse has lost to them.

Waiting For Mother,

The old man sits in his easy chair,
Slumbering the moments away,
Dreaming a dream that is all his own,
On this gladsome, peaceful day;
His children have gathered from far and near,
His children's children beside—
And many voices are echoing through
The "Homestead's" hall so wide.

But far away in the years long flown
Grandfather lives again;
And his heart forgets that it ever knew
A shadow of Grief and pain;
For he sees his wife as he saw her then—
A matron comely and fair,
With her children gathered round his board,
And never a vacant chair.

Oh! happy this dream of the "Auld Lang Syne,"
Of the years long slipped away!
And the old man's lips have gathered a smile,
And his heart grows young and gay.
But a kiss falls gently upon his brow
From his daughter's lips so true;
"Dinner is ready, and, father dear,
We are only waiting for you."

The old man wakes at his daughter's call
And he looks at the table near—
"There's one of us missing, my child," he says,
"We will wait till mother is here."
There are tears in the eyes of his children then,
As they gaze on an empty chair;
For many a lonely year has passed
Since "Mother" sat with them there

But the old man pleads still wistfully:
"We must wait for mother, you know!"
And they let him rest in his old arm chair
Till the sun at last sinks low;
Then, leaving a smile for the children here,
He turned from the earth away,
And has gone to "Mother" beyond the skies,
With the close of the quiet day.

The Scar on the Forehead.

Midnight had tolled the solemn chime, yet still the weary watcher sat beside the hearthstone, plying her busy needle. Her eyes were dim and sunken, her cheeks thin and pale, her lips pinched and purple, and her slender fingers so shrivelled with the icy chill that was fast palsying her, that the plain gold ring on her wedding finger and the thimble that she held were every now and then dropping into her lap. Her delicate form was shivering even under the heavy shawl that she had thrown about her shoulders, and she looked often with a wistful glance at the little basket of fuel that stood beside the fireplace.

Another hour passed, and the clock struck one.

"He must soon be here now," whispered she, in a half-frightened tone. "I will lay aside my work and make things as cheerful as I can."

So she brushed the ashes from the hearth, drew the coals together, threw on them a handful of the carefully saved fuel, and fanned the faint flame till it flashed high in the chimney. Then she looked about the room to see if aught could be mended; but the few articles it held were all in their wonted place, and everything as neat as the hands of love could make it. An arm-chair was drawn from a corner close to the crackling fire, the dressing-gown that hung upon it spread out anew, and a pair of slippers were upon the fender. The lamp was trimmed afresh, the table dusted, and a carefully covered dish set upon it, and beside it was placed a knife almost as bright as though the blade had been silver instead of steel.

"I have done the best I can," said the pale watcher, as again she sank into her chair. "O, if I were only sure of one kind word," she continued. "Hark!" She started up and listened. "It is he—and how he bangs the gate! I shall have a fearful time with him."

She hastened to the front door and gently opened it.

A man staggered in, and reeling this way and that, reached finally the room his gentle wife had made so bright and cheerful. But what was her reward? A volley of oaths so foul that it seemed as if an army of fiends had spoken with one voice. He cursed the niggardly fire, though to make that she and her children had been half frozen all day; he swore at the patched dressing-gown, though out of her own thin wardrobe she had planned it; he raved at the bread and meat, though her own lean fingers had earned them both. And when angel-like, and woman-like, too, she gave him a smile for every frown, an endearing epithet for every oath, and would have wound her arms about him to win him back to reason and himself, he raised his heavy hand and dealt her a powerful blow, aye, he struck her till every nerve quivered with anguish, and she his wife, and the mother of his beauteous children! And now, when she lay prostrate before him, he raised himself to kick her thence. A slight young hand pushed off the booted foot, even as it was falling on the trembling woman, and a voice, agonized in its tones, exclaimed:

"Forbear, my father—for though your wife, she is yet my mother, and I will save her from your rage!"

The eyes of the drunkard quailed a moment before the upturned gaze of his first-born, so mournfully holy was the look that beamed from his tearful face; then a fiendish glare burned in his own, and exclaiming:

"You, too!—must I level my whole household ere I can find peace?" he seized the glistening knife and struck his child.

"Will he live?" moaned the poor mother to the surgeon, when he had bandaged the poor boy's head. "He is very pale and weak."

"It is a ghastly and dangerous wound," said the surgeon; "only the eighth of an inch deeper and it would have been fatal—yet with care he may survive."

"Mother,"—there was a pathos in the tone that drew her eyes earnestly to the speaker, a stripling of but seventeen years—"Mother, I am going away."

"Away!—and where, Ernest?" she inquired.

"I cannot stay," he replied; "God must direct my steps—but go from here I must. The curse of the drunkard's son is on me. None will regard me—none even give me work. And more, mother, if I stay here I must forget my Bible, for how can I honor my father when he so dishonors himself?"

Very long did the boy talk and plead ere he won the tearful consent; but she gave it at length, and with a little knapsack on his back, his mother's Bible in one pocket and her slender purse in the other, Ernest went forth in the great world to seek, not so much fortune or fame, as that peace and joy which a drunken father would not give him in his home.

Years passed away, and there came no tidings from Ernest, save that after the first one, each quarter brought the mother a remittance, and each successive quarter one of a higher figure. Welcome, too, were they all; for downward, still downward, went her husband, his absence no longer counted by hours, but weeks and months.

In a business city, many miles from his native town, a stranger one night found him in a gutter, half frozen, starved, weary and sick. Like a good Samaritan, he picked him up, and as he was too weak to walk, placed him in a conveyance and had him taken to his own home. A warm bath, clean garments, wholesome food and a soft bed were freely offered to him, and passive as a child when worn and languid, he suffered them to deal with him as they chose, and soon sank into a deep, refreshing slumber.

It was hours ere he awoke, and then he seemed as in a dream. The filthy gutter in which he had lost his consciousness was now exchanged for a downy bed, with pillows white and soft as snow, with snow-white counterpane and damask hangings. His rags had dissappeared, and in their stead he saw himself robed in fine linen. The dirt was washed from his face and hands, his hair was combed, and his tangled beard neatly shorn. He put back the curtains. Glad, golden sunbeams were stealing through the crimson drapery of an alcoved window, and their brilliant light showed him a lofty chamber, with frescoed walls, a carpet from oriental loom, and furniture that a prince might covet. "It is a dream," breathed he, and he closed his eyes. Light footsteps aroused him soon, and unclosing them again he saw bending over him a noble looking man in life's early prime, and beside him a lovely woman, and in the eyes of both large tears were standing.

"Tell me," said he eagerly, "do I dream, or am I the poor drunkard so greatly cared for?"

"You were sick and we ministered to you," replied the lady.

"Sick! ay, sin sick," he said. "But you do not know how vile I am, or you would cast me out at once. Listen. I have broken the heart of my wife. I have driven my only son from home; ay, and half killed him first; and I have ill-treated my other children till they fear me more than the evil one. Will you care for me now?"

He almost shrieked out the question, and it seemed as though life and death hung on the answer.

"We must forgive even as we would be forgiven," said the master of the house. "While you can be happy, stay with us."

A week passed away, and still the old man tarried in that beautiful home, now toying gently with the little Lilly, the wee, delicate babe, and then playing gay pranks with Harry, the pride of the household, a boy of four Summers; now dreaming in the pleasant chamber where he first awoke again to manhood, and then lolling in an arm-chair in the parlor, tears and smiles chasing each other over his wrinkled cheeks as the lovely lady of the mansion sang, now a gay ditty and then a solemn hymn. But he never offered to cross the threshold.

"I dare not," he would say, when asked to ride or walk; "there is danger in the street, and this calm is so very sweet. If it could only last!" And then he would sigh, and sometimes weep and sob like a child.

"There is to be a grand rally of the friends of temperance to-night—the new and splendid hall is to be inaugurated—Banners will wave, music ring, and ladies smile! shall I invite you, my wife, to accompany me?" said the master of the house.

"Of course, after such a programme," said she, gaily, "and you may depend upon my going, too. How soon must I be ready?"

"In an hour's time," he replied. "I will send a carriage for you, and meet you myself at the door of the hall. Be sure that you are ready, for there will be a tremendous crowd."

"I will be in time—trust me for that," said she, and hastened to perform her evening duties to the little ones; but what was her astonishment when she returned to the parlor, all bonneted and cloaked, to find their stranger guest awaiting her.

"I cannot surely be tempted there," said he, in a low, sad voice; "but if you will suffer me to ride with you, I will gladly go. It may be that I shall complete there the salvation here commenced."

Gladly did the lady acquiesce in the request, and they were soon at the door of the thronged hall. Not her husband, but an intimate friend of his joined them there, and led them to some reserved seats near to the platform.

There had been stirring music by the band, fervent prayers by the clergy, and thrilling speeches from orators from distant parts of the country, and the hearts of that vast multitude were aroused as they had never been before to the dangers of the cup. Then, while yet they were all riveted to the subject, the president announced "a voice from our home." There was a breathless silence for a moment, and then long and loud acclamations greeted the good Samaritan of our sketch as he bowed to the waiting throng. It had seemed to them, as the last speaker hushed his voice, that the theme world wide as it is, was quite exhausted; but so impassioned was the eloquence that now mastered it, that they hung upon every word as if he had spoken of something fresh from heaven. Where others had generalised, he individualised. He did not take the mass of drunkards, but only one out of them all, and he portrayed his course in such vivid colors that the audience seemed gazing upon dissolving views rather than listening to chosen words; and so wrought up were they, that when he pictured that horrible scene in the tragedy of drink, where the husband levels to the floor the wife who once slept so sweetly upon his bosom, the wife that is also the mother of his children, they seemed to hear the gentle and wronged one fall, and sobs and sighs broke forth from the assembly. The speaker paused till they were quiet, wiping, meanwhile, the tears from his own cheeks.

"Do you ask," said he, when he again resumed his theme, "do you ask why I stand here to-night and speak these things? why I not only speak but feel them! Look at this," he said, lifting the glossy locks from his left temple. "Do you see that scar on my forehead?"

Slowly and solemnly did the speaker utter each word, then as he stood pushing back the raven hair, he continued: "After the drunkard had felled his wife to the floor, he would have kicked her prostrate form, but that her young son rushed between the two. What did the drunkard do then?" he exclaimed in a voice of thunder. Another pause and a breathless hush. More slowly, more solemnly, did he speak. "He seized a knife," he continued; "aye, and the one, too, his gentle wife had herself laid beside his plate for him to carve the dish her worn and weary fingers had earned to sustain his life; he seized it and—did this!" and he pointed to his forehead. "To my grave shall I carry this scar, and not till I rest in my grave shall I cease to plead for the drunkard's wife and the drunkard's children."

With these words fresh on his lips he withdrew. There was no applauding, but a silence as of death rested in the vast hall. Ere it was broken by prayer or hymn, an aged man, older though it seemed with grief than years, tottered upon the platform. Trembling in every nerve and muscle, he leaned against the desk, and finally grasped it for support. Many times did his lips move ere he could utter an audible sound, and when he did speak his words were rather felt than heard.

"The son has spoken," said he, "now let the father. With the scar on his forehead yet bleeding, my Ernest, my first-born, my noble boy, went from his home to seek among strangers the peace his father would not give him upon his own hearth-stone. Ten years from that time, one week ago to-night, that son picked up his father from a gutter, and instead of spurning him as a fallen sinner, he took him to his home as though he had been the angel instead of the demon of his youth. Deep is the scar on his forehead, but deeper are the scars on my heart. Ye have heard him—ye see me. Let the story and the sight be your salvation, as it is even now my own."

The old man was exhausted, and fell back into his son's arms.

HANDS.

Hands are divided into three different kinds: those with round-pointed fingers, those with square tips and those that are spade shaped, with pods of flesh at each side of the nail. The first type—with round-pointed fingers—belong to characters with perceptions extra sensitive, to very pious people, to contemplative minds, to the impulsive, and to all poets and artists who have ideality as a prominent trait. The square-shaped belong to scientific people, sensible, self-contained characters, and to the class of professional men who are neither visionary nor altogether sordid. The spade-shaped type, with pods of flesh at the side of the nail, indicate people whose interests and instincts are mostly material. Each finger, no matter what kind of a hand it is joined to, has a joint representing each of those types. The division of the finger that is nearest to the palm stands for the body, the middle division represents mind, and the highest joint spirit or soul. If the top joint is longer than the others it denotes a character weakened with a too abundant imagination, great ideality and a leaning toward the theoretical rather than the practical. When the middle joint of the finger is long, it promises a logical mind, and when the lowest joint is longest, it indicates a nature that clings more to the luxuries than to the refinement of life. If they are nearly alike, it indicates a well-balanced mind, especially if the length of the fingers equals the length of the palm.

A FIVE-CENT CYCLONE.

For several years Professor Douglas of Ann Arbor University, has been manufacturing cyclones. He does it by suspending a large copper plate by silken cords. This plate is charged heavily with electricity, which hangs down like a bag underneath, and is rendered visible by the use of arsenous acid gas, which gives it a green color. The formation is a miniature cyclone as perfect as any started in the clouds. It is funnel-shaped and whirls around rapidly. Passing this plate over a table, the five-cent cyclone snatches up copper cents, pens, pith balls, and other objects and scatters them on all sides.

The greatest pleasure I know is to do a good action by stealth, and to have to find it out by accident.

Shall We Let the Child Die?

A hard-hearted political economist, looking at a pale and puny child feebly gasping as it lies upon a pillow, says that the child might as well die. It is so weak and poor that its life will never be worth much anyhow. There are already a good many people in the world who are of not much account anyhow. And what's the use of adding to their number another weakling, who has but slender chance of ever amounting to anything?

Now ask that child's mother what she thinks about letting the child die. About this time the hard political economist had better get out of the way. "Let my child die? Not No! As long as there is a remedy to be found that will save that child, the child shall not die! I'll spend my last dollar to save the child!" Well, try a bottle of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS on that child. See the poor little fellow pick up strength. He revives. He will live. Hosts of other children have been brought almost from death to healthy life by Brown's Iron Bitters. Your druggist sells it. 8

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

THE STATE of Massachusetts has been redeemed. History has repeated itself, as we predicted. One year of democratic rule is enough for the State at a time. It was so in the case of Governor Gaston, and one year of such an administration as we have had has awakened the sober good sense of our people to a realization that the honor of Massachusetts must be preserved. When Gen. Butler was elected one year ago, we felt that he had an opportunity to free himself from the abuse which had been given him, and prove himself a governor of whom the State need not be ashamed. The opportunity, as has been the case several times before in his career, was lost. He became the assailant of the State, instead of its defender, until throughout the whole country, it has been thought a disgrace to be a citizen of this Commonwealth. The victory is one in which the Republican party can not claim a victory, as such. It is the defeat of Butlerism and all that it represents. In that defeat, all honest and fair minded citizens, without reference to party, who voted for George D. Robinson, are entitled to praise. Nor is it alone the defeat of the democratic party. For we regret to say that many who have in years past allied themselves with the republicans, voted for Butler. This much can with truth be said, that with no other candidate at the head of their ticket can the democratic party begin to poll the vote which Butler has this year received.

The whole state has much cause for rejoicing. The eyes of the entire country were this year turned to Massachusetts. The election of Butler would have placed her in the list of doubtful states, and it would have been such a victory as would have cheered the democrats all along the line. We are assured of a good government the ensuing year,—a government for the best good of the whole people, and a governor worthy to rank with the long line of illustrious magistrates whom Massachusetts delights to honor.

THE RESULT in this town is what we have all along foreseen. Yet the increase of the republican vote from 528 for Bishop last year to 744 for Robinson, thus reducing the majority of Butler from 257 to 216, and this in the face of the largest registration ever known in Peabody, is a cause for congratulation. And we feel that to the very faithful and efficient town committee is the result in a great measure due. They have worked zealously for the defeat of Butler through the entire campaign, and have been heartily seconded by our citizens who had the cause at heart. That we were not successful locally is due to causes over which they could have no control. We are fast becoming a democratic town, and no amount of boasting can wipe out the solid fact.

At the time of going to press, we regret that we are unable to give the county vote in detail. It is probable, however, that nearly all of the county officers on the Republican ticket, with the exception of Mr. Mahoney, are defeated. The vote for district attorney is very close, and Mr. Moulton's friends hope he will pull through. There is scarcely any doubt of Sheriff Herrick's defeat, as well as Mr. Graves'. We learn that the Republicans claim Haskell's election. William Sparhawk is elected Senator from this district. As in the case of the representative from Peabody, the Republicans can hardly put forward a man who can be elected by a strict party vote.

BUTLER CAN'T!

MASSACHUSETTS REDEEMED FOR THE REPUBLICANS.

10,000.

That is about the size of the majority that Massachusetts rolls up for Robinson and the State Ticket!

"Still as of old time long ago
Let Massachusetts muster,
Give her the place right next the foe,
Be sure that you may trust her."

Essex County stands by Butler and elects his Satellites.

"Three cheers for the dead already,
Hurrah for the next to die."

Yesterday was one of the nicest days for election that has been given us for years. The weather was mild and everything was favorable for the extraordinary large vote polled in the state.—In Peabody the polls opened promptly at 8 o'clock by the reading of the warrant, and balloting began promptly.—The Republicans, acting on the advice of the town committee, threw their heaviest vote in the morning, and up to 12 o'clock 825 votes had been cast. At the noon hour there was not the usual rush, although a large part of the Butler vote was thrown at that time. There was a steady vote from the time the polls opened until the close at quarter past four in the afternoon. In about half an hour after the voting—the vote for Governor and Representative was declared with the result given below. In the evening Upton's Hall was opened and the Republicans received despatches by telephone and telegraph, and cheer after cheer followed the despatches as they were read and bulletined by Mr. Edgar Upton. About half past ten came the news that Robinson had carried the state by 28,000, and all went home satisfied and happy. During the evening music was furnished by Clarence Mason, and a collation of hot coffee, crackers and cheese was furnished free. At the Democratic headquarters the room was full of men eager to hear the latest telegraph despatches which were received there.—And as the several despatches showing Butler gains in the different towns were received they were heartily cheered. The Greenbackers gathered at their headquarters, and as discouraging returns came in they closed up early and retired to their homes.

SAM AT THE TELEPHONE.

Hello, Central Office, give us Boston Globe.

Hello, Boston, give Globe to us.

Don't know whether you can have it or not, their operator was taken with cramp last evening, but I'll try.

Hello, Globe.

Hello, (faintly).

Hello, can't you speak louder?

I can't, something's Lodged in my throat.

Well, do the best you can, you're wanted at Peabody. Go ahead.

Hello, Globe.

Hello, Peabody, you're a Butler town I believe.

Yes, one of the very few; we want to know about that dream you published last Sunday of Robinson's.

Well, what of it?

Wasn't it kind of French romance on your part?

Well it turns out so. Shakespeare says, "we are such stuff as dreams are made of," and I think he had our party in mind.

By the way, is it true that Butler wishes he had called his book "The Pukesbury tale."

I really don't know, but after the returns began to come, he was found in a Brown study which may have been on this idea.

What did Butler say when he found he was defeated?

He said he did not know how they had contrived to Beard him so successfully.

Has your reporter interviewed him?

Yes, he found him figuring up the vote of Boston.

What did he say to your reporter?

Oh don't Cod-man!

Ha, ha, what an odd fellow the general is; by the way, Chicopee did well for Robinson, didn't it?

Yes, but Butler's ward went for him, so successfully, it cut him down nearly a hundred.

That's all, many thanks.

Glad to 'commodate—but by the way Peabody, tell us a little about your town, what's the Greenback vote there?

Onederful to relate, it's just one.

Only one greenbacker in Peabody dares stand up and be counted! how are the mighty fallen! how does it happen he was faithful when all others deserted their colors?

Well we think he was kept in place by a great Anti-fusion meeting that was held here. Mr. Dutton blandly addressed it, and Mr. Bland doctored it all he could, and the great biennial readjuster of the party in town, calmed all the stormy waves of feeling in the meeting, so that one man was held to his principles, and the party saved from utter annihilation.

Who did the greenbackers cave in to?

Well you'd never believe it, if you knew how they rubbed each other last year, but they sunk themselves in the democracy.

Ah! harmonized all troubles, that shows what we always claimed, that our side is always ready to do the right thing.

Not so fast, old fellow, the democracy meant to scoop 'em in without any consideration of value received. They intended to get all their votes but not give them any of the money.

There, I always said the democracy would not buy votes. I suppose they finally saw it was wiser to harmonize.

Yes, they saw it very plainly after Col. Plympton wrote a letter breathing blood and thunder, if they didn't let local issues go and all pull together for Butler, 'cause as he says the whole business is for Butler and nobody else.

Well, well we were mixed up in your town sure, the Republicans got whipped by only five votes more than they estimated and our people all tangled up. But our regulars swallowed the greenys complete, you're sure.

Yes, the greenys, as you call them now, and as Butler considered them last year, completely lost their political identity.

Is it true the Salem News is to appear to-day in mourning?

I really don't know, but its correspondent here looks as though he had lost all his friends, so perhaps it will.

Ah, is it so bad as that with our friend! oh why did I live to see such direful times! I'll give you my little verses and then au revoir.

Uncle Ben is a rover bold,
On the sea of politics,
And though he's getting a little old,
Cannot be baffled by common tricks.

He loves the farmers of the great state,
He loves the fisherman of Cape Ann,
He loves everyone who votes for him straight,
For Uncle Ben is a remarkable man.

No party yet has ever been found,
Quite big enough to hold him in.
So after bobbing serenely around,
He's created the party of Uncle Bin.

But somehow or other the voters say,
With Uncle Benjamin they are done,
So they've put him out of the way,
And hoisted the banner of Robinson.

Now Uncle Bennie must watch and wait,
In the calm seclusion of his home,
While Robinson in the chair of State,
Deals justice 'neath the gilded dome.

Ta ta! I'm going to join the Republican party.

NOTES.

Did you vote?

Shake, neighbor!

Settle up your bets!

This is the day we celebrate!

Gen. Butler is again a widow!

How about bi-ennial elections?

How does she suit you—the election!

We gave them the best we had in the shop.

The reason he was not elected was a "sticker."

They didn't try the greased ballot dodge in Peabody.

We heard it remarked that Peabody was a Butler town.

Looks as if Mrs. Leonard was a person after all,—eh, governor?

The politician now spends his time with his neglected family.

The sound of the cannon was wafted upon the breeze last night from Salem.

There were 1836 names on the voting list, and all but 113 were at the polls.

Benjamin Huntington, 81 years of age, voted the Republican ticket yesterday.

It is a damp, cold day when Massachusetts gives a man like Butler a second term.

The agony is over at last and even the defeated candidates feel better and breathe easier.

The latest returns with only one town to hear from give Robinson 10,087 majority.

If we have said anything to hurt anyone's feelings during this campaign, we freely forgive them.

There were lots of split tickets in the field, but the governor's skin ticket was kept in the background.

There are evidences that Litchman will go into convulsions over the defeat of his "peoples" candidate.

In 1876 I said to the Essex County Republicans "I want no more of you."—Gen. Butler at Newton.

One of our business men was around this morning with his buggy decorated with flags. He was happy.

It was a pleasant sight to see so many young men last Tuesday casting their first vote against Butler rule.

There was one thing that perhaps did more to defeat Butler than any other—he did not have enough votes.

Most of the defeated candidates will live, though the strain has been hard on their nervous system, to a great extent.

Butler will break loose about to-morrow and then we shall know with what grace the "people's" candidate bears his defeat.

The Selectmen had the vote of the town all counted before 8 o'clock last night. Last year it was several hours later.

Two hundred dollars was raised at the Republican headquarters by passing around the hat last night to celebrate the victory.

The election of Hon. Geo. D. Robinson is in no sense a Republican victory, but a victory of the people against Butlerism.

There was one Greenbacker in this town who had courage enough to vote for Arnold. It was the only Greenback vote thrown.

The schools of Massachusetts have always been the pride of the state,—no wonder that she has elected a schoolmaster for Governor.

The poultry market is in danger of decline. The Democrats in this state have a fine assortment of roosters that they want to dispose of.

"I am going to be elected and I mean what I say."—Gov. Butler.

When, Mr. Butler, when? Please give us the date—year and month.

Now that the election is over it will do no harm to say: The republican canvass gave Peabody to Butler by 200 votes. Not so far out of the way, eh?

One man scratched all the names from his ticket yesterday but Henry P. Moulton and Jeremiah T. Mahoney.—He probably knew who he wanted to vote for.

"Gov. Butler is relieved from active duty and ordered to Lowell"—that was the orders from head-quarters early in 1865; it is the orders from head-quarters in 1883.

The election was red-hot in this immediate vicinity. In fact it was so excruciatingly colorific that not a few of our sporting men got their fingers burnt—so to articulate.

A great many people think that Esau was green to trade his birthright for a minute pudding, but his swap would pay twice as well as the Democratic trade with the Greenbackers in this county for nothing.

Though the result of the election may have surprised some of the more sanguine Republicans in town, there were others who never count their chickens before the Democrats get through voting.

The employes of J. B. Thomas belonging to the winning party in the election were promised $25.00 by Mr. Thomas. As Robinson won, the Republicans get it—and they have turned it in towards to-night's celebration.

Wanted to throw the last vote: Martin Brophy after lingering around the polls yesterday all day, walked up and threw a Democratic ticket about three minutes before they closed, with the remark, "There goes the last ballot for Benjamin F. Butler and Aaron F. Clark."

The Republicans of this town can be assured that Col. C. T. Batchelder was not defeated for want of work on the part of the managers of the campaign. They did all that anybody could do for the success of the entire ticket. The result shows that no man in the town on a straight Republican ticket could have at this time defeated Mr. Clark.

The grandest feature of our election contests hardly impresses us, we are so used to it. It is that after the hottest fight, every one acquiesces without a moment's hesitation, the moment the result of the vote is declared. The victorious party has his little joke and does his crowing, and in a few days everything runs as smooth as ever.

About a week previous to election, John Heylingberg and Tommie Murray made a bet that whichever way the election went, the defeated one was to wheel the winner from the Square to the Big Tree. Robinson being elected Murray was the loser and the conditions of the bet were partly carried out this afternoon. Mr. Heylingberg, wearing an old white "cady" with the name Geo. D. Robinson printed on it, and enveloped in an American flag, got into the wheelbarrow and Murray with a cap with Butler's name on it, started from the Square, followed by a crowd of about 200 persons and a number of teams. A crowd of roughs made things decidedly unpleasant for the rider by a constant shower of overripe eggs, stones and sticks, until Mr. Heylingberg could stand it no longer, and on the return trip, just this side of the Big Tree, Heylingberg gave it up and returned to the Square in Wilson's depot carriage. Mr. Heylingberg has taken out a warrant against the ringleader in the assault, the notorious Jake Powell.

It is a rare thing to find an advertising agent who not only looks after the interest of his customers, the advertisers, but that of the publisher as well,—a man who knows the value of advertising from experience in newspaper work. Such a man is C. S. Gosse, No. 44 Kilby street, Boston. Mr. Gosse has had a practical experience in every department of newspaper work, from newsboy to editor, in addition to some ten years in the business department of a newspaper, and as an advertising agent; this experience enables him to intelligently appreciate the importance of any demand he must needs make of the newspapers, and at the same time fully understand the wants of his customer.

Next week will be observed by the Young Men's Christian Association as a week of prayer.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

The opening lecture of the Peabody Institute Course was delivered last evening by Hon. Wm. Parsons, of London. He announced his subject to be Richard Brinsley Sheridan. The speaker referred to the common literature of this country and the old world and sketched graphically the family of Sheridan by reference to Boswell's work, written in a conversational style, in which Thos. Sheridan the actor figured. He was the father of the subject of the lecture. Mrs. Sheridan was also an authoress and actress of some note, so that he sprung from tragedy on his father's side and comedy on his mother's. After an academical education, to which he was recommended by his mother as an incorrigible dunce, he set out for the bar. It was composed of all sorts of men, who made it a stepping-stone—a probation—for political and literary life. This was just the place for young Sheridan, and the lecturer gave several instances of his genius in this direction. He did not continue long here, and a love-suit next engaged his attention. His life may be divided into acts, like a drama. His early youth had passed away, and Bath was pictured to the audience. Old Sheridan had retired in his age from the stage, and had entered the lecture field. Into this town have moved a musical family by the name of Linley, one of whom, a beautiful young lady and the possessor of a fortune of $30,000—sung at his lectures. This money she had obtained from a breach of promise suit, brought by her father against an aged gentleman of wealth, and young Sheridan became as much in love with her as ever afterwards he was in debt. He wrote poetry to her, which the lecturer considered a healthy sign and persuaded her to run away and be married. On his return he was challenged to a duel, and fought two with jealous lovers of his wife. He now gives up the bar, and takes up the pen. His first work, which is the most popular play since Shakespeare's time, was the "Rivals"—a dramatic version of his own life. Captain Matthews, with whom he fought a duel, figured largely. The lecturer read several selections from this play as illustrative of his wit. Shortly after this Garrick the actor retired from the management of the Drury Lane Theatre and he let his mantle fall on young Sheridan, who had both wit and humor. It was a speculation, and from this time he lost both conscience and power, and found himself involved in a vortex from which nothing could extricate him. In the midst of this entanglement he wrote "School for Scandal." He then closed his literary labors and entered parliament where he remained over 25 years. It was a most critical time.—the reign of George III. It was the time of the difficulty with the United Colonies, and Sheridan protested against any interference by the mother country with our rights. He also protested against interference in the French Revolution. Sheridan's speeches about that time are the best in the literature of England. He had now reached the zenith of his power. He fell into bad company, that of George IV, and had recourse to the cup which does not cheer. Shortly after a fire in Drury Lane theatre destroyed not only his property but his hopes, and was the closing scene of his life. Mr. Parsons was listened to with close attention, by a house which about two-thirds filled the hall.

The grand torchlight parade of the Republicans last Friday evening was a big success. The procession was made up as follows:

Salem Brass Band,
Ralph Reinwahl, leader, 25 pieces
Major Edward W. Abbott, commanding.
Aids—William H. Hildreth, Adjutant; William W. Pinder, Quartermaster; Surgeon, F. S. Worcester: Captains Beckett, Lakeman, Foster, Clark, Randall and Warner, Garfield Guards, 50 men, with torches and transparency.
Robinson and Ames Battalion, 260 men, with torches.
Newburyport Cadet Band, 25 pieces.
Major Yack and Aids.
Newburyport Flambeau Battalion, 144 men, with flambeaus and a uniform consisting of linen dusters and white helmets.

All along the line of march they were greeted with illuminated houses and fireworks. Thousands of people were on the streets, while hundreds followed the procession. The whole affair was a grand success and will long be remembered as an unusual event for an "off year."

By the terms of the will of the late Lydia P. Proctor, widow of the late Abel Proctor, the following public bequests have been made: South Church receives $2500, the income to be devoted to paying for seats for the poor. The American Home Missionary Society of New York, $1000. The Danvers Female Benevolent Society, $500. Thomas E. Proctor is the executor.

Torrent Hose Company No. 3 have had their house newly painted. It looks very neat.

The night before election was a scene of jollification and political excitement rarely seen here. Both republicans and democrats had a torchlight procession, and while the republicans were marching to the big tree, the democrats came marching down Main street close upon their heels,—so close, in fact, that the fine music of their band was appreciated by the rear ranks of the Republican battalion. Shortly before seven o'clock the members of the old Garfield Guard and the Robinson and Ames battalion gathered in Temperance Hall, and about the same time a mounted battalion which was to escort Hon. Geo. D. Robinson to the Town Hall were seen on the streets. About 7.30 the procession formed on Main street, the Guards being under command of Major E. W. Abbott, and the whole under the command of Col. C. T. Batchelder. They marched down Main street to Holten, through Holten and Aborn to Washington, down Washington to Main street and thence to the Salem line, where they awaited the arrival of the carriage containing Mr. Robinson. After a stay of half an hour or more, he was taken under escort, and amid a blaze of red fire and rockets the march was continued to the Town Hall. The hall was instantly packed—and Hon. B. C. Perkins presided. Mr. Robinson spoke earnestly for half an hour, his subject being Tewksbury. He covered the entire ground in a plain, convincing speech, showing that by the report of the Board of Health, Lunacy and Charity, signed by the entire Board, including Gov. Butler's adherents, and approved by His Excellency, the charges had been pronounced false, and the previous report of Mrs. Leonard was pronounced true. This, Mr. Robinson said, takes Tewksbury entirely out of the campaign. Three ringing cheers were given for him at the close, and he retired shortly before 10 o'clock, to be driven to Beverly where he was to make the closing speech of the campaign. Afterwards speeches were made by Hon. George G. Crocker and Gen. E. W. Hincks. The rally closed about 11 o'clock. Meanwhile the democratic torchlight procession had formed on Foster street, and headed by the Lynn brass band marched over the following route: Main, Grove, Walnut, Central, Endicott, Warren, Central to Square, Main, Washington, Lynn, to County, countermarch down Washington to Mason, Winter, Spring and Foster streets to headquarters, where a collation was served.

A good stove or a furnace is an important acquisition to the house now, and we are glad to commend to the notice of our readers the establishment of Caskin Bros., on the Square. They have everything in this line that can be desired, among which we noticed an elegant Hub Royal parlor stove, which is really an ornamental piece of casting. Then there is the New Hub range, a good heater and guaranteed to do excellent service. This firm are agents in the town for the Magee ranges and furnaces, which are so well and favorably known. The new Magee range for 1883 is far ahead of anything this firm have put on the market, and is offered by Caskin Bros. for $35, with a complete set of furniture. A novelty in the way of an automatic opening top, on a New Hub Heater, attracted our attention, and Messrs. Caskin will be pleased to show it to any of our readers who will take pains to call at their store. Everything in the line of stove furnishings or kitchen ware can be found at this store, and we cordially recommend the firm as worthy of an abundant patronage, which we are pleased to know they are receiving.

The Teachers' Institute at Danvers last Friday was very generally attended by the teachers of our schools. The exercises were under the general direction of Secretary Dickinson, who was assisted by Messrs. Walton, Prince and Martin of the State Board of Education. The following topics were very interestingly and practically treated: Principles of Teaching, Reading, Geography, Arithmetic, Physics, Morals. The other towns represented by teachers, were Middleton, Wenham, Topsfield, Boxford and Lynnfield. All out of town teachers were entertained at dinner by the good people of Danvers. A pleasant incident of the meeting was a brief talk by the veteran educator, Hon. John D. Philbrick, whose home is now in Danvers. Altogether the meeting was a pleasant and profitable one. Thirty such are to be held in different parts of the State, and if they could be generally attended by our citizens, there would be fewer complaints and criticisms of our schools and the work of the State Board.

The meanest phase of political partisanism, is the attempt to bulldoze a business man by withdrawing patronage and endeavoring to injure his business, because he doesn't coincide with you. That is what some mean-souled demagogues are trying to do in Woburn.—Woburn Advertiser.

The Suburban Press Association has voted to hold monthly meetings in Boston, and a committee has been appointed to select subjects for discussion.

We regret to be called upon this week to announce the death of Mrs. Michael Nugent, which sad event took place at her residence, Fulton street, last Wednesday evening, Oct 31st. The deceased was born in Tallow County, Waterford, Ireland, Aug. 8, 1828, and was aged 55 years, 2 months and 23 days. Mrs. N. was a resident of Peabody 30 years. She had been sick with brain disease for some months past. Of gentle and lovable disposition, one of the chief aims of her life was to render those around her happy. She was esteemed and beloved by all with whom she was brought in contact. As a wife and mother she was dutiful and considerate. As a friend and neighbor, she was kind and generous. As a Christian she was particularly edifying, for her life was an exemplification of the teachings of her religion. The funeral took place last Friday morning at St. John's church. A High Mass of Requiem was offered for the repose of her soul. The rich casket was covered with flowers and handsome floral designs, and the services were solemn and impressive. After the services the remains were borne to the Catholic Cemetery. She leaves a daughter and two sons to mourn her loss; it is only eight months since their father's death.

To-night the republicans of this town will celebrate the victory of Robinson and Ames by another torchlight procession. A calvacade similar to Monday night will be an important feature, and it is expected that a larger number will turn out on horseback. The Salem Cadet Band, 25 pieces, has been engaged and the procession will move over the following route: Form on the Square, right resting on Lowell street, march up Lowell to Forrest Court, countermarch Lowell to Endicott, Endicott, Central, Tremont, Wallis, Elm, Central, Main to Aborn; countermarch Main to Holten, Holten, Aborn, Washington to Trask's Lane; countermarch Washington, Main to Park, Park, Spring, Winter, Oak, Foster, Franklin, Chestnut, Lowell to the Square, where they will be dismissed. Col. Cyrus T. Batchelder will be in command of the cavalcade.

The Committee on the new Town Hall have decided to formally dedicate the same, Thursday, Nov. 22d. In the afternoon the dedication exercises will take place, consisting of the Report of the Committee and the delivery of the building to the town, and an address by Hon. Alfred A. Abbott. In the evening there will be a grand illumination of the building, and a concert by the Salem Cadet Band, assisted by prominent vocalists. To these exercises the public will be invited, subject, as we understand, to the same restrictions as are in force at the free lectures in the Peabody Institute.

Last Saturday afternoon the West Peabody Farmers' Club held a glass ball shoot. A prize of a silver badge was offered, and was won by Herbert Kennedy, his score being 22 out of 25. He will be presented with the prize at the meeting of the club next Friday evening by Mr. J. Fred Ingraham. The prize is of solid silver in the form of a Maltese cross suspended on a ribbon. In the center of the cross is a glass ball. The winner's name is engraved on the back as will also be the name of the successive holder. The shoots are held annually and the winner holds it a year. Only members of the club, and residents of West Peabody can compete for it.

The store of B. B. Humphrey on Washington street, was burglarized last Saturday night and six dollars' worth of tobacco and two dollars in change were taken. An entrance was effected by breaking a pane of glass in a window in the rear and crawling through between iron bars. Quite a piece was cut from the panel of the door showing the attempt was first made in that way. The burglar must have been badly cut as the money draw and window were besmeared with blood. Mr. Humphrey found a jack-knife near the window the next morning.

After the railroad authorities have changed the time standard, will the legal time be different, or will the courts rule that a man subpœnaed to attend at 9 need not appear until 15 minutes and 44.5 seconds past 9? and will we have to go to bed and get up, and eat our dinners and do lots of other routine things, almost sixteen minutes late?

The cloak and suit room of Almy, Bigelow & Webber is just now the object of special admiration among the ladies. Their garments are all well made, and of the best styles in New York and Boston. It is a popular place to trade and we are glad to note that it is appreciated by careful and shrewd buyers in Essex County.

A horse driven by Michael Garrity was attacked with blood disease one day last week. While caring for the horse, some of the diseased matter lodged under one of his finger nails and the next day his finger began to swell, and it was feared that blood poisoning would ensue. A physician was called and the patient is doing nicely.

BOOTS AND SHOES
To be Retailed at Manufacturers' Prices.
CARD TO THE PUBLIC.
With an enormous Stock comprised in our Wholesale House, (formerly occupied by the New England Clothing Co.) and our two Retail Stores, 84 Market Street, and 23 Market Square, we have a stock to draw from five times larger than all the other Boot and Shoe Stores in Lynn combined.
Last year the great Dry Goods Jobbers and Retailers of Boston advertised to sell their enormous stock direct to the consumer at prices never before quoted in this country; and the liberal manner in which the people responded to their offerings, (thousands visiting their stores in a single day,) convinced us that if the same inducements were offered by a large Wholesale Shoe House having equal advantages, that the people, ever alive to their own interests, would respond in a like manner. Being guided by our convictions.
Our doors will be closed and business suspended from Thursday evening, Nov. 8, until Saturday morning, Nov. 10, to mark down stock and prepare for the Most Stupendous Shoe Sale this or any other city ever offered.
Let the People Rejoice, for the Work shall be Complete!
All Previous Mark-Down Sales will Sink into Insignificance!
No 25-cent Shoes, on paper, and all gone when you come to buy. No flimsy excuses made before the Printer's Ink is dry: "All gone," "Haven't your size," "Too late." No such nonsense. It wont do.

ALL FOR NOTHING.

WHY THE DOCTOR WAS DISGUSTED, AND WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN DONE WITHOUT HIM.

"Well, wife," said Dr. E.—, as he entered his house, which was situated in a cosy village in central New York, "I have got back from a long and dreary ride away down among the mountains, and all to no purpose whatever. The messenger said the man wouldn't live till morning, when the fact is he had only an ordinary attack of colic. If the simpletons had only had sense enough to put a BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER on his stomach he would have been all right in an hour or two. But some folks are slow to learn, added the old physician, swallowing the cup of steaming tea which his wife had just poured for him.

Doctor E— was right, yet people do learn, even though slowly. The rapid increasing use of Benson's plaster proves this beyond question, and the good doctors are certain to be saved much of their needless toil. In all diseases capable of being affected by a plaster Benson's acts efficiently and at once. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the centre. Price 25 cents. Miscellaneous.

HOW A HOME MAY BE STARTED.—As a rule wealth is the result of industry, of economy, and attention to business; and, as a rule, poverty is the result of idleness, extravagance, and inattention to business, though to these rules there are thousands of exceptions. The man who has wasted his time, who has thrown away his opportunities, is apt to envy the man who has not. For instance, here are six shoemakers working in one shop. One of them attends to his business; you can hear the music of his hammer late and early; he is in love, it may be, with a girl on the next street; he has made up his mind to be a man, to succeed, to make somebody else happy, to have a home; and while he is working, in his imagination he can see his own fireside, with the light falling upon the faces of wife and child. The other five gentlemen work as little as they can, spend Sunday in dissipation, have the headache Monday, and, as a result, never advance. The industrious one the one in love, gains the confidence of his employer, and in a little while he cuts out work for these other fellows. The first thing you know he has a shop of his own, the next a store, because the man of reputation, the man of character, the man of known integrity, can buy all he wishes in the United States upon credit. The next thing you know he is married, and he has built him a house. He is happy and his dream is realized. After a while the same five shoemakers, having pursued the old course, stand on the corner some Sunday when he drives by. He has a carriage, his wife sits by his side, her face covered with smiles, and they have two children, their faces beaming with joy, and the blue ribbons fluttering in the wind. And thereupon these five shoemakers adjourn to some neighboring saloon and pass a resolution that there is an irrepressible conflict between capital and labor.

NO DOGS ALLOWED IN THE CARS.—It happened the other day on the Lehigh Valley Railroad. The train had just left Easton, and the conductor was making his first round, when he observed a small white dog with a bushy tail and bright black eyes sitting cosily on the seat beside a young lady so hand some that it made his heart roll over like a lop-sided pumpkin. But duty was duty, as he remarked, in his most deprecatory manner:

"I am very sorry, madam, but it is against the rules to have dogs in the passenger cars."

"O my, is that so?" and she turned up two lovely brown eyes at him beseechingly. "What in the world will I do? I can't throw him away. He is a Christmas present from my aunt."

"By no means, miss. We'll put him in a baggage car, and he'll be just as happy as a robin in spring."

"What! put my nice white dog in a nasty, stuffy, dusty baggage car!"

"I'm awfully sorry, but the rules of this company are as inflexible as the laws of Medes and them other fellows you know. He shall have my overcoat to lie on, and the brakeman shall give him grub and water every time he opens his mouth."

"I just think it's awful mean, so I do; and I know somebody will steal it, so they will," and she showed a half-notion to cry that nearly broke the conductor's heart; but he was firm, and sang out to the brakeman, who was playing a solo on the stove:

"Here, Andy, take this dog out to the baggage car, and tell 'em to take the best of care of him."

The young lady pouted but the brakeman reached over and picked up the canine as tenderly as though it was a two-week's-old baby, but as he did so a strange expression came over his face like a wave of cramp-colic, and he said hastily to the conductor:

"Here, just hold him a minute till I put this poker away," and he went out at the car door and held on to the brake wheel, shaking like a man with ague.

The conductor no sooner had his hand on the dog than he looked around for a hole to fall through. "Wh-wh-why, this is a worsted dog?"

"Yes, sir," said the little miss, demurely. "Didn't you know that?"

"No, I'm awfully sorry to say I didn't know that;" and he laid the Christmas dog down in the owner's lap, and walked out on the platform, where he stood half an hour in the cold, trying to think of a hymn tune to suit the worst sold man on the Lehigh Valley road.

The public debt was reduced nearly fifteen millions of dollars during September.

BEATEN BY WIND AND RAIN.

SAILORS ON THE SEA AND LABORERS ON THE LAND—HELP FOR THE LARBOARD WATCH.

"There is no telling the force of the wind; and the height and rush of the sea was simply appalling. When Cornish, the boatswain, and myself came down from aloft, after furling the main royal, we were wet through and half dead from the hard toil and the exposure."

So said the mate of the "Grosvenor," when relating the incidents of an Atlantic cyclone, after nearly all the crew had mutinied and left the ship in boats to escape punishment.

Mechanics who labor upon lofty buildings; carpenters, masons, painters and bricklayers, may be called a kind of shore sailors, and that their numbers are not more largely decimated by accident and disease is a marvel. Mr. Jabez Rogers, tuck pointer, house painter, etc., of No. 608 Madison street, Chicago, over a pipe and autumn fire, said to your correspondent:

"No, I am only a young man yet—thirty-five, that's all; but the kind of work I do tells on a fellow's looks and constitution Last Spring I was about run down with overwork and exposure. I had to give up doing any work myself, and just made out to oversee my men in a sort of half-and-half way. I thought I was played out for good and all. I was racked with a cough, stupified with a cold, and torn and disabled with Rheumatism. Do? I took PARKER'S GINGER TONIC and it cured me. Those three words tell the story—it cured me."

To all persons subject to risk from exposure, PARKER'S GINGER TONIC will commend itself. It purifies the Blood, incites the torpid Liver to healthy activity, and opens the pores of the skin. This is the season of outdoor perils to health. Keep the Tonic near you. Prices 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Hiscox & Co., Chemists, New York.

Probably no better division of time has ever been made than into three equal periods of eight hours each—eight hours given to business, eight to reading and improvement, and the remaining eight to sleep. For myself, I find that nine or ten hours' sleep in a single night will cure me of all trifling maladies with which, from time to time, I may be afflicted. Some extraordinary advice has been given by certain distinguished persons with reference to the time devoted to sleep, but each writer falls into the common blunder of applying a rule to all that which he finds good in his own case. Bishop Taylor advises three hours. Wesley suggests six as the least time that will answer. He declares that during his life he never knew any one to retain vigorous health even for a year, with a less quantity than six hours, and he thought that women required more than men. Excess of sleep is very bad in its influence; produces dullness of mind and body, corpulency and disposition to apoplexy; hence Galen calls sleep the brother of death, and says nothing is more pernicious when carried to excess. The Americans should go to bed at 9 o'clock and rise between 5 and 6. I do not mean to say that circumstances may never justify their sitting up until midnight, or later, but I am simply interpreting the voice of physiology. If the average American, with the narrow chest and small vitality, would retire at 9 o'clock he would live some years longer, and each year would afford him more happiness and ability to work. — Dio Lewis' Monthly.

The bald-headed man is happy now,
His nap he takes in peace,
His poll to use as skating rink,
Pestif'rous flies surcease.

DENVER DOINGS.—Mr. J. A. McBeth, Pacific Express Office, Denver, Colo., was cured by St. Jacobs Oil of an excruciating pain in the neck, and also toothache. One application did the work.

If boots are well oiled once a month with castor oil and a small quantity of lampblack, they will be both drier and warmer. The latter stops up the pores in the leather and excludes wind as well as moisture.

I would recommend Ely's Cream Balm to anyone having Catarrh or Catarrhal Asthma. I have suffered for the last five years so I could not lie down for weeks at a time. Since I have been using the Balm I can lie down and rest nicely. I thank God that you ever invented such a medicine. FRANK P. BURLEIGH, Farmington, N. H.

For 25 years I have been afflicted with Catarrh so that I have been confined to my room for two months at a time. I have tried all the humbugs in hopes of relief, but with no success until I met with an old friend who had used Ely's Cream Balm and advised me to try it. I procured a bottle and from the first application I found relief. It is the best remedy I have ever tried. W. C. MATTHEWS, Justice of the Peace, Shenandoah, Iowa.

A boy stood on the gallery floor,
At the naughty female show,
And cast his earnest glances o'er
Bald headed sin below.

Yet dared not forward go,

First in the foremost row.

MRS. C. W. CHAMBERLIN,

STATE AND ARK ST., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—HER GOOD, KIND WORDS WILL DO MUCH FOR THE AFFLICTED.

Mrs. Chamberlin is the wife of C. W. Chamberlin, an employe in the United States Armory at Springfield, Mass. She says: "Every Spring I have been, for some time past, more or less troubled with nervous debility and weakness. Some years I've been completely run down. My physician has recommended various strengthening and blood medicines, but I never received any permanent benefit until I tried Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. It was recommended to me by Mrs. Newcombe, on State St. I think it a wonderful medicine to give one strength and enliven a person. I have recommended it to family after family among my acquaintances in Springfield, Mass., and FAVORITE REMEDY has done a great deal of good wherever it has been placed. I have a sister, Mrs. Harmon, 29 Tremont St., Lowell, Mass., who was troubled with nervous weakness and loss of strength and appetite, but by using Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY her health was completely restored. I consider it an excellent medicine. Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is used extensively among the Armory men here."

NO, SIR!"

A Scotch minister once said no woman could bear pain as well as man. That is not so. The fact is generally the other way. Mrs. Edward Meyers of Rondout, N. Y., submitted to the operation of the removal of her hand by amputation, without taking ether, or moving a muscle or uttering a groan. Dr. Kennedy, also of Rondout, N. Y., who performed the operation, said he never saw such heroism. The lady's disease was erysipelas, and afterwards the Doctor gave his FAVORITE to cleanse the blood. Mrs. Meyers is now well and strong.

"Great danger is often feared less den little ones," says Uncle Mose. "A cow'll git outen de way quicker fur a horse den she will fur a railroad train."

The consciousness of wrongdoing is to the soul what a forgotten peg in a boot is to the foot. You can't be happy unless you do something about it.

The girl who is admired for her splendid figure when walking along the street is not the one that a sculptor should always select as a model for the Greek Slave.

"The first woman didn't wear earrings, remarked Brother Talmage at a late conference meeting. "No," remarked a quiet little man in the corner, "nor anything else."

"Dead broke, eh?" queried a man of a seedy-looking individual whom he saw passing into a shop adorned with three golden balls. "No," was the curt reply, "pawnbroke."

Did you ever notice how suddenly a timid woman who is humming an operatic air will switch off on to a religious hymn when a storm comes up and she hears the first clap of thunder?

The Atlanta Constitution speaks of a "one-horse actress." We do not know much about one-horse actresses, but we have seen a one hoarse prima donna trip up a whole opera company.

Caution in the premises: "Hadn't I better pray for rain to-day, deacon?" said a Binghamton minister on Sunday. "Not to-day, dominie, I think," was the prudent reply; "the wind isn't right."

Impecunious party: "Through to Chicago without change, eh?' Well, I don't see as that is an inducement for me. I ain't got any change here. What's the use of going so fur if I don't get nothing?"

A "sasiety" gusher, in telling where she was going for the Summer, said: "I'm going to Newport, and I'm going to take my maid, my nurse, my two dogs, my children, and—and, oh yes, my husband."

"Ma," said Mary Parvenu, "they say young Mr. Fiddlestick embezzled—what's that?" "Oh," said Mrs. Parvenu, "it's sorter embroidery on paper like what artists does in Rome and other French cities."

An exchange says: "A Mississippi dog bit off a boy's nose and swallowed it." This shows the thoughtfullness of the dog. If he had swallowed the nose without biting it off it must have proved fatal to the boy.

"Well, may I hope then, dearest, that at some time I may have the happiness of making you my wife?" "Yes, I hope so, I am sure," she replied. "I am getting tired of suing fellows for breach of promise."

In reply to the Czar's query of one of the maids of honor as to how she enjoyed the coronation, the reply was: "Oh, ever so much your Majesty; I hope we shall soon have another." The maid is summering in Siberia.

"Ice cream—one dollar per gal." "Well," said a down-Easter, as he walked into the saloon, "that's a pretty steep price to charge for one gal, but, Maria, I'll see you through, no matter what it costs. Here's a dollar, waiter; ice cream for the gal."

Priest—"Pat, I understand you are going to be married again." Disconsolate widower—"Yis, your riv'rence." Priest—"But your wife, Pat, has only been dead two weeks." "Yis, your riv'rence, but, sure, ain't she as dead now as she ever will be?"

Before cutting a man's head off in China, the authorities considerately make him drunk. The editor of the Rochester Post-Express, who knows what he is talking about, says: "The beauty of this system is that a man can get intoxicated without having a head on him the next morning."

The young lady to whom her lover sang "Darling Kiss My Tears Away," was just leaning out in the moonlight for that purpose when a No. 12 bulldog happened around the corner. Talk about your "unkissed kisses," there was a whole backyard full of them while the town clock was striking one.

A Boston lady who has just moved to this city was complaining of her house. A neighbor asked her what the trouble was. "I suffer terribly from insomnia," replied the Boston lady. "Strange," said the neighbor, "in a new house, too; you'll have to get a trap." She thought insomnia was Bostonese for rats.

Miss Edith has just favored the company with a brilliant performance on the violin. Miss Edith's ma (to her neighbor): "I do so admire the violin. Your daughter plays, I suppose." He'd been waltzing with his host's ugly, elder daughter, and was in a corner repairing damages. Here he was espied by his would-be papa-in-law. "She is the flower of my family, sir," said the latter. Scientific.

The Dutch Government is not to give the prize of 20,000 guilders for the discovery of a "Northeast Passage" to the intrepid Swedish explorer Baron Nordenskjold. It is refused because the route is rather a scientific than a commercial one, and it was for the discovery of the latter that the reward was offered.

The scintillation of stars, Montigny asserts, increases during auroras, the increase being very marked in Winter. The difference is most noticeable in the northern stars. When a magnetic disturbance is indicated at the Brussels Observatory the frequency of the scintillation becomes greater with the intensity of the storm. Considerable obscurity hangs about this whole subject.

This is a new German method for preparing a pressed enamel upon glass. A mixture of dry enamel, thick pine oil, and dammar lac is laid on the glass in a semi-dried state. After drying the drawing is pressed in. The enamel is then burned. In this way it is possible to reproduce the forms of figures in slight relief, the feathers of birds, the hairs of animals, and the veins of leaves.

Prof. O. C. Marsh—see August number of the Journal of the Franklin Institute—is confirmed in his opinion that the footprints in the sandstone in the yard of the State prison, near Carson, Nev., had not been made by the human foot as had been supposed but by some huge Edentates. He states that the important fact has lately been determined that some of the tracks show impressions of the fore feet.

Very little concussion was felt from the firing of the 80-ton guns by those managing them inside the new turret on Dover Pier. At the recent trial, battering charges were used. The only damage done by the monster ordinance during the firing was the scraping of some of the cement and the breaking of the glass of the light-house. Five rounds in all were discharged, but the test lasted two hours.

For preparing unglazed pottery to write upon it with ink this method has lately been invented: A whey is used, which is obtained by adding a small quantity of acid to skimmed milk, and separating the precipitate by filtration. The plates prepared for white pipe clay are impregnated with the nitrate and dried, and then it is quite as easy to write upon them as upon imperfectly sized paper. The process is simple enough.

Bricks impregnated at a high temperature with asphalt, are being successfully used in Berlin for street payment. By driving out the air and water with heat, bricks will take up from 15 to 20 per cent. of bitumen, and be porous, brittle material becomes durable and elastic under pressure. The bricks are then put endways on a beton bed and set with hot tar. It is said that the rough usage which the pavement made of these bricks will stand is astonishing.

A new blasting material is thus described: Two mixtures are prepared, the first consisting of 36.06 parts of potassium or sodium bisulphate, 28.60 parts of potassium nitrate, and 9.20 parts of glycerine, and the second one 50 to 65 parts of a chlorate and 45 to 50 parts of a body rich in carbon. The latter mixture on igniting produces heat enough to convert the glycerine in the first mixture into nitro-glycerine, which at once explodes. The carbonaceous material is saturated with concentrated solutions of the bisulphate, nitrate, and cholerate, and then dried. The mass is then mixed with glycerine and made into cartridges.

From a zoological paper by M. Michaud on the material collected and observations made by him in the valley of the Ogoone, in Central Africa, some interesting facts are given. The temperature is always constant at about 90° Fahrenheit. Maize, manioc, and tobacco are grown. Although the people are very peaceable they are very brave. The sheep have no wool, and but very little hair. In the forests there is a dark, fierce species of cattle found in great abundance, probably because the fear with which the natives regard them allows these animals to multiply without the restraint of the chase. There are no indigenous horses in the region.

A little more than a decade ago a new disease began to despoil the potato near Stavanger, Norway, and it has been steadily increasing in virulence year after year. Fungoid growths infest the stem, reducing its interior in the first place to a sort of pulp, and at last so prey upon the plant that the stems are mere hollow reeds which readily fall to the ground. The ripe germs of the fungus are about the size of a small bean, and when they remain in the earth all Winter they are found when the warm season commences sending out minute spores, which attack the plant before it shows itself on the surface. The ravages of this pest are most marked about the end of July and the beginning of August.

The Chevalier Frederic Franchett, engineer at Leghorn, says the Nature has referred M. de Parville to a curious passage in Galileo's "Dialogues," touching a possible early origin of the electric telegraph. In the dialogue Sagrado says that he calls to mind a man who wanted to sell him a secret which would give him the power by means of a certain sympathy of magnetized wires to speak to any one 2,000 or 3,000 miles off. The bargain, however, fell through, as the inventor would not try any shorter distance, and Sagrado declined to go to Cairoor Muscovy to try the experiment. The story is told in the last number of the Revue Scientifique. The reference given is page 97 of the First Day—Leghorn edition, 1874.

We don't say that all the bargains in the city are to be found at our establishment or that no one understands how to run a great retail store except ourselves.

But we do say that our assortments are so complete that there is scarcely anything you can ask for that we have not got on hand; that our prices are low because our

RENT AND OTHER EXPENSES ARE COMPARATIVELY SMALL

while our business is very large, we can afford to sell cheaply and we do it. All our departments are stocked with new, seasonable goods, our prices as a rule are lower than those charged elsewhere, and we are making this week several special offerings at remarkably low prices.

The annual fair of the Rockville Congregational Sabbath School was held on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons and evenings of last week. Besides the usual supply of fancy work to be had at such a place, there was a very fine display of aprons, for dress and domestic purposes. Supper was provided for all who desired to fill the "inner man;" the orthodox bean-pot, and the esthetic oyster-bowl being in greatest demand. Master Charles Harwood and Miss Anna Lord, of Lynn, gave some very pleasing selections of music, the former, who played the violin, being accompanied by the latter with the organ. There was disappointment on the second evening because the quartette advertised to sing failed to put in an appearance. A communication from them, stating their inability to be present, was not received until the day after, so that there was no opportunity to provide something instead of that which was advertised. In lieu of this, however, there was a hearty social impromptu sing of old-time songs which seemed to give satisfaction to all. The new vestry, with its appointments, proved to be a capital place for such occasions — light, cheerful and home-like. The fair was a financial success, netting $88. Great credit is due Mr. John N. Newhall, chairman of the committee of arrangements, for his efforts which resulted so satisfactorily.

The glad sound of the workman's hammer is heard once more at the church, giving promise of the completion of the edifice in the near future.

The "Do What We Can" mission circle held one of its charming public meetings in the Vestry, which was filled with an interested audience. The occasion was the fourth annual meeting. There was singing and recitations by the members of the circle, the chief exercise being a "Visit to Spain" under the guidance of Miss Short of Salem. Very pretty and touching was the contrast between the material and spiritual, as set forth by the children when, after describing the geographical and architectural wonders and beauties of Spain, they one by one repeated passages of Scripture relative to the Heavenly land, the Celestial City, and the Temple that is "eternal in the heavens." The exercise was prefaced by a brief but comprehensive sketch of the introduction of Bibles in Spain. The mission work in some of its most interesting phases was also touched upon. Altogether the service, so unique, was full of instruction and interest. The Circle closes a prosperous year. Aside from the good that has necessarily accrued to the members engaged in such an unselfish work, they have put over thirty dollars into the Treasury of the "Woman's Board," and have made a Missionary Quilt. The youngest member has been made a "Life Member" of the "Board." Miss Fannie Brown, as the President of the Circle, gave a report of the year's work which speaks well for the Circle in the past and gives encouraging hopes for its future. It is proposed to repeat the same exercise at West Peabody one week from next Sabbath evening.

Mr. Fred Wiggin has improved the looks of his house the past week by putting in four light windows.

The L. & B. Railroad Company have been busy the past two weeks relaying the track above S. K. Newhall's, and otherwise improving the road.

The new H. R. R. station was opened to the public last Sunday for the first time.

Mr. D. Haskell has had his yard around the block house graded, and made other needed improvements the past week.

Mr. Henry Larrabee had a very narrow escape from a serious accident last Wednesday. He had been out riding, and had got nearly to the house of Mrs. Putnam, on Lynnfield street, when the nut on one of the wheels came off, letting the axle drop to the ground. The horse started and ran to the stable, throwing Mr. L. out, breaking one of his fingers and cutting his head quite severely. The damage to the carriage and horse was very slight.

The estate of the late Hannah Galeucia, of Lynn street, had been sold to a Salem party who will occupy it immediately.

Mr. Arthur Raddin will occupy the farmhouse of his father, on Lynnfield street, as soon as it can be put in repair.

Mr. Besse has done a good job on Washington street by putting in two bridges across the sidewalk and running off the surplus water in Poor's field, so called.

The top mast on the pole in front of Hose 5 was lowered for the winter by William Mitchell, last Thursday.

Billy Hayes, an ardent supporter of Governor Butler, was too enthusiastic at the meeting in Danvers last Friday, and was told to keep quiet or leave.

SPARKS.

An alarm of fire was given Tuesday morning at 20 minutes of 2 o'clock for a fire in the dwelling house of Mr. C. Mahoney on Harris street. The department rallied promptly and soon had water on from the hydrant on Walnut street at the foot of Harris. Hose 4 got first water, Hose 1 next and Hose 3 following. The fire caught in the ell and was caused by a defective flue. The family got out by a narrow chance but did not save many of their things in that part of the house. The damage will be mostly by water and where the firemen had to cut away to get at the fire. We understand that there is a small insurance on the building. Hardly had the firemen got the hose changed and dry, put on the carriages, before another alarm was given at 10 minutes of 5, starting the boys in all directions. This however proved to be a false alarm and started from Hose 4's house caused by some one shouting on the street.

The horse on Hose 1 went through some of his fancy tricks again last night, such as laying down on the floor while in the harness and breaking the shaft off short. It would be a good deal cheaper to condemn that horse and buy a new one, for if he keeps on it will be necessary to have an extra pair of shafts for the hose carriage in the house all the time.

Last night's alarms show the need of some kind of fire alarm, so that the boys can tell within a mile of where the fire is, and the quicker the town puts in the Gamewell system the better it will be for the department.

There have been quite a number of changes in the department this week, among them being the resignation of Asst. Foreman John A. Hart, of steamer 1, and his withdrawal from the company. Mr. Hart has been a member of steamer one for a number of years and the department loses a good man.

Albert Price also withdraws from H. & L. 1, and probably Arthur Reed will be appointed in his place.

Ira Cheeney, of Hose 1, is able to be out on the street, and Monday came over to the square for the first time in six weeks.

Steamer two worked Monday afternoon at the brook on Endicott street, trying some old hose that had been relined. Everything worked satisfactory to the Chief Engineer.

Hose 4 had an oyster supper after the torchlight parade Monday night, and that is the reason they were on hand so promptly at the fire, as it was discovered by two men going home from that supper.

The whip is changed and Steamer one is on duty for the present month.

Hose three illuminated with a bonfire on Friday night for the Republicans, and again Monday night for the Democrats. No partiality up that way, which is as it should be.

President John F. Lovett of the Salem Relief Association, Engineer Arnold, and Wm. N. Andrews of the Salem department, were in town Sunday, putting out the notices of the sixth Concert and Ball of the Salem Relief Association at Mechanic Hall, Thanksgiving eve, Wednesday Nov. 28th. The music for the occasion will be furnished by the Salem Brass and string Band.

Most of the monthly meetings of the department were adjourned one week, on account of the parades. ZERO.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

This week is a week of French opera at the Park Theatre. Mlle. Marie Aimeé, the queen of comic opera, appears at this place for this week only. Our readers will take due notice thereof, and we have no doubt that the company will be greeted with good audiences. To-morrow evening "La Fille de Mme. Angot," will be given. Friday evening "La Jolie Parfumeuse," and at the Saturday matinee "Les Cloches de Corneville." In the evening "Le Coeur et la Main.' Next week Lawrence Barrett begins his annual engagement, an announcement which will be received with gratification.

It is unnecessary to remind our readers that the spectacle of Jalma, at the Boston Theatre, is attracting crowded houses. So much so that it is necessary for those who desire good seats to look out for them considerably in advance. The scenery has never been surpassed in this theatre, and the ballet is irresistible. A large and liberal outlay has been expended and it looks as if it was thoroughly appreciated by the patrons of this well known house. At every Saturday matinee large numbers of Peabody people are present,—in fact these matinees are a great convenience to out of town residents.

Edwin Booth begins at the Globe an engagement of two weeks duration, in which he will appear in a round of his popular characterizations. To-morrow and Friday he plays King Lear; Saturday afternoon, Richelieu; and in the evening the company, without Mr. Booth, will play "The Lady of Lyons." Next week Monday evening will be devoted to Othello; Tuesday, Iago; Wednesday and Thursday "Fool's Revenge;" Friday, "The Merchant of Venice," and Saturday, Iago.

The Salem Oratorio Society announces a course of unrivalled symphony and oratorio concerts in connection with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The course will begin with the presentation of the Elijah, Dec. 27, in which Mr. Georg Henschel will sing the part of Elijah. This will be followed by three symphony concerts, Jan. 23, Feb. 21, and March 13, and by an oratorio to be announced. Checks to be exchanged for reserved seats at a date to be announced, are now selling at Merrill & Mackintire's. The Oratorio Society deserves the hearty and cordial support of the Salem public for its musical enterprise.

Moulton & Johnson will present Herne's "Hearts of Oak" at Mechanic Hall, Friday evening. This play is highly spoken of by the press and the scenery is new and includes a view of "Marblehead Neck at Sunrise." Election is now over, and our readers will be ready for a good show, which they will certainly miss if they fail to see this.

PEABODY.

Now the campaign is over we want our correspondents to brace up and send in every item of news to be found.

David Hildreth, Proprietor of West End Hotel, Long Branch, N. J., was in town Monday, the guest of Wm. H. Hildreth.

Miss Florence Chandler is substituting for Miss Tufts at the Bowditch School during the illness of the latter's mother.

A large number of interested spectators watched a dog fight on the square, Monday afternoon, and seemed to enjoy it too.

Mrs. J. S. Tufts, who has been an invalid for some time, was stricken with paralysis last Tuesday. She is as comfortable as could be expected.

Mr. Henry C. Wilson, the hackman, was kicked in the leg by his horse yesterday and is considerably lame in consequence. No bones were broken.

Mr. Henry Wardwell, the well-known Counselor at Law, who has been confined to the house with pneumonia, has sufficiently recovered to be about his business.

The good order which was observed at the Town Hall last Monday evening, during Mr. Robinson's speech, was a noticeable event. Not a man left the hall—and a pin could have been heard to drop. Everybody was in earnest, and the only interruption was the loud applause which greeted every point which he made.

The Democrats held a meeting at the town hall last Friday evening, and were addressed by E. A. Alger of Cambridge and Henry F. Hurlburt of Lynn. Saturday evening the anti-fusion greenbackers held a meeting at the same place and were addressed by Geo. Dutton and T. A. Bland. Both meetings were largely attended.

AS FAR as heard from, Dr. Bland's side show to the greenback party received 39 votes in the entire state. Only 39 men willing to stand by the principles about which they so loudly prated! The rest of the party were merged with the democrats, and voted for Butler, who is doubtless as much of a greenbacker as anything, but no more of one than anything else. The reduced vote in this town shows conclusively the effect on that party, by the fusion. Last year their vote was 182 for Lieut. Governor—this year 64.

We desire our readers to note the card of Dr. W. J. Verge, No. 43 Market street, Lynn. Dr. Verge quotes very moderate prices for dental work, and we have the best of reason for knowing that all work entrusted to his care will be done in a satisfactory manner.

Poet's Corner.

An Incomplete Revelation.

BY RICHARD A. JACKSON.

While Quaker folks were Quakers still,
some fifty years ago,
When coats were drab and gowns were plain and speech was staid and slow,
Before Dame Fashion dared suggest a single friz or curl,
There dwelt, mid Penfield's peaceful shades, an old-time Quaker girl.

Ruth Wilson's garb was of her sect. Devoid of furbelows,
She spoke rebuke to vanity, from bonnet to her toes;
Sweet red bird was she, all disguised in feathers of the dove,
With dainty foot and perfect form and eyes that dreamt of love.

Sylvanus Moore, a bachelor of forty years or so,
A quaintly pious, weazened soul, with beard and hair of tow,
And queer thin legs and shuffling walk
and drawling, nasal tone,
Was prompted by the Spirit to make this maid his own.

He knew it was the Spirit, for he felt it in his breast
As oft before in meeting time, and, sure of his request,
Procured the permit in due form. On Fourth-day of that week
He let Ruth know the message true that he was moved to speak.

"Ruth, it has been revealed to me that thee and I shall wed,
I have spoken to the meeting and the members all have said,
That our union seems a righteous one,
which they will not gainsay,
So if convenient to thy views, I'll wed thee next Third day."

The cool possession of herself by friend
Sylvanus Moore,
Aroused her hot resentment, which by effort she forbore,— (She knew he was a goodly man, of simple, child-like mind,)
And checked the word "Impertinence!"
and answered him in kind;

"Sylvanus Moore, do thee go home and wait until I see
The fact that I must be thy wife revealed unto me."
And thus she left him there alone, at will to ruminat e,
Sore puzzled at the mysteries of Love,
Free Will, and Fate.—Century.

Two Saints Catherine.*

WRITTEN FOR THE BOSTON COMMONWEALTH.

When the dear mother passed from earth—
Sainted already in our love—
And into heaven's sweet rest had birth—
Then saint by right in rolls above—
We prayed that world might be more near,
So saints in heaven could greet us here.

Late answer to our fondest thought,
This infant saint, all heavenly wise,
Angel, in earthly orbit caught,
Heaven shining through her baby eyes,
Our elder saint in heaven's pure blisses
Is glad we worship thee with kisses.

O baby, sweet Saint Catherine!
That first saint we adore in thee,
Shall not her virtues all be thine?
And when thy fuller life we see,
Thine be her sweetly hallowed fame,
Heir of her sainthood and her name.

The Sunshine of the Heart.

You ask the boon of wealth and power,
To crown your envied name,
That earth should fling her choicest dower
Around your path to fame;
You ask to conquer in the strife—
Take then your chosen part;
I'd rather fold within my life
The sunshine of the heart.

I'd rather know how thus to win,
A balm from every pain,
Thus, even from the shade of sin,
Some purer strength to gain;
To live in hope, to trust in right,
To smile when shadows start,
To walk through darkness as through light
With sunshine in the heart.

Selected Story.

Paul Hampton's Good Fortune.

BY E. ANDERSON.

'Oh! Paul, don't you wish we were rich, like the family at Hill Lodge, and that papa could drive to town every day in his carriage as Mr. Rivers does? And there's Julian, too, only your own age, rides a horse now—he might have given you his little pony, it was very mean to sell it.'

'Sister, let us be thankful that our father is able to walk, and not a cripple like Mr. Rivers. Have courage and patience, little Sis; I hope soon to get a place and earn some money: then, when I grow to be a man, you are to be my little housekeeper. But here comes Julian, riding at full gallop down the hill; what brings him, I wonder, for we have not been very good friends of late.'

'Hallo, there!' cried Julian. 'Hold my horse while I come in for a few minutes.' Again he repeated the summons in a louder tone.

'Who are you calling to, Mr. Rivers?'

'To you, of course; you don't keep a groom, I guess.'

'We do not, sir, neither am I one; so when you condescend to ride down into the valley, attend to your horse yourself.'

Dora watched Julian as he alighted, and tied his horse to the garden gate. He was handsomely dressed in a velvet suit, with riding gloves and dainty little well-fitting boots; but he looked pale and sickly, for his appetite was pampered with rich, unwholesome food, and he was allowed to sit up until all hours of the night. Then she glanced at her brother. What a contrast! With his dark, handsome eyes and noble brow and cheek, browned by sun and exposure, even those coarse, home-made garments looked well upon his erect figure. 'I'll never wish for riches any more,' thought Dora.

'Puff, puff!' exclaimed Julian as he entered; 'how smothering it is this little room, with its low ceiling! Oh, Dora! I didn't see you in that dark corner.'

'Look you, sir,' cried Paul, indignantly, 'this is my father's dwelling, and as such, is sacred in my eyes. Stay without in the future, and do not come here to insult us.'

'Excuse me, Paul, for I did not intend to insult you,' and Julian held out his hand, 'I came to ask if you would go to town with me; I want a new riding-whip, and no end of things.'

'If you will walk there by the meadow and through the little wood I don't object, for I have some errands in town for mother.'

'Agreed, then; may I put up my horse somewhere until we return?'

'Yes, in the old barn; there is plenty of straw, and he will be quite safe. I'll assist you now, Julian, and any time when you treat me as your equal, and drop putting on airs.'

'All right, Paul. But what shall I bring you from town, Dora?' and Julian rattled a handful of silver dollars in his pocket.

'Nothing, thank you.' Dora Hampton was not a whit less proud than her brother.

The two boys followed the narrow footpath through the meadow, though almost hidden from their sight by the long, waving grass, Paul sometimes stopping to gather a few wild flowers, for the garden at Dale Cottage was not rich in floral ornaments. They did not wait to go around by the old bridge which spanned the little stream half a mile away, but drawing off their shoes and stockings waded through the water, sitting awhile to rest on the other side, and planning a fishing excursion for a future day.

The two companions soon reached the wide suberb of the principal street traversed in all directions by many others.

They visited one. Paul made the household purchases for his mother, and various others on Julian's account, who soon disposed of all his money.—'And now,' he said, 'I have not a cent left.'

'Precisely my case,' cried Paul, 'with this difference, that I started out without any of my own. Hallo, what's this?'

And the boy lifted something from beneath his feet.

'How lucky!' exclaimed Julian, 'just when our pockets are empty to find a pocket book, filled with money. Let's go halves on the spot; or, rather hurry on into the lane, and there count our treasure.'

'Our treasure—you had passed by and was not the finder, neither is it mine to divide.'

'I never heard of such stupidness! Do you really intend to restore that pocket book, if inquired for? No one saw you pick it up.'

'Yes, One did who sees all things; but I shall not count the money now; my father will do that when he comes home, and keep it until we find the owner.'

'And that owner reward you with his thanks, or perhaps a miserable five or ten dollar note.'

'I shall rejoice to have earned that amount honestly.'

The walk home was far less pleasant to the two boys; Julian all the way coveting a share of that newly-found treasure, and Paul grave and silent with the responsibility of his charge. They hurried on to the cottage, where Julian, uttering a hearty 'good-bye' mounted his horse and rode away.

Mr. Hampton held a situation as clerk in an office in town; he always went there early, but the following morning Paul accompanied him. They bought a paper and eagerly scanned the advertisements under the head of 'Lost,' and with a wildly beating heart, Paul read aloud: '$200 Reward!' then followed a description of the pocket book and contents. $200! He was breathless with excitement.

'This appears to be the property of Owen Wainwright, one of our leading merchants,' said Mr. Hampton; 'you shall take it to him, my boy, relating how and where you found it.'

It was not long before Paul returned, his handsome face glowing with pleasure. 'After inquiring my name, father,' said he, 'and your employment, Mr. Wainwright asked what I should do with the reward? I answered, give it to father, for he will know best what to do with it. So here it is, sir,' and Paul counted ten $20 bills.

'And a real godsend it is, Paul.'

'But stay—you have not heard all. Mr. Wainwright seemed pleased with my answer, and taking $25 more from his pocket book, gave it to me also, saying—'This, my honest, boy is for yourself.'—He next asked my age, and oh! father, I do believe my fortune's made, for I am to come again, bringing you with me, to-morrow morning, and he promised to give me a post of trust in his warehouse; and, father, on my way here I met old Miss Elmwood, who once had the school-house near our cottage, and she is going with me to the dry goods store to help me choose two pretty dresses for mother and Dora; and, dear father, try to get off with me this afternoon and we'll go home together, and have a real banquet in honor of this good luck.'

Oh, what a happy evening that was! The little cottage in the valley resounded with the children's songs and cheers, as Paul's 'banquet,' for so they called it, was partaken. I question if the great house on the hill was half so joyful a place.

It was wonderful what that $200 effected. It put a bright paper on the little parlor walls, and a new carpet over the parlor floor, so strewn with rosebuds and green leaves that one feared to crush them by walking on it. Trees and shrubs were planted in the garden, and flowers around the windows—oh! you would hardly know Dale Cottage now!

Even Julian Rivers is convinced that it was a far wiser, as well as more honorable course to restore the money, for Paul advances each year in his situation.

And dear little Dora is so proud of her brother! She will now and then remember a highly important commission, and write him a note, sending it by some one going to town, merely for the pleasure of seeing the direction, 'Paul Hampton care Owen Wainwright, Esq.'

'Here's another letter from your sweetheart, Paul,' said a fellow clerk, one day.

'It is from my own dear Sis,' was his reply, 'but if I meet with such another true, kind girl for a sweetheart, I shall think myself a lucky fellow.'

And so Paul keeps steadily upon his course with every prospect of future advancement, and with the brightest hopes of growing up to a noble manhood, in spite of his humble beginning. His employer places the greatest confidence in him, and Dora is justly proud of her brother. They have both learned the old maxim—Honesty is the best policy; for does not Paul owe all his bright prospects and ambition to that one little act of restoring the lost pocket book to its owner?

Brownson—"Well, I always make it a rule to tell my wife everything that happens." Smithkins—"Oh, my dear fellow, that's nothing. I tell my wife lots of things that never happen."

The Sweet By-and-By.

Dr. S. Fillmore Bennett, a practicing physician of Richmond, Ill., a small town south-east of Lake Geneva, was visited and conversed with by a Chicago News reporter, with reference to the authorship of the words and music of that remarkably popular Christian hymn called "The Sweet By-and-By." Dr. Bennett is forty-five years old, and the father of a considerable family, including a son who is a recent graduate of Rush Medical College. In stature, the doctor is of medium height, and quite spare. He is thin-visaged, wears a thin mustache and goatee, and is not of a very light complexion. He has a lock of hair, slightly gray, overhanging his brow, which gives him the look of a person with the poetical faculty. In his conversation, he is clear, practical, serious and positive. He said:

'The story of the origin of the hymn, The Sweet By-and-By, is a short one and soon told. From 1861 to 1871 I resided in Elkhart, Wis., where I kept an apothecary store, and during that period was associated with Joseph P. Webster, a music teacher, in the production of musical works, I composing the words and he the music. Our first publication was the 'Signet Ring,' our second 'The Beatitudes,' our third 'The Sunday School Cantata,' and our fourth and last, 'The Great Rebellion.' It was in the fall of 1864, when we were at work on 'The Signet Ring,' that we composed the 'Sweet By-and-By.' It was composed for that work, and published first in it. And this was the way we happened to compose it: Webster was an extremely sensitive and melancholy man and very prone to think that others had slighted him. He was always imagining that some friend had spoken to him coolly and then dropped into bottomless despondency about it until some casual meeting afterward dispelled the illusion. After a while I understood this weakness so well that I knew how to take it, and it gave me no trouble at all. On the contrary, I used it to aid him in getting over these spells, generally by putting him to work, which I learned by experience was sure to relieve him. So one day in the fall of 1864—I could give you the date if I had the copy-right here—I was standing at my desk in my drug store writing up my books, when in came Webster looking uncommonly blue. I knew at a glance what ailed him, but said to him pleasantly, 'Webster, what is the matter with you?' 'Ah,' he said, 'nothing much. It will be all right by and by.' 'That is so,' I said, 'and what is the reason that wouldn't be a good subject for a song—By-and-By?' With that I snatched up a piece of paper and went to writing, and within fifteen minutes handed him the paper with these words written on it:

There's a land that is fairer than day,
And by faith we can see it afar,
And the Father stands over the way,
To prepare us a dwelling place there.

We shall sing on that beautiful shore,
The melodious songs of the blest,
And our spirits shall sorrow no more,
Not a sigh for the blessings of rest!

To our bountiful Father above,
We will offer the tribute of praise,
For the glorious gift of His love,
And the blessings that hallow our days.

'There,' I said, 'write a tune for that.'

Webster looked it over, and then turned to a man named Bright in the store and said: 'Hand me the fiddle over the counter, please.' The fiddle was handed to him and he went to work at once to make a tune. And I hardly think it was more than thirty minutes from the time when he came in the store that he and I were singing together the words and music just as you see them here on the nineteenth page of 'The Signet Ring.' We liked them very much, and were singing our song off and on, the rest of the day. Toward evening, Uncle Crosby, as we used to call him, my wife's uncle, came into the store and we sang it to him. He was deeply affected by it, and when it was ended the spirit of prophecy came over him and he said: 'That piece is immortal.' And he was right.'

The recount of votes in this city makes no difference in the result on representatives. In the close district Mr. Collins is elected by 24 plurality over Mr. Howe. Mr. Herrick gains 21 votes in the city over Mr. Day; Mr. Moulton gains 26 over Mr. Hurlburt.

The gross expenditures of the Poor Department to September 30, 1883, were $27,848.78. The receipts to October 30, were $5,863.14, and the estimated receipts for the remainder of the year are $1,500, making the total receipts this year $7,363.14 against $5,819.30 last year. The net expenditures last year were $25,215.82, and the net expenditures this year with the $5000 additional appropriation reckoned in will be $25,485.64. There are fifteen more inmates this year than last, and a larger number of outside dependents. The yield of the farm has been larger than ever before.

THANKSGIVING, NOVEMBER 29.

THE PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION.

In furtherance of the custom of this people at the closing of each year to engage upon a day set apart for that purpose in a special festival of praise to the Giver of all Good, I, Chester A. Arthur, President of the United States, do hereby designate Thursday, the 26th day of November next, as a day of National Thanksgiving. The year which is drawing to an end has been replete with evidences of Divine goodness. The prevalence of health, the fullness of the harvests, the stability of peace and order, the growth of fraternal feeling, the spread of intelligence and learning, the continued enjoyment of civil and religious liberty—all these and countless other blessings are cause for reverent rejoicing. I do, therefore, recommend that on that day above appointed, the people rest from their accustomed labors, and meeting in their several places of worship, express their devout gratitude to God that He hath dealt so bountifully with this Nation, and pray that His grace and favor abide with it forever.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the city of Washington this 26th day of October, in the year of our Lord 1883, and of the independence of the United States the 108th.

(Signed) CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

By the President.

FREDERICK T. FRELINGHUYSEN,
Secretary of State.

His Excellency Benjamin F. Butler, soon to be ex-Governor of Massachusetts, in addition to the many other alleged accomplishments he has exhibited during his picturesque career, has lately come out as an authority on cooking. At Danvers last Friday, in reviewing and closing up his campaign, he devoted his time, according to The Boston Globe, to an elaborate dissertation on pork, which meat he claimed should not be fried for the reason that treated thus the fat and juice of the meat are lost. Broiling and roasting are open to similar objections. He prefers a stew, which is not unnatural, when his constant propensity to get himself into one is considered. On this occasion he also said that silver knives and forks are better than iron ones; but with great delicacy and forethought he made no reference to silver spoons. In the seclusion into which he will go after the 1st of January, His Excellency will have ample time to devote to the writing of a book on cooking and household economy, and to demonstrate more exhaustively and more logically his views upon the most desirable way in which to cook pork, and how to make crow palatable to his hungry supporters.—*N. "I understand you have rented another house," said an Austin gentleman to an acquaintance. "Do you like the location?" "Yes, the location's all right." "Many conveniences?" "Yes, quite a number of conveniences. There's a livery stable on one side, a lager beer saloon next door, and a lard factory across the street. Everything seems handy enough as far as I can see."

The petulant chaplain of a military regiment in camp was so pestered by people who called at his tent to inquire what time the next train left for Boston that he hung a placard outside, which read: "The occupant of this tent does not know what time the next train leaves for Boston." A wag happening along after dark wrote beneath the chaplain's announcement, "and he don't care a——either."

GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.

A Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Record writes: "The young men in the executive departments here may be roughly divided into three classes—those with a past, those with a future, and those with neither. Those of the first class are all 'scions'—never by any accident mere sons or descendants—and always of some 'proud old family.' What it has to be proud of, except its age, is not always apparent. Its scion is proud of it, however, and that I suppose ought to content us. He sleeps on its tombs and fattens on its bones, and bores you with the good or bad deeds of its ghosts. This young man is apt to be a good clerk, though dreamy, and a good companion, though a trifle monotonous. But he will never advance any further than to-day. Those with a future are the best of them all. They are bright, often brilliant fellows, with grit, snap, and ambition. No civil service reform will keep them in office, for with them an office is merely a pot-boiler while they are preparing for something better. Some of them are acquiring in the line of their duties experience which will be of value to them by-and-by, when they are patent attorneys, or claim agents, or land or pension lawyers. Some of them at the same time are pursuing their studies in the local law and medical schools, or with the tutors who are so abundant here. Every one of these men has an end in view, and is availing himself of every means in his power to attain it. He has a good salary, he lives economically, and he buys accomplishments, solid and flimsy. There are three flourishing law schools here and the same number of successful medical schools, not to speak of half a dozen of a lower grade. These six schools graduate something like 500 men a year. Four-fifths of them are government clerks. They get good training in these schools. Their professors are taken from the leaders in law and medicine here. Some of the law professors are judges on the benches of the United States and the District Supreme Courts. Diligent private study, added to what they get in the schools, gives them more legal lore to start with than is required by the average member of a committee. These are the men the government ought to keep. But, of course, they are just the men it can't keep. They 'can do better outside.' They generally do. I can point to a hundred who have within the last five years put into successful practice what they had learned at Uncle Samuel's expense. And I can point to a hundred more who are crowding on all sail with a view to getting into the great race as soon as possible. As for the great middle class—thin, narrow-chested, sallow-faced, limp, languid, dressed as nearly like the Nothern dudes, whom we have never seen here, as possible—then muscles are consecrated to pool, otherwise "poo-il," and their brains go up continuably in the unceasing smoke of their cigarettes. Without pride of ancestry or hope of descent, they are pitiable in their pettiness, useless to themselves, an annoyance to their families, and an incumbrance to the government.

THE TURKISH GROCER.

The Turkish grocer, conspicious by his snow-white turban and his flowing beard, sits cross legged on the high-raised floor of his shop, with a by no means distant background of canisters and bottles; with his scales suspended from the roof, and with all the materials of his trade close and ready to his hand. Usually a female friend or purchaser is also seated on the shop-board, but with her legs dependent in the street. Of course she wears a yashmak and feridjee, but a yashmak is no bar to oral conversation, and still less is it a bar to the language of the eyes, and conversation, of the one kind or the other, goes on for an indefinite time between the grocer and his visitor. When a veritable customer arrives the old Turk does not trouble himself to remove the chibouque from his lips, but stretches out his hand to the required canister or bottle, draws down the scales from the roof, and supplies the article demanded. Sitting, as he does, a little above the faces of his customers he looks down gravely and benevolently upon them and seems to say: "Look around they are no dark corners in my shop; no said can lurk undetected in the sugar which I present to you in the light of this blazing sun; nor could the insidious horse-bean, if I were to introduce it among the fragrant berries of Mocha, escape your penetrating gaze." The restaurateur's cook, as he stands behind his smoking pots and shining stewpans, in like manner takes the entire crowd of spectators into his confidence, and defies them to mistake a rabbit, which he dissects before them, for a cat or puppy. All the tradesmen and handicraftsmen seem to say to the intending purchasers: "Behold us! We are all fair and above board. You will find in us no untradesman-like artifices. We lay bare to you all the arts and mysteries of our crafts. Would you buy a yorghan (wadded quilt), you shall see us weigh out the cotton which it shall contain, and you may watch us as we make it up, and judge for yourselves whether we are the men to connive at a surreptitious insertion of inferior material."

AN ALABAMA MAP-MELON.

A farmer near Montgomery has been playing an old trick, called by the papers "a freak of nature." The Advertiser says: "Robert Graham has grown from an ordinary seed the strangest looking watermelon that ever held cholera. It is large, round, and looks sick, containing on its surface a perfect map of the Eastern and Western Hemispheres, oceans, lakes, seas, &c. Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, and other countries on the other side, and in our country the United States is as plainly mapped as it is in the school books. Mr. G. says he raised it just like the rest in the patch, but watched its growth with interest."

We have always possessed the idea that the poor man's hard earned dollar should purchase just as much as a like amount of his wealthy neighbor.—WE BELIEVE IT. WE ACT UPON IT. Three years ago it was hard to convince customers that a firm in the FURNITURE business would or could make such a departure. WE DID, and our business to-day is a pleasing monument of its kindly reception by the people of Lynn, Swampscott, Saugus, Nahant, Marblehead, Peabody, Danvers, Lynnfield, Salem, &c., to whom we are more than thankful.

WOMAN AND THE BABY.

What a puzzle the little child is in the domestic economy!

How the mother gives of her own life and strength to support the life of her blessed little youngster!

How the child kicks, and laughs, and crows!

How the child grows, and is heavier and heavier every day.

And yet she lifts him, and tosses him, and plays with him, and takes care of him by day and by night.

Is it any wonder the mother breaks down? Her back aches. Her stomach fails her. Her liver is bad. Her blood is thin, and she says she feels poorly. Yes, yes, poorly—very poorly. Give mother a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters. She needs the iron in her blood, which that will put there. She must have strength, or she will be a confirmed old invalid.

Brown's Iron Bitters helps worn and weary women into new life, cheerfulness, and vigor. Tell all the mothers you know. 9

The Peabody Press.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

ON ACCOUNT of the dedication of the new Town Hall, the next issue of the PRESS will be delayed until THURSDAY AFTERNOON. It will contain a full account of the exercises, the official report of the Building Committee, and the address of Hon. Alfred A. Abbott, in full.

THE EXAMPLE of Amherst College in the matter of discipline has been followed by Bowdoin, which is an indication that it is destined to supersede the old fashioned discipline so long prevalent in our higher educational schools. Young men at that age when they enter these institutions are not boys, and they ought not to be treated as such.

THE RESULT of last Tuesday's elections are encouraging. In New York the republican secretary of state is elected, the democratic majority in the other offices largely reduced, and a republican legislature elected. Pennsylvania is republican by a handsome majority. Connecticut elects a larger majority to a joint ballot in the Legislature, and Minnesota gives a rousing majority for the republican side. It will rest with the republican party alone to follow up these advantages by a victory in 1884. Will they do it?

THE RE-ELECTION of Seth Low, who is a Salem boy, as Mayor of Brooklyn, New York, is a triumph for the citizens' movement. He is hampered by no party pledges,—only bound by an obligation to appoint the best men, without reference to anything but their fitness, to whatever offices he may control. He would accept the nomination on no other platform. Opposed to him was a young man with no experience in City government, nominated on a party platform. It is well for Brooklyn that Low was chosen. It means no bossism, no rings,—but economy in administration.

THE VOTE last Tuesday was the largest ever thrown in this State. It is stated as a curious fact that both sides estimated their own strength with remarkable accuracy. Col. Plympton said that Butler would have from 148,000 to 150,000 votes; Henry Cabot Lodge said that Robinson would have 160,000. Both were not far from correct; but each were not as correct in their estimate of the strength of their opposing candidate. The vote was larger by 30,000 than the presidential vote in 1880, and 53,000 larger than that of last year. It is doubtful if the vote of next presidential year is in excess of it.

THERE WAS less scratching than usual this year on the entire ticket, which accounts for the defeat of the county officers on the Republican ticket in Essex County. Last year there were many supporters of Gen. Butler who voted the rest of the republican ticket. This year it was a very easy matter for them to take the whole ticket, including the democratic county officers. That it has ensured the defeat of several worthy officers, whom they would have been the last to wish defeated, is of small matter now. Essex County is a Butler County, and in the vote for him, which was certainly in his favor, came also the vote for the remaining officers on the ticket.

NEXT SUNDAY, by preconcerted arrangement, the new standard time will go into effect in Boston. The Eastern Railroad has already issued orders for their trains to be run on that time, as have also the Fitchburg and other roads. It therefore becomes a matter of necessity that it be adopted. It will be Philadelphia time. There will be no change in the time tables of the roads. At the agreed time, all the watches and clocks will be set back sixteen minutes. That is all there is to it. After the change is made, we shall experience no difficulty. Actually, however, the trains for Boston will leave our station fifteen minutes later; but our watches being set back, after a week or so it will be of no appreciable difference to us. By the sun time, however, it will not be correct, and that is the objection to it. But as the inevitable must be accepted, we imagine no one will be seriously inconvenienced.

WE ARE glad to learn that the recount of votes for the shrievalty will in all probability elect Mr. Herrick. This is fortunate, and we say it in no party spirit. From men of all parties we have heard the hope expressed that there would be no change in this office. It is a position to which a man cannot qualify himself in a month, or a year. Mr. Day is a very able man, as far as we can learn, but that he is not fitted for the duties of sheriff, even the supporters of his own party admit. A man should be an attorney to be high sheriff of a county with its requirements and responsibilities. It is not an easy matter, either, to fill the post of deputy sheriff. And with the changes in new appointments, which Mr. Day would feel called upon, in allegiance to his party, to make, more evil than good would result. It will be a fortunate thing for both parties, if this office, like that of the register of probate, can be taken out of politics. It is fitness for the position, not the devotion to party, that the county wants. And we would say this just as earnestly were a good democrat in the office. We are glad to know that large numbers of democrats hold the same opinion, and are strong friends of sheriff Herrick, the present incumbent.

THE ATTEMPT to make political capital, or a public matter, out of the discharge of some workmen by one of our leading manufacturers, is ill-advised.—Mr. Osborn had a perfect right, legally, to discharge any number of men, for any cause. It is a private matter, simply and solely, between Mr. Osborn and the men who had been in his employ. But if the men were discharged only on account of their political preferences, in other words, because they were Butler men, we think Mr. Osborn has made a mistake. We believe that every man should be allowed to exercise this privilege of citizenship without molestation. At the same time it should be remembered that the whole business is the outcome of a heated political campaign, and that the republican party is no more responsible for the action of Mr. Osborn than the democratic party is responsible for the assault upon Mr. Heylingberg by Jake Powell. It is Mr. Osborn's business and not that of the public. We do not blame the men for being indignant—if they were discharged for the cause alleged. But we fail to see the good to be attained by such a meeting as was held Monday evening, or the adoption of such resolutions. It does not feed themselves or their families. It only affords an opportunity for a few ringleaders to excite the men still further—and not to their own good. The moral of the entire meeting Monday night seemed to be, "Vote for Butler next year!" How that is going to help the matter, it would be well to stop and consider.

WE NOTED the fact some time since, that the scholars of the High School in Milford were supplied with newspapers and pictorials, and that they are made the occasion of a certain amount of instruction in the current topics of the day. We find that the custom works well, both scholars and teachers being pleased with the result. The principal gives out a general question to the entire school, suggested by a newspaper article, an event of local or national occurrence, or something which will cause a more extended perusal of the papers than would otherwise be brought about. The question is answered the next morning after the devotional exercises. This is one of the ways in which an interest is aroused in the present affairs, and leads the youth to consider what is outside of their text books, and to have some idea of what is transpiring in the State and nation. The practice has been going on there for the seventh term of school, and surely if good results have followed as is claimed, the subject is worth consideration. Very little time is taken from the recitations of the school, but an interest is awakened which may make better citizens, and more intelligent voters when the young men have arrived at years of maturity. The acquaintance with these topics is by no means of harm to the young ladies, as well, to whom will doubtless come a desire to participate in the suffrages of the State.

IN COMMON with most of our readers, we rejoice that election is over, and that politics will be relegated to the past. We all desire to see the best government for the state and nation,—although as individuals we may differ as to the methods of bringing it about.

There is one thing patent to all observers—that the campaign of Mr. Robinson has brought the republican party in this state to high vantage ground. He was not the choice of the old party leaders. The younger element, the progressive spirits, have devoted themselves with energy to his success. To their aid came many who have of late years been disgusted with the follies of the party, and if wisdom prevails these men will remain with us.

We hope Mr. Robinson will enter upon his office with a determination to satisfy his opponents of the truth or falsity of many of the abuses which 150,000 of voters evidently believe to exist. We hope he will inspect the almshouse at Tewksbury, the insane asylum at Danvers, and if there is anything wrong about the conduct of these institutions, any crooked management, let it be corrected. The republican party can afford to take no backward step in reform. No man ever entered the gubernatorial chair under less obligations to party than George D. Robinson. He is under obligations to the citizens of the State without regard to partisan fealty.

Upon this ground of progress must the republican party continue if it would succeed in 1884. The reforms which are demanded by the people, the regulation of the tariff, the upholding of the rights of all classes of men, whether poor or rich, the elevation of the body politic into intelligent and enlightened citizens—all these and many more questions demand their attention. An opportunity to take an advanced position on these and similar issues is presented, and by this sign they will conquer.

HON. GEO. D. Robinson, the next Governor of Massachusetts, was born in Lexington, Mass., in 1834. He fitted for college at the Hopkins Classical School in Cambridge and was a graduate of Harvard College of the class of 1856. After graduation he became principal of the Chicopee High School, until 1865. In 1866 he was admitted to the bar, in Cambridge, and began the practice of his profession. He was a member of the House in 1874, and of the state senate in 1875. The next year he was nominated by the republicans of the eleventh congressional district, and was elected. He was promptly in his seat on the first day of the session, and this regularity and promptitude in attendance upon the services to which he has been called by his constituents has been a marked feature in his life. In the forty-fifth Congress Mr. Robinson served on the committee on expenditures in the department of justice, in the forty-sixth, on the judiciary committee. In the discussion of the apportionment at the forty-sixth Congress, third session, Mr. Robinson eloquently defended the honor of Massachusetts against the aspersions which had been cast upon the commonwealth by General Butler in his brief as an attorney in the Boynton-Loring contest. In the filibustering contest over the rules in the 47th Congress, Mr. Robinson made a very earnest speech, which commended itself to all except the extreme filibusters. On the subject of civil service Mr. Robinson said: "I am heartily in favor of this bill. It is a step in the right direction. We have read enough in the platforms of both political parties; here is a chance to do something." In the campaign which has just closed, Mr. Robinson has achieved an enviable reputation. His speeches have been plain and pointed, and free from personal allusions. The campaign has been kept on a plane where every political contest should be placed. The blunders of His Excellency were corrected, but in such a way that his statements could be verified by the humblest citizen. He had the records back of him—which he had looked into personally—and he was not disproved in a single instance that we are aware of. If Mr. Robinson had failed of an election, his canvass would have gone into history as one of the most remarkable in the state. He will bring to his duties next year a knowledge of the needs of the State made more emphatic by the issues of the campaign, and the same persistent devotion to work and conscientious discharge of his obligations so characteristic of him.

Wellman Osborne, the Lynn shoe dealer, is again on the war path. He announces that he will take no back seat in prices,—and our readers are urged by him to visit all shoe stores, learn their prices and then come and see him.

PEABODY.

Get ready for Thanksgiving!

A partridge flew into a house on Lowell street last Sunday, but before he could be captured had escaped.

The new high school master will occupy the cottage house on Lowell street opposite Mr. Geo. H. Poor's.

There is to be a debating club formed among the young men of the town.—A good idea, if it will only succeed.

Now look out for the coons and gray squirrels. Get a coon dog and try our outskirts one of these light nights.

Dr. M. H. Hughes has hung out his shingle at No. 5 Caller street. He will ask for a share of the Irish patronage.

Beverly's representative will again have the honor of calling the House to order at the opening of the next session.

The name of Thomas E. Proctor was suggested by the Boston Post as the Citizens' candidate for Mayor of Boston.

Two years ago to-day the trial of the assassin Guiteau began at Washington. Don't seem possible it is so along ago as that.

No woman who exercises common sense will expose her health by wearing thin soled shoes at this season of the year.

A tramp who has been around town for a few days past has been the center of attraction. He was a perfect Albino, and at one time was connected with Bunnell's Museum in New York City.

Mr. C. C. Barney, editor and proprietor of the Canaan, N. H. Reporter, and several other papers, gave us a pleasant call yesterday. He is spending a short time in town the guest of Mr. A. C. Osborne on Central street.

We are in receipt of a published sermon before the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, at their annual meeting at Detroit, Mich., preached by Rev. William M. Barbour, of Yale College, and for which we return thanks.

The new standard railroad time goes into effect a week Sunday at noon, and the town clock will be set back sixteen minutes. The manufacturing establishments talk of adopting the new standard and changing the hour for beginning work.

A youngster showed pretty bad blood on Chestnut street last Friday. He was fighting with another boy and getting the worst of it he pulled a jack-knife from his pocket and made a pass at the other boy and missed. His companion took it away from him.

Lewis Allen, Esq., voted at the late election for the sixty-eighth time, having cast his first vote in 1815. He was born July 26, 1794. He was a Whig of the olden time, but of late years was a Republican. He walks more erect now than most men a score of years younger.—Globe.

While Mr. James Jefferey, a carpenter, was at work with a chisel at the shop of Mr. C. G. Folsom, on Central street, last Friday, it slipped and passed through the palm of his hand, severing an artery. It was dressed by a physician and is getting along nicely.

Mr. Geo. Clerk has increased the height of his fence around his factory on Foster street by adding to it pickets several feet high with barbed wire around the top. A new gate has also been put up. The new fence spoils one of the best bill boards in town.

The case of "Jake" Powell for assaulting John J. Heylingberg with stones, as noted last week, came up before Justice Merrill last Saturday, and he was fined $15 and $6.21 costs. He was charged with a similar offence in Salem, and was fined $10 and costs.

Union Post 50, G. A. R., will hold a grand fair at the new town hall, commencing Tuesday, Feb. 12. The seats will be removed from the lower floor except the center row, and that will give ample room for tables and a passage way around the hall. Sixty prizes will be offered.

At the dedicatory exercises of the new Town Hall next week Thursday, the music will be furnished by the Salem Brass Band both in the afternoon and evening. In the evening they will give a concert and will be assisted by Miss Gertrude Franklin of Boston, soprano vocalist.

There are two assessments in Class A, and one in class B., Odd Fellows' Mutual Benefit Association of Essex North the present month, caused by the deaths of Moses H. Pearson of class A, and Frederick H. Bassett of Classes A and B, both members of Mutual Relief Lodge in Lawrence.

Last Thursday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Stevens, while driving on Washington street, were assaulted with stones by boys. Mrs. Stevens was struck in the eye. This is the result of cutting down the police appropriation. Only one day police and he expected to be all over town and at the station at the same time.

To-day is pay day on the E. R. R., and the boys are happy.

A new pump has been substituted for the one that has done service for the past quarter of a century, in front of Batchelder's store on Main street. Yes a new pump, and such an æsthetic pump! All covered with lilies and wild flowers. It is the admiration of all the passers by.

While of course we should like to have seen a Republican elected to the legislature from Danvers, we can't feel very bad to have the mantle fall on Andrew H. Paton, who was elected last week. He is a gentleman who is honest and firm in his convictions and will ably represent the town.

A man was soliciting funds for a sick child on the streets yesterday. The child only existed in his mind, probably, as he was afterwards seen coming out of a liquor saloon on Foster street partly inebriated. He should have been arrested for obtaining money under false pretences. Look out for him.

A fashion exchange says that the jersey is the most serviceable garment of female wear that has been produced of late years. Yes, that is so. When a girl is done wearing her jersey, she can use it up in making ear muffs for her fellow, or else cut it down and make an undershirt for some younger member of the family.

Among the fine decorations noticed last Wednesday evening during the Republican procession were two young ladies standing on the top of a bay window at the residence of J. J. Heylingberg. Each was dressed in spotless white, and both held in their hands an American flag. It was appreciated by the boys and brought out three rousing cheers.

Several men found out that they wasn't sure of owning a winter overcoat yesterday, when they went to interview it. In some cases it was hanging all right in the camphor closet, in others it was riddled with moths, and in more it had found its way to the store of the old-clothes man who got it at a bargain for a pair of plaster paris images.

A lady took what she supposed was a car to Salem on the square last Thursday evening, and did not discover she was in a Lynn car until she reached Market street, Lynn. She was very indignant, but after the gentlemanly conductor, Mr. Frank Lewis, explained to her the situation she admitted it was her own fault and was brought back to Peabody and went to Salem.

The Lynn Bee has the following complimentary notice for a Peabody young man: Mr. H. C. Wilson, of Peabody, who played the fife in Brown's drum corps, Thursday night, has won a host of admirers in town. He is considered by good judges to be the finest fifer that ever came to this town. Mr. Brown informs us he has engaged him for his drum corp.

Quite a breeze of excitement was caused in town last Saturday by the report that Franklin Osborn, Jr., & Co., had discharged a number of their men, because they voted for Butler at the recent election. The facts as they have been given, are that Mr. Osborn wishing to reduce his help, took this occasion, he claiming that he did discharge them because they were Butler men, and giving as his reason that they sustained an element which had insulted him and his family, and as a rebuke to this element he took the action he did. On the other hand the men claim they did not insult him, and were not responsible for the acts of those fellows. A delegation waited on the Governor and laid the matter before him and he promised to investigate it. An indignation meeting was held Monday evening and speeches were made by prominent men interested in labor organizations. Resolutions were passed and letters of sympathy were read. The meetings were largely attended and enthusiastic.

We would respectfully announce to our readers that the Bijou Theatre Company, of Boston, will open the new Town Hall, Friday evening, Nov. 23d, with their full company, consisting of over fifty people, and their own Orchestra. They are playing this week in Brooklyn, New York, and have for the ast few weeks been greeted with enormous houses in the principal cities of New England. They appear again at their home theatre on the Monday following, and this will be their only appearance in this vicinity. They cancel an engagement where a good house was assured to appear in this place, and by particular desire, will present Iolanthe, with the original cast, which will be definitely announced later. Those who have not seen Iolanthe performed by this company have never seen it, and with the ample room on the stage, the width of which is almost as much as that of the Boston Theatre, we can assure our readers that it will be splendidly brought out. Seats at 75, 50 and 35 cents, according to location will be on sale at the drug store of Hazen A. Spaulding next Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE PEABODY W. C. T. U. AND ALL OTHERS INTERESTED: — This organization is nearing the close of the eighth year of its existence. Four Friday afternoons only remain for meetings in the present year, as the tenth of December is the anniversary of its formation. For nearly two months I have felt peremptorily called from the duties of my office in the Union. I have been doing what I could to help the cause of Prohibition in political lines. The campaign is now over. The smoke of the battle is clearing away. We can rally anew as a union of women, and do what we may in this "irrepressible conflict" with the demon of drink. Personally, and as President of the W. C. T. U., I beseech you all to meet with me at our headquarters at 3 P. M. on these Friday afternoons. In all our eight years' toil for the good of our fellow men, there has never been the need for our standing firm and true in earnest protest to the unnecessary evil of the dramshop that there is to-day. "In due season we shall reap, if we faint not." Let us not faint.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

We suspect that few of our readers are aware of the improvements which have been made this year over in the neighborhood of friend Quint. A street named Sutton street has been laid out parallel to Aborn and Holten, on which five residences have been built. The land for all five of them, we understand, has been purchased during the year, and the houses erected. Three of them are already occupied—the other two are fast approaching completion. They are just the sort of houses of which there ought to be a hundred more right here in Peabody—houses with from 4 to 8 rooms, built at a moderate cost, and which can be afforded at rent for a price which the man in humble circumstances, with a wife and family, can afford to pay.—These houses are all owned by their respective occupants, and betoken economy and thrift on the part of those who have thus sought to own the home which they occupy.

There are two cottage houses, built by Abraham Lummus, one now occupied by George Shove—the other not yet finished will be the abode of his father. This latter is the first house on the street approaching from Mr. Quint's, and contains three rooms on the lower floor, a parlor with a bay window, a sitting room and kitchen—besides two rooms up stairs. The other house built by Mr. Lummus is about the same size.

The second house belongs to Israel J. Goodwin, who has been for a number of years in the employ of Bushby & Co. Of this house Mr. Edwin B. Balcom was the architect and builder. It contains a parlor 12x14, a cosy sitting room similar in size, with a bay window, a kitchen 11x15, with hard pine floor, and two rooms, entering from the sitting room directly, both of which can be used as sleeping apartments, or one could be conveniently utilized as a dining room, an entrance being also from the kitchen. Up stairs there is the same amount of room with a hall amply sufficient for accommodation.—The painting at this house was the work of John G. Balcom, of North Salem. C. P. Toomey, of Danvers, did the mason work for this as well as for the other four of these houses; the cellars were all dug by Quint, and the piping of this house was done by Norton & Gilman.

The fifth house down is a double house, — entrance in the center, and both families use the same entry, and occupy both floors on the right and left respectively of the entrance. There is a parlor 14x15, a sitting room 11x12, and a kitchen 12x15, with a back entrance, and a good cellar, to which a descent is made by one pair of stairs convenient for the use of both families. Up stairs there are two rooms, the kitchen being on an ell. This arrangement of rooms on both sides of the entrance is exactly the same. Clarence W. Page occupies the left and Samuel W. Goodwin the right. This house was designed and built by Mr. Balcom. The painting on the outside was by John G. Balcom, and the inside by Frank Woodbury, who also paints the unfinished house of Mr. Shove.

There is one more house which is not yet finished—but waiting for the plastering to dry. This is being built by Mr. Edward Giddings, who will begin the finishing this week. The house will be occupied by J. R. Stanton, and is a cottage house. The entrance is on the right, with a large and convenient hall and stairway, the parlor being on the left and front of the house. It is 13 1-2x15, the sitting room is 13 1-2 ft. square, and the dining room 10×12. In the rear is a kitchen 14x11, with entrance from the outside, where there is also a store room, marble bowl, and all the necessary conveniences. Up stairs there is the same amount of room—and altogether it makes a very convenient house. The mason work was done by J. Arthur Trask, the outside painting by Mr. Stanton himself, and the inside will be done by Frank Woodbury.

The Essex County S. S. Teachers Institute hold their annual meeting at Salem, this afternoon and evening, at the Crombie street church. Addresses will be made by Rev. O. P. Gifford, of Boston, Rev. C. E. Cate, of Lowell, Rev. James L. Hill, of Lynn, Rev. C. N. Smith of Peabody and others. Evening meetings in town have been generally suspended on account of the one in Salem.

No more lovers' walks and tender talks in the park beneath elm or oak—only chill tramps 'neath electric lamps. The backbone of the summer is broke! And there's never a ghost of a show for his arm under her fur-lined cloak!

It is the desire of the committee that the free lectures be held in the new town hall instead of the Institute. Second the motion.

A family from Lynn have hired Frank Marsh's house on Lowell street.

The second lecture of the Institute course was given in the Institute last evening by Mr. Alban Andren, and his subject, "Sweden, by a Swede," was very interesting to the large audience assembled. Mr. G. M. Foster introduced Mr. Andren, who said that when a stranger landed in Sweden he was met with the greeting; "Welcome to Sweden, Welcome to Scandinavia," and he would extend the same to the audience. The Scandinavians discovered and settled this continent 500 years before Columbus crossed the ocean; the northern Vikings settled in Iceland and crossing the ocean in search of conquest, landed on the shores of New England, but could not stand a climate that was one day summer, and the next winter; they are now invading our shores for the second time, coming now by thousands, coming as builders of monitors for war, as nightingales for peace, as artisans and farmers. The speaker then took his audience through an illustrated and descriptive tour of Sweden, leaving New York by steamer for London, thence by steamer through the North sea to the Vikings retreat, the Venice of the North, the City of Gottenburg, through the liquid streets to the Exchange, the Banquet Hall, out of the city to the Ear Kettle Church, where the early christians first worshipped, to the Tree-garden Park, where Sunday was kept as a holiday, with its concerts, dances and theatres; up the Gotha river past the houses of he rich and the poor. The poor generally lived on the land of the rich, working about fifty days in the year for their landlord to pay their rent. The steamer next passed around Trollhatte Fall, by the Witches' Cap, and over the hills by a system of locks into Sweden's Blue Ribbon, the Gotha Canal, taking a trip by night through Mortala Canal, entering the Baltic at Norsholm, where the Sentinel on the Baltic, Stegeborg's Ruin, stands, passing through Lake Malar on a fine spring morning into Stockholm, the gay Capital of Sweden. The speaker gave a short sketch of Stockholm, as the island of logs, pointed out to his hearers the Museum, the Royal Castle, with its three hundred rooms, and library of seventy thousand volumes, the statues of the hero of the thirty years' war, Gustaf 2nd, Adolf, the lion of the North, Bernadotte, the father of the present ruler, Oscar 2nd; showing the Westminster Abbey of Sweden, the Riddarholm's Church, where the kings are laid away. Leaving Stockholm with its Chateaus, Open Air Concerts, halls and Tree-gardens, he takes them to the Upsala Cathedral, showing the Kings Hills, the Pyramids of Sweden, that are being opened at the present day, and are finding the implements and weapons of the ancients; through ancient Sigtuna, the Pagan Capital, attends a wedding in Skane, and arrives in Gotland, the eye of the Baltic. The speaker carries us around the ancient walls to the Virgin's Tower, so named, because of the innocent treachery of a maiden, who to punish her for it, was walled up alive in the tower. The speaker then described the habits and dress of the Scandinavians and their peculiarities; showed the different types of beauty in the Swedish women, and to offset the handsome ones, gave the Laplander in his dress of reindeer skins. He carried them through the Scandinavian Mountain Pass, the Palisades of the North, to the Lake of Stor, and left them at the foot of The Snow-capped Mountain Areskatan, with the Mountain Witch in the shape of a Scandinavian Saeter Girl bidding them "God speed."

The campaign was closed in this town last Wednesday evening by a grand jollification gotten up by the Republicans and enjoyed by all parties. When the shades of evening had thrown her sable curtains o'er us, there appeared around many residences quantities of Chinese lanterns, flags, etc. A procession of torch bearers and horsemen gathered on the square and soon began to march, while Young America stood round yelling at the top of their voices, true blue patriotism oozing from their very boots and waiting for the next scene. Soon the deafening boom of the cannon broke out upon the stillness of the night air, until its echoes lost itself in space. Fireworks were sent off in large quantities resembling fiery meteors in their aerial flights, and house after house was illuminated by hundreds of lighted lamps and gas jets, and thus it was all over town. Long into the night the music continued, and the weary torchlighter plodded along, and as the early hours of the morning came around they had cheered themselves hoarse and returned to their families perfectly satisfied with the result and themselves.

The Eastern railroad has solved the problem of carrying potatoes without freezing during the winter months. The corporation have had box cars constructed with pipes passing along the sides, top and bottom, through which hot air is kept circulating, thus keeping the car at a uniform temperature. This method will probably be adopted by other roads, but the Eastern takes the lead under the splendid management of Mr. Payson Tucker.

As the passenger train on the Lowell railroad, due here at 8.45 a. m., was approaching Phelps' crossing, West Peabody, last Saturday morning, the engineer discovered two cows belonging to John Hackett on the track. He blew his whistle, but the animals did not move, and one of them was struck and killed. The engine, after striking the cow, was thrown from the track into a ditch, where she lay on her side badly damaged. The engineer, Alpha Clements of Lowell, was badly hurt about the hip, head and back, and one leg was paralyzed. Fireman Albert Lang, of Lowell, was thrown through the cab window into the brook, as was also a small dog that was on the seat, and escaped with only a ducking. A wrecking train from Lowell was engaged all day in clearing the track, and a train was sent from Salem to take the passengers through. What saved the train from destruction and its passengers from instant death is a mystery.

The change in the temperature Monday would have been considered remarkable anywhere outside of New England. At midnight Sunday the glass indicated 50°. At 7.30 Monday morning the mercury had fallen to 42°; at 11.30 A. M. the figures were 37°, the wind west. The mercury continued to fall slowly during the day, touching 17 at 7 P. M., and the wind increased in force, accompanied by violent snow squalls of a few minutes' duration. The wind continued high all night, and dust was blowing in clouds all day.

The melancholy season of the year is not without its pleasures and its hopes. The chilling blasts of fall bring to humanity misery, suffering and chestnuts. Thus is the bitterness of early frosts tempered with the kernel of the great worm breeder. While the birth of the red and yellow foliage tends to thicken the midnight gloom, yet does the appearance of the shell covered fruit cause a brilliant illumination by charcoal fires upon the street corners, whose ruddy glow and starry sparks make the midnight wanderer bless the innocent chestnut, worms and all.

Several changes have occurred in the schools caused by the resignation of Miss Alice Teel in the Bowditch. Her place was supplied by Miss Tufts in the same building. Miss Hart of the Wallis takes Miss Tufts school, Miss Poole of the Center takes Miss Hart's school, Miss Poor of the Center takes Miss Poole's place, and Miss Raddin, who was Miss Poole's assistant, takes her place in the Center primary.

John Whalen, a boarder at the house of Mrs. Barrows, on Mill street, fell from a window in the third story last Sunday morning. He was missed by his room-mate and discovered in a helpless condition on the street below. It is supposed he was walking in his sleep. Several ribs were broken, and he was removed to the Salem hospital. Whalen was fifty years old, and his recovery is doubtful.

The arrangements for the Old Folks' concert, under the auspices of the ladies' circle of the Baptist Society, is progressing finely. It will be held in the Peabody Institute December 6th.—Miss Fessenden, of Cambridgeport, who sang so acceptably before the Legion of Honor, is expected to take part. Violin solos will be given by Miss Campbell of Danvers. The whole will be under the direction of Mr. Eri Littlefield, whose success in this line is already established.

Mr. Geo. W. Grant, formerly of this town, but now of Detroit, Minn., gave his folks a surprise by dropping in on them last Saturday night. He was accompanied by his wife and the oldest daughter of Augustus Teague, another Peabody boy who is located there.—Mr. G. has a farm of 169 acres, keeps ten head of cattle and a lot of pigs.—The west agrees with him, and he says his brother Charles is doing finely in the same business.

Mr. F. A. Bragdon, knowing that man needs bread, wishes the public to know that he kneads it also. He is desirous of feeding all who are hungry and hopes his good works may be in the mouth of every one. He is well disposed toward all men and the best bred people among us will find him we trust one of the best bread men in this vicinity.

The body of a full grown male infant was found in Danvers, near the Peabody line, on Sunday. Dr. Carleton of Salem performed the autopsy, Monday. He found that the child had been born alive and subsequently its throat had been cut. The jugular vein was severed. The body was put into a bag, with some stones, and thrown into Danvers river.

At a meeting of the trustees of the Essex Agricultural society last Friday, it was found that the receipts of the late fair were $1866 and the expense $1033, making a net profit to the society of over $800. It was voted to hold the next meeting at the Willows provided that more satisfactory arrangements can be made than this year, with the railroad company.

WHY THE DOCTOR WAS DISGUSTED, AND WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN DONE WITHOUT HIM.

"Well, wife," said Dr. E.—, as he entered his house, which was situated in a cosy village in central New York, "I have got back from a long and dreary ride away down among the mountains, and all to no purpose whatever. The messenger said the man wouldn't live till morning, when the fact is he had only an ordinary attack of colic. If the simpletons had only had sense enough to put a BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER on his stomach he would have been all right in an hour or two. But some folks are slow to learn, added the old physician, swallowing the cup of steaming tea which his wife had just poured for him.

Doctor E— was right, yet people do learn, even though slowly. The rapid increasing use of Benson's plaster proves this beyond question, and the good doctors are certain to be saved much of their needless toil. In all diseases, capable of being affected by a plaster Benson's acts efficiently and at once. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the centre. Price 25 cents. THE UPPER YOSEMITE FALL.

This magnificent waterfall is one of the most stupendous of nature's wonders. It is the highest fall yet discovered, leaping from the rocks into the air, and falling in one unbroken sheet fifteen hundred and fifty feet into the chasm below. After it leaves the rock above, it is soon torn into spray, being swayed and moved by the wind with marvellous grace and endless variety of motion. For a short distance this cataract descends in a wide unbroken sheet, with a continuous rumble; it is then caught and whirled upward in a mist, finally falling into the chasm below, and rising in a fine cloud like spray, often tinged with all the colors of the rainbow. The great mass of water descending with a continuous roar in one unbroken sheet swayed by the force of the wind in graceful undulations, its white, foamy mass in bold relief like a broad ribbon on the dark rocks, with its many tinted rainbow mists, is a sight to move the beholder with admiration and awe. From a distance this fall resembles a great sheet of white satin hanging over the rocks. This fall is the first of a series three of cataracts of the Merced River, the second being two hundred and fifty feet, and the third four hundred feet high. The course of the river below the falls is covered with boulders and rocks carried down by the seething waters; the rocks are covered here and there with moss and ferns, rendering many agreeable contrasts of color. Says Prof. Brewer, describing this fall: "It seemed as mobile as smoke, and assumed new varieties of outlines each instant, so light and airy that it seemed as easily swayed by the wind as lace, yet it struck with deafening thunder. The concussion was perceptible through the granite for some distance. The discharge of water is estimated at two hundred and fifty to three hundred cubic feet per second. In winter the water falls behind a great cone of ice, which is from one to two hundred feet thick, and emerging beneath the ice, a grand arch is formed like those in the glaciers of Mount Blanc. Standing at the foot of this magnificent fall, a thousand feet above the bottom of the valley, the violent tempest of spray, ice-pellets, or hail, is felt with great force, the hands and face being stung like shot by pelting hail stones. These fell in great profusion, but rapidly melted, for the sun shone full on the fall, and the adjoining rocks reflected the heat. The water of this stream being supplied from the melting snows, plunges over the brink of the precipice just at the freezing point. In its fall it appears to be atomizing for at least twelve hundred feet of its descent. A large volume of air is drawn into this falling mass along its whole course, the sheet spreading as it descends. The quantity of air is so great that it pushes outward on the bottom of the valley and is very perceptible as a cool current for more than a mile distant from the base of the upper fall. The air as sucked into the fall is immediately cooled to thirty-two degrees by the ice cold water. As it passes in it is very dry, and the rapid saturation within the sheet is sufficient to freeze a portion of the drops."

PRINTING FABRICS IN JAPAN.

The means employed for figuring fabrics would, to our mechanical manufactures, appear so ridiculously primitive and roundabout as to be only worth the notice of a laugh. Yet these fabrics have the subtle charm of hand-work denied to our correctly printed designs. No doubt our machines are marvels of scientific adjustment; but in the commonest Japanese cotton the tiresome uniformity we studiously aim at is on principle avoided. Stenciling is largely employed, and in a great variety of ways and variations of manner. A printer will cut out a series of leaves in paper, and lay them on his material, then bury them by means of a trowel in a sort of thick "resist." The leaves are afterward carefully removed with a pin, and when the "resist" is dry, the fabric can be put in the dye-vat, and the leaves made of their natural color. One of the most curious processes to watch is when the artist employs a sort of bird-lime, instead of thread, to outline his design. He takes a small piece of this glutinuous mixture on a skewer, touches the point where he wishes to begin, and then draws out a thread of convenient length. Placing the middle finger of the left hand under the fabric, he can let the ductile thread drop on any part of the stuff, and so go on forming the design even to such minute details as the stamens of flowers. This sticky substance can be drawn out to any length, like candy sugar, and kept an even thickness if necessary. When it is desirable to increase the breadth of the lines, a conical tube of oiled paper filled with the mucilage is used, from which a wider thread can be gradually dropped along. When the outline is finished the colors are added. The fabric is then steamed, and the outline removed by being rinsed in fresh water. If the ground is to be dyed the paintings are covered with a "resist" before immersion. In pieces of silk, no matter what length, and even where the pattern is repeated, the outlines are done by hand.

THE DEADLIEST WEAPON.

A young friend of ours at Dusseldorf was pestered to fight a duel by a German companion, for no reason except that the German thought the Yankee should make a record, and finally accepted. The American was an expert with that most deadly of missiles, the base ball, and, to the amusement of the whole college, chose it as his weapon, and prescribed the ordinary pitching distance for the fight, leaving his rival to chose what weapon he pleased. After the word was given, the challenger was carried from the field, not fatally wounded, but doubled up like one with the cholera, and howling like a stuck pig. The Yankee received no more challenges in that institution.

BEATEN BY WIND AND RAIN.

SAILORS ON THE SEA AND LABORERS ON THE LAND—HELP FOR THE LARBOARD WATCH.

"There is no telling the force of the wind; and the height and rush of the sea was simply appalling. When Cornish, the boatswain, and myself came down from aloft, after furling the main royal, we were wet through and half dead from the hard toil and the exposure."

So said the mate of the "Grosvener," when relating the incidents of an Atlantic cyclone, after nearly all the crew had mutinied and left the ship in boats to escape punishment.

Mechanics who labor upon lofty buildings; carpenters, masons, painters and bricklayers, may be called a kind of shore sailors, and that their numbers are not more largely decimated by accident and disease is a marvel. Mr. Jabez Rogers, tuck pointer, house painter, etc., of No. 608 Madison street, Chicago, over a pipe and autumn fire, said to your correspondent:

"No, I am only a young man yet—thirty-five, that's all; but the kind of work I do tells on a fellow's looks and constitution. Last Spring I was about run down with overwork and exposure. I had to give up doing any work myself, and just made out to oversee my men in a sort of half-and-half way. I thought I was played out for good and all. I was racked with a cough, stupified with a cold, and torn and disabled with Rheumatism. Do? I took PARKER'S GINGER TONIC and it cured me. Those three words tell the story—it cured me."

To all persons subject to risk from exposure, PARKER'S GINGER TONIC will commend itself. It purifies the Blood, incites the torpid Liver to healthy activity, and opens the pores of the skin. This is the season of outdoor perils to health. Keep the Tonic near you. Prices 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Hiscox & Co., Chemists, New York.

The colored brethren are down on one of the city papers because, when one of the reporters spoke of a certain meeting as a "swell crowd," the paper had it printed a "smell crowd."

"Will you spend the Summer at Saratoga as usual?" was asked Brown. "No," I have just gone into bankruptcy." "Shake, old man, I expect to take a trip to Europe myself. We will go together."

The Duc de Morny's definition of a polite man is hard to realize. "A polite man," said he, "is one who listens with interest to things he knows all about when they are told by a person who knows nothing about them."

At one of the public schools a small boy was asked to name some part of his own body. He thought for a moment and then replied: "Bowels, which are five in number—a, e, i, o, and u, and sometimes w and y."

There was a young man named DeL&,
Who played the bass horn in the b&;
He blew such a blast,
That as he went past,
He blew all the fruit off a st&.

"Is that dog mad?" he asked the boy as the animal dashed by. "I guess he is," replied the boy; "I just see a butcher take a piece o'meat away from him and kick him six feet into the air. Wouldn't you be mad if that was done to you?"

Biggs is severely practical. When a friend approached him the other day to sympathetically remark. "So you have buried your wife, Biggs?" Biggs replied quickly. "No, sir; thank Heaven, I'm not so poor as that. No, Sir; I hired an undertaker."

"What makes you drink as you do?" exclaimed Mrs. Higgleton, turning to her husband, who steadied himself against the door and surveyed his wife. "What makes me drink as I do?" he repeated with an idiotic chuckle. "'Cause there ain't no other way to driuk."

"Mamma, what is a book-worm?" "One who loves to read and study and collect books." The next evening company called. Miss Edith, who wears rings innumerable, was present. "Oh, mamma, look at Miss Edith's rings. I guess she is a ring-worm, isn't she?"

"Well," remarked a woman in a New England village, talking to her Summer boarders about a neighbor, "she's the greatest natural liar I ever saw, and I've often thought if she'd only had a first-class education in her youth what an author she'd a made before this!"

"Did you see that meteoric display last night?" asked Smith of Gilholy. "When did it come off?" "About nine o'clock. Didn't you see it?" "No, of course I didn't. I live out in the suburbs of Harlem, and never get a chance to see anything that is going on after dark in the business portion of the city."

"Any good shooting on your farm?" asked a hunter of a farmer. "Splendid," replied the agriculturist, "there's a dry-well man down in the clover meadow, a cloth peddler at the house, a candidate out in the barn, and two tramps down in the stock yard. Climb right over the fence, young man, load both barrels, and sail in."

"What is promised to the righteous?" asked a mild and amiable teacher to a small child at the far-end of her class. "Eternal bliss," quickly responded the child. "Quite right, my dear child," said the mild and amiable. "And now tell me what is promised to the wicked." "Eternal blister, ma'am," was the prompt reply.

A damsel besef for a photograph
By a vapid youth of genus calf,
Agreed at last the boon to grant,
To the great delight of the gay gallant;
"Oh, thanks!" said he: "I sometime shall Plead for the fair original!"
And, roguishly shaking her dainty head,
"I'll give you the negative then," she said.

He had at last screwed his courage to the sticking point and had come determined to pop the question. "Is Miss Blank in?" he asked of the new girl. "Indade she is that." "Is she engaged?" "Bless yer sowl, but you'd think so if yez could see her and a young man on the parlor sofa just now. Do you want to see her?" But he had fled.

Somebody put a small mud-turtle, about the size of a silver dollar, in a bed at a New Jersey hotel, and the stranger who was assigned to that room, on preparing to retire, caught sight of it. He at once resumed his clothes, remarking: "I expected to have a pretty lively night of it, but if they're as big as that, I don't propose to get in with 'em."

Mamma and baby stepped out on to the terrace to see whether cook had forgotten to give the cat its dinner. They found pussy engaged in cleaning up its plate, in which operation it was assisted by an immense Tom cat. "Wherever can that creature have come from?" inquired mamma in surprise, and baby made answer promptly: "Why, that's pussy's policeman."

Last week a strapping negro woman was up before Justice Powers, charged with unmercifully beating her boy, a saddle-colored imp. "I don't understand how you can have the heart to treat your own child so cruelly." "Jedge, has you been a parent to a wuffless yaller boy like dat ar cub of mine?" "Never," ejaculated the judge with great vehemence, getting red in the face. "Den don't talk."

STATE AND ARK ST., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—HER GOOD, KIND WORDS WILL DO MUCH FOR THE AFFLICTED.

Mrs. Chamberlin is the wife of C. W. Chamberlin, an employe in the United States Armory at Springfield, Mass. She says: "Every Spring I have been, for some time past, more or less troubled with nervous debility and weakness. Some years I've been completely run down. My physician has recommended various strengthening and blood medicines, but I never received any permanent benefit until I tried Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. It was recommended to me by Mrs. Newcombe, on State St. I think it a wonderful medicine to give one strength and enliven a person. I have recommended it to family after family among my acquaintances in Springfield, Mass., and FAVORITE REMEDY has done a great deal of good wherever it has been placed. I have a sister, Mrs. Harmon, 29 Tremont St., Lowell, Mass., who was troubled with nervous weakness and loss of strength and appetite, but by using Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY her health was completely restored. I consider it an excellent medicine. Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is used extensively among the Armory men here."

NO, SIR!"

A Scotch minister once said no woman could bear pain as well as man. That is not so. The fact is generally the other way. Mrs. Edward Meyers of Rondout, N. Y., submitted to the operation of the removal of her hand by amputation, without taking ether, or moving a muscle or uttering a groan. Dr. Kennedy, also of Rondout, N. Y., who performed the operation, said he never saw such heroism. The lady's disease was erysipelas, and afterwards the Doctor gave his FAVORITE to cleanse the blood. Mrs. Meyers is now well and strong.

Book Notices.

THE NOVEMBER MAGAZINE OF AMERICAN HISTORY presents an exceptionally attractive table of contents. The frontispiece is an excellent engraving from Trumbull's famous painting of the "Evacuation of New York," never before re-produced. The leading article is by Judge-Advocate Asa Bird Gardner, entitled "The Last Cantonment of The Last Continental Army of the Revolution;" it is ably written, and is accompanied by fourteen illustrations of rare interest. The second article is a valuable epitome of events in Europe, concerning "The Treaty for which the Army Waited," by Theodore F. Dwight, Librarian of the State Department, Washington, with a fac-simile of the signatures from the original Treaty. The Editor describes the frontispiece in two pages, after which we have the conclusion of Hon. Charles Gayarre's "Historical Sketch of Pierre and Jean Lafitte, the famous smugglers of Louisana"; and some exceedingly readable sketches in the department of Minor Topics, which is becoming a most entertaining feature of the Magazine. Publication Office, 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

The December Number of FRANK LESLIE'S SUNDAY MAGAZINE comes to us, outwardly greatly improved by a new and very tasteful cover—inwardly, we think the Magazine is scarcely capable of improvement; the present number brilliantly closes the fourteenth volume. "Religious Denominations in the United States" is continued, and "What is Swedenborgianism?" is explained by Rev. J. C. Ager. There are Sketches, Essays, Poems, and a rich department of Fiction, with the conclusion of the serial "Mr. Burke's Nieces," and short stories by Eben E. Rexford, E. F. Gordon Cummings, and other celebrated writers. The editor, T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., contributes a sermon, and the number abounds in interesting and edifying reading. A single number is sold at 25 cents or $3 a year, post paid. Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55, and 57 Park Place, New York.

COUNT ROBERT OF PARIS—T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, publish this day, "Count Robert of Paris," being the fifth volume of their new and cheap edition of "The Waverly Novels," by Sir Walter Scott, which will be completed in Twenty six Weekly Volumes, each volume being a novel complete in itself, and one volume will be issued every Saturday until the whole are published. This edition is called "Petersons' Cheap Edition For the Million." Remit three Dollars to T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia, and they will then mail to you, at once, post paid as fast as issued, the full and complete set, together with a Proof Impression of the best portrait ever taken of Sir Walter Scott, gratis, suitable for framing, as a premium.

THE MUSICAL RECORD is edited by Dexter Smith and published monthly by Oliver Ditson & Co., 449 and 451 Washington street, Boston, at $1 a year. The November number has twelve pages of choice music, including a galop by Meyer a march by Michaelis, a song and chorus by Barnes and Forman, and a sacred piece by Hutchinson: and a goodly amount of miscellaneous reading matter, of general interest.

A MILITARY MAN MADE HAPPY.—Washington, D. C.—General G. C. Kniffin, in a letter stating his wife was cured of a painful ailment by St. Jacobs Oil, writes that after witnessing its magical cure of pain he would cheerfully pay $100 for a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, if he could not get it cheaper.

The last number of Browne's Phonographic Monthly is on our table, and is a very interesting one. Scott Browne never does anything by halves. He started to make the Monthly the best shorthand magazine in the country, and has evidently succeeded. The price is $2.00 a year, or 20c. a copy. D. L. Scott Browne, 23 Clinton Place, N. Y.

I would recommend Ely's Cream Balm to anyone having Catarrh or Catarrhal Asthma. I have suffered for the last five years so I could not lie down for weeks at a time. Since I have been using the Balm I can lie down and rest nicely. I thank God that you ever invented such a medicine. FRANK P. BURLEIGH, Farmington, N. H.

For 25 years I have been afflicted with Catarrh so that I have been confined to my room for two months at a time. I have tried all the humbugs in hopes of relief, but with no success until I met with an old friend who had used Ely's Cream Balm and advised me to try it. I procured a bottle and from the first application I found relief. It is the best remedy I have ever tried. W. C. MATTHEWS, Justice of the Peace, Shenandoah, Iowa.

If this republic shall fall, shattered, as other republics have done in the past, and as an English writer predicted, less than a quarter of a century ago, the rock on which we shall split will be the ignorant, unqualified, universal suffrage. —A writer in the Commonwealth.

That is what any one will receive who subscribes for THE INDEPENDENT of New York.

It occupies two fields. First, as a religious journal it is undenominational and broader than any sect. Its aim is to strengthen and extend Evangelical religion and to defend it against the attacks of Materialism, Atheism and unbelief. It is free to approve or criticise in any of the denominations whatever it believes is designed to advance or hinder the progress of the Gospel of Christ.

Among its religious writers are Leonard W. Bacon, D.D., S. C. Bartlett, D. D., Prest. John Bascom, Bishop Thos. M. Clark, Rev. Jos. Cook, Bishop A. C. Coxe, Geo. R. Crooks, D. D., Howard Crosby, D.D., Theo. L. Cuyler, D.D., Rev. Samuel Dike, Geo. P. Fisher, D.D., Prof. Norman Fox, Washington Gladden, D. D., Bishop F. D. Huntington, Bishop J. F. Hurst, E. D. Morris, D.D., Prest. Noah Porter, Francis L. Patton, D. D., Philip Schaff, D. D., R. S. Storrs, D. D., Wm. M. Taylor, D. D., Wm. C. Wilkinson, D. D., Prest. T. D. Woolsey.

Second. As a literary journal it stands without a peer among the weekly press. During the past year it has published articles and poems by more than three hundred of the most talented writers in this country and Europe.

Among them Amelia A. Barr, Mary Clemmer, Rose Terry Cooke, Kate Foote, Dora Read Goodale, Rev. W. E. Griffis, "Grace Greenwood," Thomas Hill, D. D., William D. Howells, "H. H." Sidney Lanier, Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, Louise Chandler Moulton, Joaquin Miller, R. A. Oakes, Mrs. S. M. B. Piatt, Josephine Pollard, Richard Henry Stoddard, Edmund Clarence Stedman, Mrs. Laura Thompson, J. T. Trowbridge, Celia Thaxter, John Greenleaf Whittier, Sarah C. Woolsey, Susan E. Wallace, Wm. C. Ward and Prof. Charles A. Young.

THE INDEPENDENT will, within the next few months, publish stories by Wm. D. Howells, author of "Their Wedding Journey," "A Modern Instance," etc.; W. E. Norris, author of "Matrimony," "No New Thing," etc.; F. Marion Crawford, author of "Mr. Isaacs," "Dr. Claudius," etc.; J. S. of Dale, author of "Guerndale;" Edward Everett Hale, author of "Ten Times One is Ten," etc.; Julia Schaver, author of "Tiger Lily, and Other Stories," Rebecca Harding Davis, Sarah Orne Jewett, Fred D. Story, Kate Upson Clarke, etc., etc. It is also negotiating with other distinguished story-writers of England and America, whose names it does not as yet feel at liberty to make public.

In civil and political affairs THE INDEPENDENT contends for sound ideas and principles. It believes in the reform of the civil service and tariff, in the purification of politics, and maintains those principles which the highest ethics and best intelligence require.

THE INDEPENDENT has 22 distinct departments 32 pages in all.

NOTICES IN RHYME.—In order to relieve exhausted and exasperated audiences the Rev. E. P. Parker proposes that ministers should rhyme the "usual notices," for the choir to sing. From the Independent Methodist we quote some specimens:—

The Ladies' Sewing Circle meets
On Saturday, P. M.;
And garments for the Mission Box
May then be sent to them.

The Busy Bees will meet
On Friday evening next;
Young gentlemen, at six,
They eagerly expect.

The deacons of this church,
And the committee, too,
Will meet next Monday night,
Grave matters to review.
A full attendance is desired
And is most earnestly required.

A young society man, whose mind was running on another subject, acknowledged an evening invitation as follows: "Your kind invitation for Thursday evening is accepted with regret." And then he lay awake all Thursday night wondering why his hostess treated him so coldly.—Burlington Free Press.

It must be confessed that 'Governor' Arnold of North Adams, the Worcester Greenback nominee, gave Scattering a severe tussle last Tuesday. We cannot yet tell who is ahead, it is so close.—Boston Globe. We believe Scattering beat Arnold by just two votes. This is a big country and the greenback vote is a large part of it.

What a lot of mistakes must he made by tailors. "Misfits" are advertised by wholesale, and almost anybody can be accommodated to a garment for which some one else has been measured without success. Fifty dollar custom suits are advertised for twenty dollars, and other things in proportion. Would it not be well for the tailors to learn their business better, and make garments that will fit the individual who ordered them?

Gen. Daniel Pratt, G. A. T., says he was an important instrument in Gov. Butler's defeat. He says he has worked night and day for four months for Robinson out of pure patriotism without pay or beans. Gov. Robinson ought to recognize his services by giving him a warm berth, a situation at Tewksbury for instance—where he can get a warm bath which he sadly needs. —Chelsea Telegraph.

We don't say that all the bargains in the city are to be found at our establishment or that no one understands how to run a great retail store except ourselves.

But we do say that our assortments are so complete that there is scarcely anything you can ask for that we have not got on hand; that our prices are low because our

while our business is very large, we can afford to sell cheaply and we do it. All our departments are stocked with new, seasonable goods, our prices as a rule are lower than those charged elsewhere, and we are making this week several special offerings at remarkably low prices.

The fair committee of Hose 4 met Friday evening and closed up the whole business, making the following report: Gross receipts, $713.14; Bills all paid, $370.38; Balance, $343.26, being the amount in the treasurer's hands, This is the official report, from the foreman, A. E. Johnson, who was also the treasurer of the fair. The company will probably give a dance and supper to all who helped make the fair a success. The number of tickets sold was 1924 out of 3000 printed. The money will be expended in procuring a new regulation uniform and in refitting the company's hall which has been out of repair for some time.

A new gong has been put on the carriage of Hose 1 to replace the one broken at the time of the alarm on the morning of the 6th of November. It is a larger, better toned and better finished one and did not cost as much by one third as the old one. That is something that is needed on both steamers as they are just as liable to come upon any one in the night or day as the other apparatus.

The Engineers have voted to get a new horse for the hose carriage, and are talking of putting "old Charlie," the present hose horse on the steamer to take the place of the blacks. The great trouble with "Charlie" is that he was always used to travelling with a mate and it makes him nervous to go out alone. There is no better piece of horse flesh in the department than that horse and he will be good for a number of years to come.

The last prize in the Firemen's Relief Association Fair was not taken away until last week. It was the stove and went to a man at Danversport.

One thousand feet of hose were used at the Mahoney fire last Tuesday morning, which is about five hundred more than there was need of.

The alarm of fire this morning at a few minutes past one o'clock, called the boys to Union street, and a barn owned by Silas A. Smith and occupied by A. B. Clark as a store house. A number of different persons claim to be the ones that saw it first, and we guess it would be hard to decide who it was. Steamer one and Hose one both set at the hydrant just beyond Richardson & Doyle's shop, at the corner of the street leading to Proctor's and had their hose laid, but the hydrant bothered and so Hose 4 got on the first water from the hydrant at the corner of Harris street. About six tons of hay were destroyed, and the total loss on building and hay was about $400, wholly insured at Chadwick's office. A number of buildings were on fire at times, and Hose 1 was ordered to lay a line from the hydrant half way up Union street and wet down the roof of Donovan's house which was on fire. The fire was supposed to be of incendiary origin. The Truck boys had their usual job pitching over hay and got back to the house, wet, cold and hungry. They think that they should at least have hot coffee on a cold night when they have to work longer than any others of the department. Some arrangement should be made so that the firemen could have hot coffee given out to them while at work at a fire. If this was done there would be no need of anyone saying that "firemen always get drunk when there is a fire in town."

Steamer one was out first last night.

The swing harness has been taken down and laid away again.

We would like to call the attention of the members of the Relief Association to Article 9 of the Constitution of the Association, viz: "The Board of Trustees shall meet on the Tuesday after the second Monday of May, August, November and February for the transaction of such business as may properly come before it."

The heating apparatus for the steamers sprang a leak last night while the steamer was out and the coil got burnt out. D. B. Lord repaired it this forenoon.

Frank A. Warner was voted into Steamer one, and Arthur Reed into Hook & Ladder one at the meetings of the above named companies last Monday evening, subject to the approval of the Board of Engineers.

A prominent ex-fireman was seen this morning at the fire, buttonholing and bulldozing the different Engineers for what purpose we do not know, and when he was told by another ex-fireman to come away as he did not belong to the department now, he promptly told the second ex-fireman to "go to a place hotter than that fire was."

Hose 1 were ordered over to play on the fire again this forenoon, as the hay had caught fire again.

About 1500 feet of hose were wet at the fire this morning.

All of the companies have received their sixth month's pay and are happy, as all bills are paid, and a general division follows. ZERO.

THE INDEPENDENT.—The ablest religious and literary newspaper published. One-quarter to one-third larger, but the same price as its contemporaries. It has twenty-two distinct departments, all good, many of them of superior excellence. Its literary department, embracing reviews, criticisms and notices of all new books published, contains 10 or 12 columns weekly, and has no superior in jonrnalism. During the next few months The Independent will publish stories by William D. Howells, author of "Their Wedding Journey," "A Modern Instance," etc.; W. E. Norris, author of "Matrimony," "No New Thing," etc.; F. Marion Crawford, author of "Mr. Isaacs," "Dr. Claudius," etc.; J. S. of Dale, author of "Guerndale"; Edward Everett Hale, author of "Ten Times One is Ten," etc.; Julia Schayer, author of "Tiger Lily and Other Stories"; Rebecca Harding Davis, Sarah Orne Jewett, Fred. D. Story, Kate Upson Clarke, and others. Our readers who do not now subscribe for it should read the advertisement in another column, which gives subscription rates in full. Every one should at least send 30 cents for a month's "Trial Trip," and make its acquaintance. Address The Independent, New York City.

The senseless rumor that Chas. A. Sanger discharged a man named Mack who has been in his employ, because he voted for Butler, is emphatically denied by Mr. Sanger. All kinds of stories are being circulated just now, and the public should not believe all they hear.

Fifield & Page, the stove men of Salem, have a new advertisement in this weeks issue. This firm carries a large assortment of all the popular makes of furnaces and stoves, as well as stove and kitchen ware, and are a reliable firm to deal with.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

Jalma at the Boston Theatre having been witnessed, the management says, by 180,000 people, enters upon its third month with popularity unabated, and an advance booking which insures a continuance of the enormous business which thus far has attended its run.—The engagement at this house of Henry Irving will necessitate the withdrawal of the great ballet spectacle in a short time, and all who wish to see it should make early application for seats, or they may find them difficult to obtain as the end of the run approaches.

Lawrence Barrett enters upon an engegement at the Park Theatre this week, in Boker's tragedy "Francesca da Rimini." Mr. Barrett appeared last winter in this play and it was at once stamped as a complete success.—It has just had a run of 63 nights at the Star Theatre, New York, and previously in Philadelphia. Mr. Barrett appears as Lanciotto a hunchback, and is supported by Louis James, Marie Wainwright, and others of note.—There are new scenery and costumes, and a chorus of madrigal boys in the Cathedral scene. Every evening and Saturday matinee are the performances at the Park Theatre.

Some notable stage effects are in preparation for the "Beggar Student" performance at the Bijou Theatre, and the entire stage will be used for the first time in the fair scene of the opening act. Nearly 200 costumes are called for by the company engaged for the performance, and the orchestra will be supplemented by a military band on the stage, as at the Thalia Theatre in New York.

Herne's Hearts of Oak met with an enthusiastic reception last Friday night in Mechanic Hall, Salem, so much so that they return this evening, when we anticipate a full house.

To-morrow evening Moulton & Johnson will bring to Salem the Rentz-Santly Novelty and Burlesque Company, M. B. Leavitt, sole proprietor, and will produce "Our Social Club," presenting a phalanx of 16 beautiful and talented lady artists, with new and charming costumes, music, etc.

Saturday evening, the Madison Sq. Theatre Co., of New York, present Young Mrs. Winthrop at Mechanic Hall. This play is one of the best, if not the best, of the Madison Square successes. There should be a good house on the occasion.

WHAT OUR BOY SAYS.

That he has had a continual picnic all through the campaign.

That he turned out with both parties and would have liked to have voted both tickets.

That it makes little difference to him who was elected; that he would have to work all the same.

That the boss says "Yes, my dear boy, just as hard, just as long and for the same pay."

That he didn't get a chance to burn up the printer's old ink kegs election night.

That about this time the fur store man puts up a stuffed bear in the window.

That the bad boy comes along and sets the dog on the bear, and this is followed by broken windows and show cases.

That no young man should marry th first woman that asks him.

That he will be a better judge of such things after a little experience.

That there are no circus tents at this season of the year.

That his minister greatly feels the need of a little exhilaratory amusement.

That he is glad he didn't have any money to bet on the election.

The engineer, Alpha Clemens, who was injured by the accident at West Peabody, resumed work to-day in the repair shop.

HON. A. A. ABBOTT'S ADDRESS.

MR. CHAIRMAN,

FRIENDS AND FELLOW-CITIZENS:

At last we are under a roof, within walls, in an edifice, of which we need not be ashamed.

Thanks to the foresight and enterprise of those who conceived and first advocated the project, to the liberal spirit of the citizens who by their votes gave it municipal sanction, to the Committee whose zealous and unselfish labors have supervised and carried on the work, to the architect and artisans whose brain and brawn have here planned and wrought, at last we have our new Town Hall, our House of the Town, with its massive foundations and towering structure, grand and symmetrical in its proportions, well adapted and commodious in its arrangements, ornate and elegant yet simple and chaste in its finish and adornments,—in all respects a model for a municipal building, a fitting testimonial to the intelligence, public spirit and wealth of those who make up our community of to-day, and a goodly legacy to the generations which are to come after us.

It is an event in our local history which well warrants some formal recognition—and when we consider the relations which this edifice bears to the present condition and interests of our town, and how its occupation and use will be connected with our future progress and welfare, it seems eminently proper that we should pause a moment in our busy life, while with appropriate ceremonies we dedicate our Town-House to its large and lasting work.

For here, henceforth, will be the seat and center of our municipal life. Here the citizens will come to transact all public affairs, to determine their appropriations and expenditures, to consider what are their wants and what burdens they will bear. Here will be discussed and settled all those questions which concern the health, protection and safety of our people, the education of our children, the well-being of our entire community. Here the voters will meet to choose their officers and agents, to elect their representatives, to cast their ballots for those who shall fill high places and be the rulers of the State and Nation.

Here for instruction and amusement will gather the old and the young, to listen to the words of wisdom and wit, to the debate of political questions and duties, perchance to the lessons of history, to the charms of music and poetry, to the mysteries of science and the wonders of art, to the precepts of morals and the speculations of philosophy, and to look upon those pictures of life upon the stage which, fitly chosen and decently presented, may lighten the weary hours, relieve the tired brain, and yield to all both profit and pleasure.

Here upon occasions of public rejoicing and sorrow, of great events which in almost every generation thrill the general heart with joy or cloud it with grief, will our people assemble to exchange their congratulations or to mingle their tears.

There will be no day in the life of our town, no industry or interest, nothing which affects the daily wants, the common convenience and comfort, the intellectual, moral and economic well-being of all within our borders, which will not be more or less identified with this building.

And as it is with us, so will it be with our children and our children's children. If a kind Providence shall spare these walls from fire and tempest, they will stand here as the municipal home of many generations. God alone knows what the future may have in store for us of weal or woe—but as He was with our fathers, so may He be with us and ours to the latest day.

There are many topics of discussion which an occasion like this naturally suggests. The vital importance of popular education, enforced by the recognized truth that our free institutions depend for their perpetuity upon the intelligence and virtue of the people,—the relations between capital and labor, (always a question of especial interest in a manufacturing place) the dependence of each upon the other, and the folly and wickedness of any attempt to antagonize elements which should combine for mutual protection and strength,—the great problem, year by year increasingly difficult of solution, of how we shall deal with pauperism and crime,—the subject of drainage in our densely populated districts, here as elsewhere so vitally affecting the health of our inhabitants and involving the issue of whether the next generation shall have a stalwart and vigorous or a sickly and stunted growth,—the connection between culture and morals, how far the education of the people to the perceptions of taste and beauty in nature and art modifies manners and habits, and the effect which the material surroundings of daily life in the adornments of the home, the combinations of ornament and utility, the fitness and elegance of public structures and private residences, the charm of tree-embowered streets, and bright gardens, and green lawns, and sparkling fountains, and the various features which can embellish and make attractive a town, the effect which all these have to gild and grace the surface if they do not actually refine and ennoble the very body of society,—these and other like topics would furnish interesting themes for consideration, and would be appropriate to the time and place.

There is, however, one other subject, which in the thoughts of some of our citizens is more directly associated with the erection of the building in which we are assembled, and which in the minds of all thinking men is becoming of overshadowing importance. I refer to the subject of municipal reform, as connected with the alarmingly growing burden of municipal taxation and debt.

Now far be it from me to intimate that in our own experience there has been extravagance or waste. I am ready to maintain the contrary against all comers. If there are any who have yet lingering impressions that we have made improvident or excessive expenditures for our schools and schoolhouses, for our streets and ways, for our water-system and fire department, for police and sewage and lighting, for the unfortunate poor whom like humanity everywhere we have with us always, for this stately structure and its spacious site, let them here and now consider for a moment who we are, and what we are, and what is this town of Peabody which is our chosen and happy home.

Although as a municipality, with a separate and independent existence, our years are but few, yet as a distinct people our history runs back to the earliest settlement of New England, and the territory embraced within our chartered limits has been the theatre of events as startling, of life as varied, of growth as steady and vigorous, of the exercise of virtues as sterling, and of industry, enterprise and manly courage as striking, as any of our older sister towns can boast. Here our fathers cleared the wild forest, struggled with hardships and want, and, in prayer and tears but in faith and hope, laid the foundations of the future Commonwealth. From here went brave men to the Indian wars, to swell the ranks for the siege of Louisbourg, and to wrest the Canadas from the dominion of France. Here early flashed out the fires of resistance to British oppression, and before armed defiance was generally debated in the colonies bold protests were here made against the invasion of rights which were deemed the heritage of free-born Englishmen, whatever skies might bend over them and on whatever soil they might tread. And here, when at length the die was cast, and at Lexington and Concord

"The embattled farmers stood
And fired the shot heard round the world," our fathers rushed to arms, hurried hence to the scene of conflict, and gave up their lives for the freedom and independence of the land—and on the spot where they rallied, and marched thence to death and glory, stands a plain shaft raised by pious love and reverent memory, to mark and hallow the place. Let no rude hands disturb those memorial stones. Let no craving wants of trade and travel, no demand for mere convenience and accommodation, or fancied march of improvement, move them from the spot. So long as the graceful column which commemorates the valor of the sons, who in the Great Rebellion defended and preserved the nation, shall tower in strength and beauty to the sky, so long may the humbler monument to the memory of the fathers, who laid and cemented with their blood the foundation-walls of that nation, stand in its simple grandeur, ever teaching the noble lesson of the legend which it bears,

"Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori"—
How sweet and how glorious it is to die for one's country!

All through the Revolution the denizens of this place bore their full share of patriotic service and sacrifice, and since then, whenever the call has come, on the land and on the sea, their hands have helped uphold the flag and their hearts have beat true and loyal to the Constitution and the Union. Meanwhile they have cultivated and fostered all the arts of peace. Their industry and enterprise and thrift and material success have been everywhere known and acknowledged. Education has had here its firm and ardent friends, law and order their stout defenders, the cause of good morals its earnest advocates and worthy exemplars, and religion its reverend and eloquent expounders and faithful and zealous votaries.

Under these favoring influences what now constitutes the town of Peabody has grown up to this day and to its present condition. Its territory is ample and diversified. It has dense centers of population, and it has quiet rural districts. It has busy marts of trade and manufactories and mills and workshops for almost every mechanic art, and it has gardens and orchards and farms and woodlands which richly reward the skill of the horticulturist and the patient toil of the husbandman. It has bustling and crowded streets and the hum of industry and all the din and clangor of a crowded hive of labor, and it has peaceful and fertile valleys and sunny slopes and sheets of crystal water and lofty hills from whose summits the eye looks forth upon landscapes unsurpassed in variety and beauty.

And this new town has a larger population than any town in the County of Essex and ranks among the first ten of the three hundred and a score and more towns in Massachusetts,—has a property valuation exceeded by but one or two in Essex and by less than a dozen in the whole State,—has schools which may claim equality with the best,—has, besides her staple commodity, varied industries and manifold resources,—has pure water brought from living springs to every door and ample protection from fire,—has unexcelled facilities for communication with the world around it,—and has in its midst, as the crown of its rejoicing, that noble foundation "for the promotion of knowledge and morality," the full, and, if kindly and wisely administered, unfailing fountain of immeasurable benefits and blessings, the gift of a loving son who on a foreign shore, dying, remembered sweet Argos, and dowered with his illustrious name the place of his birth.

Now, my friends, in view of this history, of our position, our population, our wants as measured by the requirements of a higher civilization and a finer culture, and our ample ability to meet those wants, who shall say that the town of Peabody, in providing this spacious and elegant Hall, has done more than supply the reasonable needs of its citizens, has done more than what was commensurate with its own character and standing in the world, and suitable for the decent, orderly and dignified conduct of its municipal affairs,—or who shall say that our town, in any of its appropriations and expenditures, has exceeded the limits of a just and judicious liberality and a wise economy?

But yet, fellow-citizens, while the record of the past is without fault and the present free from cause for reproach, we cannot on an occasion like this, when our minds should be especially alive to all our duties and responsibilities, overlook any of the dangers of the future, or fail to recognize the fact that the subject of municipal taxation and debt is one of vital interest and may well awaken our anxious solicitude. We cannot shut our eyes to the signs of the times or disregard what is going on in the world about us. By the last national census it appears that in Massachusetts the proportion of town debt to State debt is approximately as eighty-seven to thirty-three, and in the New England States together the proportion is one hundred and forty-six to forty-nine, or stated in another form, that of the aggregate State and town debt in the New England States, about seventy-four per cent. has been created by the towns in their self-governing capacity. In the Middle and Western States the percentage is still more alarming, in the latter amounting to seventy-seven and in the former to ninety per cent. (Of course in this enumeration cities are included under the general category of towns.) So that it is manifest that the burdens of taxation of which the people complain are mainly self imposed, and are their own and not the work of State legislation.

In considering the extent to which this complaint is just and the disproportion of town taxation to state taxation the result of improvidence and waste or dishonesty and fraud, two questions arise, what are the causes of the evil, and what is the remedy?

Upon this whole subject there has been much and earnest discussion. Upon the first branch of the inquiry it has been urged, that not only in our cities but in the larger towns there is a growing indifference to civic duties, an increasing lack of personal vigilance and the sense of individual responsibility, so that selfish and corrupt men usurp the places and do the work which unselfish and honest men should fill and perform,—that by the increase of and change in our population the quality of our voters and the character of our city councils and town-meetings have deteriorated,—that those having slight pecuniary interest but an equal voice and vote in the determination of all questions, under the lead of designing persons and controlled by improper influences, carry out the edicts of rings and recklessly saddle upon the municipality burdens of which they bear little or no share, the majority binding the minority, though the latter may pay nearly all the taxes,—that thus the taxeaters make the debts which the taxpayers must discharge,—and that so come about reckless extravagance and inordinate expenditure, misrule, mismanagement and waste, till the shop of the mechanic, the home of the tradesman, the fields of the farmer must be mortgaged to meet the taxes inevitably to be assessed, or else follow repudiation and bankruptcy.

Upon the second branch of the inquiry, what is the remedy for the evil which in certain localities undoubtedly exists to an alarming extent, it has been claimed, (and in stating this whole contention I use the thoughts and largely the words of a recent vigorous writer in the North American Review,) that the whole trouble originates in a radical defect in our municipal system, and that all attempts at reform, even by State legislation, which have been essayed, but which political greed may evade by so raising the valuation as to nullify any statute fixing a maximum amount of taxation, can only touch the surface of the organization, and not abate but merely diminish the scope of the mismanagement and the amount of the waste,—that, in the language of the writer already referred to, "it does not cure the evil nor destroy its living roots. The evil principle lies in this, that the party that creates the liability is not the party that supplies the funds. The party in real interest is not the party really in control. One disburses at will the money which the other is compelled to raise. It is an association of citizen stockholders, where the owners of a minority of the stock control the majority of ownership and interest."

The recent discussion goes on to submit, that while universal suffrage is our rule of political government and justly applied to State and Nation in their respective legislative and executive functions, it is not properly applicable to a municipal corporation, which more resembles an insurance or manufacturing corporation than a political government, a simple business organization, in which some citizens have invested much more largely than others and where some have not invested at all—that municipal suffrage should therefore be confined to the two conditions of community of interest and of liability—that non-taxpayers and payers of a poll tax only have no interest which demands equality of representative force in the municipality, no just interest whatever which is not represented in the same or a greater degree by the tax-payers generally, and no interest at all which is affected by liabilities created against the corporation—that the maxim which joins representation to taxation leaves them outside in its application to municipal affairs,—that we here find a sound principle which would justify a limitation of municipal suffrage to property owners and to the payers of taxes, who are affected by the liabilities to be created and by the expenditures made within the municipal jurisdiction.

And the conclusion logically follows the premises, that in all municipal elections and proceedings there should be a limitation of suffrage and a classification of voters, that those having the larger interest should have the larger power, the power being proportioned to the extent of the interest.

I have thus stated the whole argument, both because it is full of food for serious thought, and because the startling character of the proposed mode of relief affords the best illustration of what is believed to be the gravity of the evil which it is sought to remedy.

Now, fellow citizens, we have had no Tammany or Tweeds, no peculating or defaulting officers, or corrupt and controlling rings. We have pledged no credit of the town for railways or other speculative works outside the legitimate province of town administration. Our officials have disbursed no moneys not regularly appropriated, and for the purposes and within the limits prescribed by the citizens in town meeting, (the report, to-day, of the Committee having in charge the construction of this building, furnishes a timely illustration,) and thus far we have experienced no such evil nor had reason to apprehend such danger as would justify our entertaining any proposition which would limit the utmost equality of popular suffrage. For born and bred in one of those little democracies which we have been taught to regard as the best nurseries of freemen, which even philosophic foreign observers like De Tocqueville have declared to be the realization of the most perfect ideals of popular government, in which the rich and the poor, the highest and the humblest, have equal rights, equal privileges, and equal powers, we should naturally shrink from any invasion of what we have always deemed to be the very foundation of our institutions, the true source of our prosperity, and the palladium of our liberties.

But, fellow citizens, we have not been altogether exempt, nor in the nature of things could we be, from the influences which during the last generation or two have been remoulding American society, and, like other communities, as our population has increased its component elements have changed. People from other climes and reared under different influences have become part and parcel of our body politic. Meanwhile the rural hamlets have become busy villages, and the villages have swollen into a compact, populous and opulent town, so full of varied industries and interests and so alive with activity and energy, as to have many of the characteristics and wants of a city. Is it strange, then, that we should have been drawn into the rush and whirl of modern life, or have felt somewhat the disturbing influences which radiate from metropolitan centres, or that our town meetings should be in danger of becoming less of deliberative assemblies, that there should be not so much of careful consideration and cautious action and more of excitement and haste, and the consequent liability to the adoption of questionable measures under the pressure of temporary agitation or the spur of popular impulse.

To ascertain how these natural and inevitable tendencies are to be met, and, so far as may be, guarded against and overcome, is the question of the hour. I need not add that it is one of supreme interest. And it seems to me that the answer is to be found and relief and security obtained, not by resort to those radical measures deemed requisite where the disease is so malignant as to suggest such heroic treatment, but simply in a strict adherence to the rule and practice laid down by our fathers, and which with increasing struggles we have substantially maintained to this day, and that is, together with a personal devotion to and religious sense of individual responsibility for whatever concerns the town, the strict exclusion, the absolute divorce of party politics from all municipal affairs, that in all town matters, in the choice of its officers, the regulation of its internal economy, its administration, its schools, its police and every other department, its appropriations and disbursements, no thought of party politics, no idea of party advantage, preferment or triumph should enter in to disturb the judgment or control the conduct of the citizen. This, in my judgment, is all the remedy which any ailment of ours requires: this is the regimen which has hitherto kept us reasonably healthy and sound, and which can cure any existing and prevent all threatened ills. For President and Governor, for member of Congress and the General Court, for all such officers as are properly representative of political obligations and duties, let the citizen vote as his conscience dictates and his choice directs. In all matters of National and State politics let him, if he will, be true to his party and loyal to his political creed. But when he comes to act as a citizen of the town, let him know no party allegiance, nor be controlled any more by political affinities than he would be by considerations of religious belief. Here, at least, should be common ground, on which all men of every party and every sect may meet, with but one purpose and a single aim, the best interests and truest welfare of the town.

I know that I am speaking truisms, perhaps stale at that,—but while every one admits the truth in theory, how different and how difficult is its practical recognition. A New England town government is the best of all human systems of government upon which the sun ever shone, because, and only so long as, it is the semblance of a family or association in which each member has and seeks no interest apart or different from that of every other, but where all earnestly and honestly together labor for the common good. And when it ceases to be this, when organized factions seek for supremacy, and partisan measures are attempted by partisan means, and men are chosen to responsible office, to care for our finances and to supervise our schools, not because they are the most intelligent, capable and honest, but because they are noisy politicians, republicans or democrats, advocates of a tariff or free trade, or clamorers for gold or greenbacks, when the mob spirit enters the town meeting, and the prudent counsels of age and experience cease to have influence, and passion and prejudice rule the hour, then the town government has lost its virtue and value and is no longer worth preserving, and the only alternative is a resort to a city charter.

There are cities and cities—we live upon the borders of a fair and goodly one, of whose ancient municipality we once formed a part, whose rare civil, commercial and social history, whose culture and refinement, well-ordered and conservative administration, and ripe development in all the essentials of a prosperous and happy community, have united to give it exalted rank and an honored name and fame,—but the most favored of cities possesses not that best school for freemen, the town meeting, where the townsman is trained up in the very rudiments of self-government, where free debate sharpens the faculties, and full comparison of conflicting views enlarges the mind, and the consciousness of individual responsibility lends to manhood an added dignity and grace, where good sense, sound judgment and noble sentiments can always appeal with success to the popular heart,—those little assemblies in which the old time legislators and statesmen of New England were nurtured and disciplined for their splendid triumphs on larger fields.

There may come a time when our population shall have swollen to such a figure as to make the town form of government cumbrous and impracticable. That time is not reached when the maximum of population required for a city charter is attained. We may have twice twelve thousand inhabitants and still find our truest welfare in our present system. Far distant be the day when the indifference to civic duties of intelligence, culture and wealth, the aggressions of ignorance and vice, the successful wiles of demagogues and the spirit of party and misrule shall drive us for protection to a form of government in which, under the most favorable circumstances, the true individuality and personal identity of the citizen are limited or lost, and where elected authority is or may be so nearly independent of proper responsibility.

My friends, I have spoken earnestly in this matter because I feel deeply. For nearly two-score years, almost since I arrived at manhood, have I been a citizen of this town. I have shared in its fortunes and enjoyed its honors. Most of those who in my early days led in its councils and bore its burdens are gone. God's benediction go with them! A few yet linger, to grace us with their presence and guide us by their wisdom. God spare them to us for yet many years! A new generation has grown up, and still another is coming upon the stage. Both to those who have passed away, and to the fathers and the sons who now fill the busy scene, I owe an unspeakable debt of gratitude. And so, my friends, I have used this opportunity with which your unfailing kindness has indulged me, not to discourse upon themes which might have been more entertaining or afforded a better field for rhetorical display, but to make a few plain suggestions upon a serious subject, which may possibly be of practical service. If even in the humblest degree this result has been reached, my highest endeavor will have been attained.

And now, fellow citizens, as we dedicate this House of the Town, let us dedicate ourselves anew to the service of the town. All our dearest interests are indissolubly bound up with it. So far as our daily comforts and happiness are concerned, it is more to us than State or Nation—for

"How small, of all that human hearts endure,
That part which laws or kings can cause or cure."

It is our home, and holds all that we most fondly treasure. It has been the scene of the joys which have cheered and the sorrows which have saddened or sanctified our lives. It has given us protection and shelter, peaceful days and nights of quiet rest, kind neighbors, domestic bliss, the delights of friendship, the benefits of knowledge and the blessings of religion. In its soil the loved ones who have gone repose, and here will be our own last resting place on earth. Then, by all the memories of the past, by what we are and what we hope for in the future, let us guard well its honor and protect its interests. As good and law abiding men and women, by example and precept, by sobriety and industry, by enterprise and thrift, by a wise liberality in all that will make it eligible for business and attractive as a place of residence, yet by prudence and economy, by fostering its charities, its churches and its schools, and by the cultivation of every social and moral virtue, let us strengthen and adorn and build it up. In all our doings and deliberations let us banish every selfish thought of party, sect or nationality, and act only as our own independent judgments and honest purposes for the right shall dictate.

Thus, in our day and generation, shall we best serve and save our town; thus shall we preserve the heritage of the fathers, secure to our children their birthright, fear God, and honor the State.

In no kind of retail stores has Lynn shown greater improvements, in the last ten years, than in those pertaining to furniture and house furnishing goods; and as a notable example of rapid growth and splendid success, we point to the establishment of Messrs. Welch & Cummings, whose advertisement appears on this page. After visiting several of the largest furniture warerooms in Boston, we confess that we were surprised to find in Messrs. Welch & Cummings' store as great variety and as fine a stock as any we had seen, and at prices even lower than those of the Boston houses. We suspect that a great measure of their success is due to their strict adherence to the principle of one price for all, and to the fact that they warrant all their goods. A visit to their store will convince the most skeptical that there is no need to go to Boston for anything in their line, and the manner in which you will be received, whether you buy or not, will render your visit a visit of pleasure.

ART IN THE HOUSHOLD, as illustrated at the art furniture rooms of Arthur Dixwell, 4 Park street, has most attractive charms for all who appreciate the influence excited by a combination of elegance and comfort in the home. At Mr. Dixwell's rooms the admirers of artistic house furnishing will find brass goods in exquisite designs, specialties in leather, engravings and etchings, burnished or bronze mirror frames, screens, Japanese embroidery, and scores of other articles which go to make rooms at once cosey and elegant. Mr. Dixwell being an acknowledged authority on such matters, purchasers can consult his taste with advantage to themselves.—Boston Transcript.

My Old Woman and I.

BY JOHN BROUGHAM.

We have crossed the bridge o'er the middle of life,
My old woman and I,
Taking our share in the calm and the strife,
With the travellers passing by,
And though on our pathway the shadows are rife,
There's a light in the western sky.

Some losses and crosses of course we've had,
My old woman and I;
But, bless you! we never found time to be sad,
And very good reason why;
We were busy as bees, and we weren't so mad
As to stop in our work to cry.

On our changeable road as we journeyed along,
My old woman and I,
The kindly companions we met in the throng
Made our lives like a vision fly,
And therefore the few that imagined us wrong
Scarcely cost us a single sigh.

The weak and the weary we've striven to cheer,
My old woman and I;
For we each of us thought that our duty while here
Was to do as we'd be done by,
In hope to exhibit a balance clear
When the reckoning day is nigh.

TABLE TALK.—Every lady who presides t a table is interested to know how she can depend upon having things come upon the table as she would them. How often are remarks like this made: "This is just my fate; when I especially want a nice thing, somehow or other it turns out poor."

A lady expects company for tea. She orders, for instance, biscuits, and they are brought to the table heavy and indigestible. How many housekeepers can testify to mortification, as well as disappointment, under such circumstances! It may not, however, have occurred to them that it is not always the "cook's fault." Your biscuits, cakes, pot-pies, puddings, etc., etc., cannot be raised with earth or worthless substitutes, and it becomes your own fault when you permit any Baking Powder to come into your kitchen about which you know absolutely nothing as to its purity or healthfulness.

The market is flooded with "low-priced" Baking Powders, gotten up to make an unjust profit by unscrupulous manufacturers and dealers, and it is worthy the attention of all housekeepers to note there is at least one brand of Baking Powder distinctly sold upon its merits, and which can be relied upon for uniform strength and purity. The Royal Baking Powder, now known almost the world over as a standard article, has stood the test of nearly a quarter of a century, and its friends among the ladies are legion.

Some men fill the air with their strength and sweetness, as the orchards in October fill the air with ripe fruit. Some women cling to their own houses like the honeysuckle over the door, yet like it, fill all the region with their subtle goodness.

The first thing a young man does when he sees a friend with a new hat on, is to take it off and serenely try it on his own head. When a young lady sees one of her acquaintances with a new bonnet, she just lifts up her nose and serenely wonders "where the thing got that fright."

There is a trackless waste of difference to a man between the request, "Will you lend me a quarter?" and the invitation, "Will you take a drink?"

I feel that the heavens above,
The angels whispering one another,
Can know, among their burning tears of love
None so devotional as that of "Mother."

Love those who show you your faults.—Bossuet.

Healthy People Sometimes Laugh

At the sufferings of dyspeptics, and say that their pains and distresses are imaginary. This is not meant for cruelty, but it is cruelty, all the same. A person who has a crooked foot, or a wounded hand, or a sightless eye, calls forth sympathy by the exhibition of the defective member. If the dyspeptics sufferer's stomach could be placed on exhibition, the cause of his distress would be apparent.

The man with a troublesome stomach often suffers quite as much as the man with a broken leg, but is far less likely to receive sympathy.

Sympathy is good for sufferers, as far as it goes. But Brown's Iron Bitters is better, for it strikes at the root of these troubles, and cures disease. Disappointed dyspeptics, weary of having tried many experiments in seeking cure, will do well to make one fair trial of Brown's Iron Bitters, and report the result. That this well-tried family medicine will thus diminish the quantity of human suffering is an established fact. 10

The Peabody Press.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

CONSIDERABLE OF our space is given this week to the dedication exercises of our new Town Building. We believe all our readers in town, and especially the sons and daughters of Peabody, who are not now residents of their native place, will be interested in an account of the services. It is an eventful occasion. For the past twenty-five years, at intervals, as the more courageous of our citizens have expresed their convictions, has the erection of such an edifice as we are now permitted to look upon, been agitated Many public spirited citizens, who longed to see such a building, have gone to their rest.

But at last, the town has what she has for so many years needed—a building centrally located, capacious and ornate in its construction, and where all the proper business of our town can be transacted without disadvantage to any one.

Peabody may well be proud of it. No town or city in the county can surpass us in this respect. The convenience of all its offices, the ready access either to the small hall or the larger one above, the superiority of its construction—all do credit to the architect and artisans who have had part or share in its construction or furnishing. All have worked in harmony. The committee have been zealous and painstaking in their service to the town and there is no member of it who will not look back with pride to his honorable service, as the practicability and utility of such a building shall be demonstrated more fully in time to come.

WE would respectfully inform our readers that we have published an elegant picture of the new Town Hall, from drawings made especially for us, and engraved by Geo. H. Walker & Co., of Boston. In one corner, also, is a picture of the Soldiers' Monument. We shall put them in the hands of canvassers and they will also be on sale at our office at 50 cents each. Those of our readers, out of town, who are still interested in the town, and desire one of these pictures, can obtain them by mail, postpaid, by sending us the regular price. Sample copies, all framed, can be seen at our office.

Secure your seats early for "Virginia" to-morrow night, at Hazen A. Spaulding's.

DEDICATION

OF THE TOWN HALL.

This afternoon the dedication exercises of the new town hall took place. Yesterday was devoted to the finishing touches, to the cleaning up of all the rooms, and no one save the members of the committee and the workmen were admitted. The doors were opened at one o'clock, and the hall was soon filled. The Salem Brass Band were engaged for both afternoon and evening. The exercises commenced with music, March "New World," by the band, after which the report of the committee, by its chairman, Rufus H. Brown, Esq., was presented and the keys were delivered, the building being formally delivered to the town. Mr. Brown spoke as follows.

MR. CHAIRMAN AND CITIZENS:—

Your Committee to whom the erection of this building was entrusted are happy to present their report, but before making a statement of their doings and giving an account of their expenditures, will briefly refer to the action of the town regarding the appropriation.

For many years the erection of a new Town House was the subject of thought and discussion by our citizens, and while the greater part of them admitted the necessity of a larger and better hall for public gatherings, some suitable rooms in which the different boards could meet, and also a safe deposit for the accumulated records of the town, yet not until about three years since, at the annual meeting of March 1880, was the subject brought formally before the town, and a committee chosen to take it into consideration, and to report at the next annual meeting. That committee, for reasons not now very apparent, did not meet during the year, consequently no report was made; but a renewed interest being manifested at the annual meeting in March, 1881, it was again referred to the committee, with Instructions to examine different lots for a site, also to give an estimate of the cost of a building.

The committee after attending to that duty were unanimous in recommending, at the next annual meeting, the Upton lot as most suitable, that it could be purchased (for a town house only) for the sum of fifteen thousand dollars, and that a building could be erected thereon for the sum of sixty thousand dollars. It was then voted to purchase the Upton lot for the sum named, also the Osgood lot adjoining, at an additional cost of seven thousand dollars. It then became apparent after voting so generous a sum for a location, that the amount recommended for the building would be inadequate to erect such a one as would meet the expectations of the town. The matter was again referred to the committee, after some changes in its members, who were instructed to procure plans, and report at a subsequent meeting, which was held May 8th, 1882, when a plan of the present building was submitted. After accepting the plan it was voted that the sum of seventy-five thousand dollars be appropriated for the purpose of erecting and furnishing a town house, in accordence with the plans presented.

The services of Mr. Rufus Sargent of Newburyport, as architect, were then secured, who was also to take charge of the erection of the building.

After receiving proposals from several builders, the contract was awarded to Messrs. J. M. Parsons & Co., of Salem, for the entire structure, excepting the granite work, which included the trimmings and portico; that being furnished by the Bodwell Granite Company, of Hallowell, Maine.

In the construction of this building particular attention has been given by your committee to its ventilation, to the convenient exit of audiences, to the extinguishing of fires, in case of need, to strength, thoroughness of work, generosity of space in rooms, corridors, etc. Adjoining the rooms of the treasurer and water board, fireproof vaults have been constructed of sufficient capacity to contain all the accumulated records, and those for many years to come.

The construction of the exterior of the building has been such that it is calculated to withstand the winds and frosts of many winters. A more imposing appearance could have been made by the addition of a high tower, projections on window caps, etc., but they would have involved much greater expenditure, and would also have carried with them the necessity of frequent and costly repairs. Simplicity in construction was the aim of your committee, believing this to be more in harmony with the spirit of our people, and in better adaptation to the uses and purposes desired.

Of the architect, who has also superintended the construction of the building, too much cannot be said in commendation of his good taste, sound judgment, and strict integrity.

To the contractors the committee tender their sincere thanks for the excellency of workmanship displayed, of which they, as well as ourselves, may justly feel proud.

As regards the expenditures made by the committee in behalf of the town, we are glad to be able to state that for the purchase of the land and the construction of the building, and such equipment and furnishing thereof as was originally contemplated, either by the committee or the town, the disbursements have been kept within the sums originally appropriated therefor. But it was found necessary that some things should be done which had not been at first taken into the account, as in respect to the vaults and safes, the counters, desks, tables and chairs for the offices, and the proper furnishing of the halls, and which it was believed could be done more economically now than at any future time, and accordingly after full consultation with the Selectmen, (whose generous co-operation throughout our labors we desire gratefully to acknowledge,) the committee have incurred such additional necessary expenses as seemed to be within the scope of the authority given them, and as in their judgement was for the best interest of the town, and such as the citizens would cheerfully approve. The portico which adorns the front of the building, costing some three thousand dollars, was not in the first estimate of cost. It was an after thought, and as now carried out gives a finish and character to the whole architectural effect, which could not well be spared.

Appended to the report is a statement of the whole account in detail. For the present purposes a brief summary may be sufficient, which is as follows:

Cash paid Messrs. J. M. Parsons & Co.,		$49,933.85
" " the Bodwell Granite Co.,		9,996.62
" " for Heating apparatus, gas fittings and fixtures		3,246.42
" " for seating both of the halls		3,944.47
" " Frescoing Halls and Corridors		1,300.00
" " for Scenery, Frames and hoisting apparatus for stage		850.00
" " Eastern Railroad for freight		952.69
" " Iron Girders		614.82
" " Architect		2,300.00
" " Brass railings for Court-Room and orchestra		376.00
" " Burglar proof, wrought-iron doors for vaults		650.00
" " Desks, tables and chairs for offices		501.75
" " Miscellaneous, including locks for cells, grading, stone and wood work, fuel, etc., etc.,		2,352.58
Making an aggregate of		$76,920.20

These comprise all the accounts, excepting a claim for extra work made by the principal contractors, which at the present time is not adjusted, but which we are in hopes soon will be, and the completed account placed in the hands of the town treasurer.

And now, gentlemen of the Board of Selectmen, it gives us great pleasure to place in the hands of your chairman the keys of this completed building. Here can the chosen servants of the town meet in rooms that are both ample and cheerful, and in the hall below the citizens at their annual meetings may gather and in comfort transact the business of the town. In the basement comfortable rooms are provided for the police and night watch, also rooms for the transgressors, where they may securely contemplate the justice that awaits them in the court nearby. In this beautiful hall what pleasures are in store for those who may gather here to listen to the lecturer, the orator, sweet music, or to witness the presentation of the drama on a stage that is both spacious and convenient.

Let those of our citizens who may think the building larger than our necessities demand at the present time, remember that in erecting public buildings, provision should be made for the future, as well as the present, and that when we have become a city, with double our present numbers, it may then be found none too large, even if so at present.

To the citizens of the town from whom this charge was received, and whose servants we have been, I would say in behalf of your committee, that they have given to the construction and furnishing of this building their best thought and judgment, for which a full recompense is received in the conviction that it will be appreciated and enjoyed by you, and your children, and your children's children, for many generations.

S. A. Southwick, Esq., the chairman of the Board of Selectmen, then accepted the building in behalf of the town in a few well chosen remarks, after which the band played a selection from Verdi's Macbeth, when the prayer of dedication was offered by Rev. W. G. Sperry, pastor of the South Church. Another selection of music, and the address was delivered by Hon. Alfred A. Abbott. This address will be found in full on the second page of the PRESS. The band at the close of the eloquent peroration of Mr. Abbott, played Day Dreams. America was sung by the assembly, and the benediction was pronounced. This evening the Salem Brass Band will give a concert, assisted by Miss Gertrude Franklin of Boston, vocalist. The following is the programme arranged:

ORIGIN OF THE PRESENT BUILDING.

At the Annual Town Meeting held Monday, March 15, 1880, a committee of five was appointed to consider the expediency and expense of building a new Town House, and all matters in relation to the subject. This committee was as follows: Franklin Osborn, Jr., S. F. Blaney, John Pinder, Rufus H. Brown, Thos. Carroll. They were instructed to report at the next annual meeting.

At the Town Meeting, March 7, 1881, it was voted to continue the committee on the new Town House, and that they report at the next annual meeting. S. F. Blaney spoke in favor of the project and his remarks seemed to meet with considerable favor.

On Monday, March 6, 1882, the report was presented. It had been known for some weeks previous to the meeting that the committee were ready to report and that they favored the purchase of the lot corner of Lowell and Chestnut streets. Mr. Rufus H. Brown presented the report, which was a substantial recommendation that the town purchase the lot above mentioned. It measured about 25,000 feet, and they could purchase it for the purpose of a Town Hall only for $15,000. The committee also recommended an appropriation of $60,000, with which to build a new town house. Mr. S. Francis Blaney stated that this report was not the only one that could be made, and that he had signed it to bring the matter before the town; he himself thought $60,000 not enough to appropriate for such a building as would be a credit to the town, thought $100,000 not too much including the land, and he was in favor of the purchase of the entire square, including the Osgood property.

He then moved an amendment to the report of the committee, that the town appropriate $22,000 for the purchase of the entire estate. After considerable discussion the town so voted; and also that the second part of the report be re-committed to the same committee and that they be authorized to procure plans and specifications including cost of such a building as in their judgment was needed by the town. Mr. Blaney declined to serve on the committee and C. Warren Osborn was chosen in his stead, and on motion of Mr. Brown, Mayhew S. Clark was added to the committee.

About the first of May it became known that the committee had agreed upon a plan; in the interim between the town meeting and this time they had visited many places where new halls had been erected, and had seen many plans. The defects in these halls as pointed out to them, were studiously avoided, and as the result of the deliberations of the committee and consultation with Rufus Sargent, Esq., the architect, the plan was placed on exhibition at the office of Sanger, Hood & Co., and a special town meeting was called for Monday evening, May 8th, 1882. About 300 people were in attendance at that time, and after Mr. Brown had presented his report, explaining the building at some length, he offered the following recommendations:

Voted, That the sum of $75,000 be appropriated for the purpose of building and furnishing a Town House, in accordance with the plan and specification presented with the committee's report, and the treasurer be authorized to issue ten years' 4 per cent. bonds to said amount of $75,000.

Voted, That a Sinking Fund be established for the payment and redemption of said bonds, to which fund the town shall contribute each year an amount, to be raised annually by taxation, not less than 8 per cent. of the said amount of $75,000.

Voted, That three commissioners of said Sinking Fund be elected by ballot for 1, 2 and 3 years respectively.

Considerable discussion followed the report of Mr. Brown, Mr. Jonathan King was in favor of postponing the whole matter; S. F. Blaney was in favor of obtaining other plans, but after a ringing speech by Hon. Alfred A. Abbott, the report was accepted including the recommendation by a vote 121 to 29.

The committee at once proceeded to the work assigned them. The specifications were printed and they advertised for bids for the erection of the building. A room was engaged in Dustin's building over the PRESS office and fitted up for the use of the committee. Thirty-two bids were put in, and after they had been all opened, and several meetings had been held, the contract was awarded so Joseph N. Parsons & Co., of Salem, for the entire job, with the exception of the cut granite, the contract for which was given to the Bodwell Granite Co., of Hallowell, Me. The firm of J. N. Parsons & Co. were well known, having been in business some ten years, and having built some of the prominent structures in that city among which were the Perley Block, and the First Church Building. The buildings on the lot were at once advertised for sale, and were disposed of at auction by Charles Odell, Esq., of Salem, to the entire satisfaction of the committee. They were speedily removed, and work at once begun. Ground was broken July 6th, 1882. The first cargo of granite arrived Thursday, Aug. 10th. The cost of the building in its entirety is given in the report of the chairman of the committee which is published in another column.

DESCRIPTION OF THE BUILDING.

The building is three stories high, and constructed from plans drawn by Rufus Sargent, of Newburyport, as elsewhere stated. It is of brick with trimmings of Hallowell granite, eight rows of which belt the entire building. The main edifice is 106x90 with a front projection for a vestibule and portico 54x30. It has a mansard roof and towers the height from the ground to the cornice being 60 feet, and to the top of the cupola on the central projection 98 feet. Over the main entrance is a portico which was not in the original plan, supported by pillars of polished red granite with composite capitals, and to which ascent is made by granite steps. Although the building is nominally three stories high, the main entrance leads the visitor at once to the second story where is the small hall, there being only one flight of stairs to ascend to reach the Opera House above. The main entrance to the basement is on the Chestnut street side, where access is attained independent of the entrance to the main halls in front. For the benefit of our readers who have not seen the building, we will enter with them the door of the Chestnut street entrance and thence ascend to the hall above, which is the crowning glory of the edifice. As we pass this entrance the first room on our left is where justice will hold her sway. It is a light room 24x35, finished in hard wood, and furnished with cane seat chairs, a brass railing enclosing the bar, and a raised dais on which is a desk for Justice Merrill. The opposite door, opening into a room on the corner of the building, overlooking the entire Square, will be the headquarters of Chief Peasley, and where he will be happy to receive his friends from this day out. The next room is the office of police proper, furnished with eight closets where the members of the force will be able to keep their hard tack and cheese without fear of molestation. There are two other rooms on the right, the one on the corner being devoted to the use of the janitor. Mr. Patterson will be very comfortably situated here, when he has time to take a bit of leisure from the care of the building and offices, which we imagine will not be a great while at a time. This room is 13x16 and is about the same size as the rest on this side. Opposite are twelve cells; 8 being 6 ft. 6 in. by 8 ft. 6 in.; 2, 8 ft. by 6 ft. 6 in.; 2, 9 ft. 4 in. by 6 ft. 6 in. All the dividing walls are of brick and the cells are arranged in two sections. There are also two tramp rooms 12x12, where will be provided accommodations for the night's lodging which will be furnished by Chief Peasley. On the southwest corner is a room which is 18x25, and fitted with all the conveniences for a kitchen. There are two toilet rooms on this floor, two more on the floor of the small hall, and two for the ante rooms connected with the stage in the large hall. In the basement, also, is the boiler room 30x22, and coal room 28x19. In the former are two low pressure horizontal tubular boilers, 3 feet in diameter and 13 feet long, made by Lally & Russell of Boston, and these furnish heat which supplies the building, the basement of which is heated by circulating pipes, there being here 2600 square feet of radiating surface, and 3000 feet of pipe. The other stories are heated by radiators of which there are 28 in the building.

The entrance to the story above is at the front or main entrance to the building, although there are three flights of stairs from this story to the basement, two at the rear end of the corridors and one at the front. A handsome vestibule first meets the eye. Each side on the right and left are the broad stairways to the large hall. In front, up a few steps is the smaller hall, which will be used for caucuses, town meetings, and any occasion of public interest which does not require the use of the larger one above. This hall is 42x60, with fourteen feet stud, and is fully one-third larger than the old town hall. It is furnished with folding movable settees,—there being seats here for 500,—made by C. B. Demarest, of Brooklyn. This hall is finished in hard wood, with walls of a neutral tint, and has eight ventilators, four at the bottom and four at the top, and here we will say that the facilities for ventilation are of the best, each ventilator connecting with separate ventiducts to the cupola—there being four in every room outside of the halls. Upon the corridor at the left of the entrance is a large room 28x24 which is intended as the Selectmen's room, and one 18x28 connecting, for the use of the School Committee. In the corner over the Chief of Police room, is the room of

HOME HAPPENINGS.

At about 8 o'clock last Sunday evening, as Officer Thomas N. Barnabee was patroling down Main street, he saw a party of young roughs standing on the corner of Wallis street, near Sutton's Block, making considerable noise. The officer remonstrated with them and told them to make less noise as it was very appropriate on Sunday evening; he had hardly finished speaking when he received a severe blow on the side of his face by one of the party which knocked him to the ground with considerable violence. Recovering himself he arose to his feet again only to receive another blow from the miscreants and considerable rough handling. After striking the officer the second time the party immediately fled toward Salem. Securing the service of Officers Peasley and Cummings, he started in pursuit but was unable to overtake them. Such persons as these, if caught, should be made an example of.

The Cucumber Club tendered a reception to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis R. Power of Marblehead, at Rechabite Hall last Monday evening, it being the tenth anniversary of their marriage. At an early hour the two halls were brilliantly lighted, the upper being the dining hall, while the lower was used for dancing. A large number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Power were present. The Salem Cadet orchestra furnished music. After supper the hall was cleared for the use of the children. Mr. and Mrs. Power have been married 10 years. Many were present from other cities and towns, and the affair was one that will be long remembered. Mr. Charles H. Litchman presented Mr. and Mrs. Power with a black walnut chamber set, and Mr. Herbert Caskin a silver ice pitcher for W. P. Goss of Portland.

The following named gentlemen were elected as the board of officers of the American Hibernian Benevolent Association, at their meeting, Monday evening:—President, John J. Bartlett; Vice President, Michael Cunningham; Secretary, James Buckley; Collector, P. J. Heffernan; Treasurer, John Linehan; Auditor, J. J. McCann; Directors, Thomas O'Keefe, Patrick O'Keefe, P. J. Meehan, Wm. Walsh, John Pease. Visiting Committee, Richard Cumane, John Murray, Bart. O'Conner, Michael Cummings, Richard Bagley, John Daley; Librarian, Thomas Sherry; Asst. Librarian, Bart. O'Connor.

We call attention to the advertisement in another column, of J. D. & J. W. Eaton, and particularly to the letter which forms a part of it, which, coming unsolicited from a person not personally known to the firm, must be considered a valuable testimonial. Messrs. Eaton have a large stock of stoves, furnaces and ranges of most approved pattern, which they are always ready to show customers. Their new store on Washington street is conveniently situated for our Peabody friends who buy in Salem, being but two doors from the horse railroad office.

At a recent meeting of the School Committee a petition was made to have the large hall in the Centre school divided by a partition and have one room for a school room and the other for recitation purposes. Carpenters have begun work and the alterations will soon be completed. On Wednesday the school was in session all day and the Saturday morning session will be omitted so that the carpenters can rush the work and not annoy the pupils with noise.

A buggy belonging to Dr. C.C. Pike, which was left standing on the side of the road on Lynn street, while the Doctor was making a professional visit last Tuesday evening, was badly damaged, by being run into by a team belonging to Quint, the hulled corn man, of Lynn. The buggy was overturned and the horse considerably frightened, but fortunately did not run. The place where the accident occurred was very dark and probably that was the cause of the accident.

This morning Mr. Geo. O. Pierce had a very narrow escape from what might have proved a fatal accident. As he and officer Cummings were putting the flag on top of the town house and Mr. Pierce was standing on the curved side of the tower, his foot slipped and just as he was about to slide over the roof, officer Cummings caught him by the clothing and probably saved his life.

One of our smart young men was entertaining a crowd the other day, by telling about the extravagance of a man who was "selling 5-cent nickels for two and three cents a piece." It was some time before his auditors figured out that two and three cents made five cents, and then smarty was incontinently "fired out."

A horse recently purchased by Mr. Henry Clinton, which had seemed "out of sorts" for a few days, died on Saturday. The owner could not afford to lose him.

A very fine example of a planet in a stationery phase is now exhibited in Jupiter, one of the morning stars throughout the month now rising at about half past nine.

A runaway horse under the saddle, with no rider, dashed out of Mill street last Thursday morning, and proceeded down Main street towards Salem, doing no damage.

Moulton & Johnson, the enterprising theatre managers of Salem, will erect a large bill board 50x11, in front of the Eastern railroad passenger station in this town.

Mr. Patrick Brett, on Aborn street, was given a surprise party last Friday night by his employes, and a handsome easy chair was given his wife during the evening.

A carpenter named Lucas claims he was robbed of $80 on Wednesday of last week in Boston. It is evident he had received hard usage as there was a cut over one eye.

At the last regular meeting of Jordan Lodge, F. & A. M., Chas. E. Teague was elected W. M., Lawrence Purtell S. W., W. C. Beckett, J. W., Calvin Pierce, Treasurer and C. H. Goulding, Secretary.

Next week, the closing week of Lawrence Barrett at the Park Theatre in Boston, there will be a change of bill nightly. He will appear in Richelieu, Yorrick's Love, Julius Cæsar and other of his impersonations.

The Lynn horse cars began to run on the new standard of time on the first trip in the morning and Mr. Geo. Stevens put back his clock in the horse car station, probably being the first in town to conform to the change.

This is the way they put it out West: "We will send a copy of the Standard free to every preacher in this county who will send us notice of church sociables, marriages, deaths, disasters and diversions in their flocks or among the wicked wanderers of this wet and weary world."

O. B. Chadwick acted as head usher to-day at the dedication of the new hall, with the following assistants: Wm. W. Pinder, Chas. O. Warner, Ira F. Pray, John Hanrahan, Fred Tigh, Thomas Murray, Arthur Clark, S. W. King, R. H. Wilkinson, A. Abbott, Jr., Edward W. Blaney, Dr. W. O. Gray, and Harry Spofford.

Last Sunday evening a party of men who were evidently looking for a place where a dog fight could be indulged in, took their favorite canines and visited Mt. Vernon street; when opposite the residence of Thomas Carroll, a dog belonging to his brother William was seen on the sidewalk. They took the dog which they carried and threw him onto Mr. Carroll's, when the dogs immediately clinched. The owner of the dog who was in the house, hearing the noise, came out and ordered them to part the animals, which they refused. Instead of doing this they made a severo assault on Mr. Carroll, but one of he party was immediately knocked down; seeing he had made a mistake, he endeavored to get away, but did not succeed until he got badly punished. The rest of the party fled.

A dog belonging to Henry Bagley was shot on Central street last Saturday evening for biting a child of Charles McCarthy on Endicott street.

ALL FOR NOTHING.

WHY THE DOCTOR WAS DISGUSTED, AND WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN DONE WITHOUT HIM.

"Well, wife," said Dr. E.—, as he entered his house, which was situated in a cosy village in central New York, "I have got back from a long and dreary ride away down among the mountains, and all to no purpose whatever. The messenger said the man wouldn't live till morning, when the fact is he had only an ordinary attack of colic. If the simpletons had only had sense enough to put a BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER on his stomach he would have been all right in an hour or two. But some folks are slow to learn, added the old physician, swallowing the cup of steaming tea which his wife had just poured for him.

Doctor E— was right, yet people do learn, even though slowly. The rapid increasing use of Benson's plaster proves this beyond question, and the good doctors are certain to be saved much of their needless toil. In all diseases capable of being affected by a plaster Benson's acts efficiently and at once. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the centre. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

Miscellaneous.

FRIENDLY ADVICE TO YOUNG HOUSEKEEPERS.—To bake potatoes quickly, pour boiling water over them and let stand a minute or so before putting into the oven.

Keep your salt and pepper boxes on a little shelf back of or near the stove and save your steps.

When your dish-towels begin to wear out, fold them together, the best outside, as small or large as you like, and run together around and across through the centre with coarse thread, then when you require a new dish-cloth you will not take 'any old rag."

It is a good idea to keep a supply of ironing-holders made up; take old cloths, fold as many thicknesses as you want and cover with a new piece of heavy cloth, tacking in the centre, then you can have a clean holder when necessary, without having to stop and make one.

An oven-holder should be made of heavy cloth, two thicknesses and fully half-a-yard square; an old grain sack makes them. This will save you many a burn and keep you from using your dish towel or apron.

Keep your stove blacking, brush and plate handy, and after dinner each day brush off your stove, and you will find it much nicer than washing it off; besides, with an occasional brushing your stove will always look nicely, and if your stove is not kept looking clean the whole kitchen looks untidy.

A rag saturated in kerosene and dipped into whiting, for cleansing tinware, is much better than anything else we ever used.

When sweeping, dip your broom occasionally in water, hot is best, and keep the dust from flying over everything. Course salt sprinkled over the floor occasionally is said to keep the moths out of the carpet.

A roast is much nicer if, when you put it into the pan to bake, you set it on the hot stove; let it brown on one side, then turn and brown the other; then add the hot water and seasoning and bake in a hot oven and the juice is retained in the meat.

Always get your material for breakfast ready over night; fix the fire already to light, fill the tea-kettle, grind the coffee and prepare the potatoes, and thus you can sleep half an hour longer in the morning.

Every housekeeper should have "a place for everything and everything in its place" framed and hung in a conspicuous place and follow the directions.

A well-ordered house is a paradise on earth. No other earthly pleasure is equal to the calm contentment of the family fireside. The excitement of even successful business is attended with vexation; the enjoyments of travel are associated with fatigue and danger; and even the pleasures of knowledge are combined with bitterness. But the happiness of the fireside is unalloyed.

HAIR WASH.—The yolk of an egg rubbed thoroughly into the hair, and then washed out with soft water, cleanses the scalp and hair remarkably.

It is folly to eat a hearty supper for the pleasure experienced during the brief time it is passing down the throat, at the expense of a whole night of disturbed sleep, and a weary waking in the morning.

I have been very much benefited by one 50 cent bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. When I began using it my Catarrh was so bad I had headache most the whole time and discharged a large amount of filthy matter. That has almost entirely disappeared and I have not had headache since to amount to anything. Please send me two more bottles. John H. Summers, Stephney, Conn.

Cream Balm has given satisfactory results. W. P. Draper, Druggist, Springfield, Mass.

Old age is the night of life, as night is the old age of the day. Still night is full of magnificence, and for many it is more brilliant than the day.

To what slight and poor beginnings may not the greatest results be traced back, even by our own imperfect knowledge!

BEATEN BY WIND AND RAIN.

SAILORS ON THE SEA AND LABORERS ON THE LAND—HELP FOR THE LARBOARD WATCH.

"There is no telling the force of the wind; and the height and rush of the sea was simply appalling. When Cornish, the boatswain, and myself came down from aloft, after furling the main-royal, we were wet through and half dead from the hard toil and the exposure."

So said the mate of the "Grosvenor," when relating the incidents of an Atlantic cyclone, after nearly all the crew had mutinied and left the ship in boats to escape punishment.

Mechanics who labor upon lofty buildings; carpenters, masons, painters and bricklayers, may be called a kind of shore sailors, and that their numbers are not more largely decimated by accident and disease is a marvel. Mr. Jabez Rogers, tuck pointer, house painter, etc., of No. 608 Madison street, Chicago, over a pipe and autumn fire, said to your correspondent:

"No, I am only a young man yet—thirty-five, that's all; but the kind of work I do tells on a fellow's looks and constitution. Last Spring I was about run down with overwork and exposure. I had to give up doing any work myself, and just made out to oversee my men in a sort of half-and-half way. I thought I was played out for good and all. I was racked with a cough, stupified with a cold, and torn and disabled with Rheumatism. Do? I took PARKER'S GINGER TONIC and it cured me. Those three words tell the story—it cured me."

To all persons subject to risk from exposure, PARKER'S GINGER TONIC will commend itself. It purifies the Blood, incites the torpid Liver to healthy activity, and opens the pores of the skin. This is the season of outdoor perils to health. Keep the Tonic near you. Prices 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Hiscox & Co., Chemists, New York.

If you boast of a contempt for the world, avoid getting into debt. It is giving to knats the fangs of vipers;

Better a soft heart and an iron hand than an iron heart and a soft hand.

M. Y. D. SYRUP CO.

The untruthful man makes a poor companion and a worse friend.

PENETRATED TO THE BONE.—Alderman John Baxter, Toronto, Canada, avers that St. Jacobs Oil will penetrate to the bone to drive out pain. I know it, for I have tried it; it hits the mark every time.

The ruin of most men dates from some vacant hour. Occupation is the armour of the soul. There is a satirical poem, in which the devil is represented as fishing for men, and fitting his bait to the taste and business of his prey; but the idler, he said, gave him no trouble, as he bit the naked hook.

MRS. C. W. CHAMBERLIN,

STATE AND ARK ST., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—HER GOOD, KIND WORDS WILL DO MUCH FOR THE AFFLICTED.

Mrs. Chamberlin is the wife of C. W. Chamberlin, an employe in the United States Armory at Springfield, Mass. She says: "Every Spring I have been, for some time past, more or less troubled with nervous debility and weakness. Some years I've been completely run down. My physician has recommended various strengthening and blood medicines, but I never received any permanent benefit until I tried Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. It was recommended to me by Mrs. Newcombe, on State St. I think it a wonderful medicine to give one strength and enliven a person. I have recommended it to family after family among my acquaintances in Springfield, Mass, and FAVORITE REMEDY has done a great deal of good wherever it has been placed. I have a sister, Mrs. Harmon, 29 Tremont St., Lowell, Mass., who was troubled with nervous weakness and loss of strength and appetite, but by using Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY her health was completely restored. I consider it an excellent medicine. Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is used extensively among the Armory men here."

NO, SIR!"

A Scotch minister once said no woman could bear pain as well as man. That is not so. The fact is generally the other way. Mrs. Edward Meyers of Rondout, N. Y., submitted to the operation of the removal of her hand by amputation, without taking ether, or moving a muscle or uttering a groan. Dr. Kennedy, also of Rondout, N. Y., who performed the operation, said he never saw such heroism. The lady's disease was erysipelas, and afterwards the Doctor gave his FAVORITE to cleanse the blood. Mrs. Meyers is now well and strong.

Book Notices.

The Christmas Number of HARPER'S MAGAZINE promises to bring together the most remarkable gathering of authors and artists ever grouped under one (paper) roof. The former include, among others, George William Curtis, John G. Whittier, Miss Thackeray (Mrs. Ritchie), E. P. Roe, William Black, W. D. Howells, George H. Boughton, Austin Dobson, Charles Reade, Edward Everett Hale, and Charles Dudley Warner; while among the artists are E. A. Abbey, James C. Beard, George H. Boughton, F. S. Church, Frederic Dielman, Alfred Fredericks, A. B. Frost, W. Hamilton Gibson, Alfred Parsons, Howard Pyle, C. S. Reinhart, W. L. Sheppard, and Jessie Curtis Shepherd. There will also be illustrations from paintings by G. F. Watts, R. A., and from unpublished sketches by Thackeray, Frederick Walker, and Dante Gabriel Rossetti. The Number will include four plate-paper pages in addition to the usual size of the Magazine.

DEMOREST'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE for December is up to the usual high standard of this most excellent publication. Mrs. Champney's serial, the "Shores of Nothing," is commenced and promises to prove a very interesting story. "Christmas in Bethlehem," and "How We Live in New York," by Jennie June, are articles pleasant to read and profitable to remember. In the way of household adornment and "kitchen art," ladies will find this number invaluable for the practical information that it imparts. The art department is remarkably good, the frontispiece being a richly colored oil picture, called "The Tambourine Girl." An engraving of Jacquet's celebrated painting, "The Minuet," also appears in this number.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE for December is as usual, ahead of all the lady's-books. Splendid as this magazine has been in the past, the present number quite outstrips itself. There are more than a hundred pages of reading-matter; two superb steel plates; a colored pattern, costlier even than a chromo; a colored fashion, double size, printed from steel; and more than half a hundred wood cuts of fashions, work table patterns, etc., etc. The price is but Two Dollars a year to single subscribers. To clubs, it is cheaper still. No other magazine gives such premiums. Address Peterson's Magazine, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia Pa.

BALLOU'S MAGAZINE for December contains the last chapter of Mr. William H. Thomes's "Belle of Australia." Of course all ends well. In the January number of Ballou, Mr. Thomes will begin a new yarn, called "On Land and Sea, or California in the Years 1843, '44, and '45," when the author will give his experience when he was on the coast, collecting hides, before the gold discoveries. Ballou is always fresh and pleasant. It is only $1.50 per annum, or 15 cents a single copy. For sale everywhere. Published by Thomes & Talbot, 23 Hawley Street, Boston.

No intelligent reader can fail to be interested in the contents of the NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW for December. The question of the telegraph has the place of honor in the number, Gardner G. Hubbard pointing out the great advantages that would result from the proposed "Government Control of the Telegraph,". Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin, of Harvard University, shows the "Evils of the Sub-Treasury System." "The Day of Judgment," by Gail Hamilton, is a caustic review of the less amiable moral traits of Thomas Carlyle. Henry George writes of "Overproduction," an idea which he declares to be preposterous, unless more wealth is produced than is wanted. An article on "Railroad and Public Time," by Prof. Leonard Waldo, of the Yale College observatory, explains the system of uniform time standards now being introduced into the railroad service of the United States. Finally, there is a discussion of the question of "Morality without Religion," by F. A. Kider and Prof. A. A. Hodge, of Princeton College. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York, and for sale by booksellers generally.

The December ATLANTIC is notable as containing a remarkable and timely paper on "Luther and his Work," by Frederic H. Hedge, one of the most accomplished German scholars in America, and one of the most competent to estimate adequately the character and influence of Luther. Another important paper is a biographical sketch of Mary Moody Emerson, by Ralph Waldo Emerson. Richard Grant White writes on "Some Alleged Americanisms," showing that many expressions which the English critics dismiss with scorn as Americanisms are really English in their origin and use. Mr. Crawford continues his admirable serial story, "A Roman Singer," which some critics pronounce even better than his stories "Dr. Claudius" and "Mr. Isaacs." Other stories and essays and an unusually full department of Reviews and Contributors' Club complete the December number of this admirable magazine. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

BEYOND THE GATES.—By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of "The Gates Ajar," etc. $1.25.—Ever since "The Gates Ajar" caused such a kind and degree of popular interest, many of the readess of that remarkable book have hoped Miss Phelps would give them a fuller vision of the future life, of which in "The Gates Ajar," she only gave a glimpse. This hope is now gratified. The subject of "Beyond the Gates" is sufficiently indicated by its title. The Boston Journal says of it: It is probably safe to predict that it will be the best read book of the season. For ourselves we must confess to finishing it at one reading. . . . The glimpses of the occupations, joys, and reunions of the heavenly existence—all this is conveyed with a tenderness, a reverence, and a vivid power, which make a profound impression upon the reader's mind. . . . Tde effect of the book is to make this life better worth living, and the next life better worth desiring. The author's concep ions of heaven are wholly pure and lofty, yet warm with human love and interest. They touch the deepest yearnings of the soul and serve to strengthen faith and quicken aspiration.

The first of the winter excursion parties sent out this year to the Pacific coast, by Messrs. Raymond and Whitcomb, arrived at the Hotel del Monte, Monterey, in good health and spirits, on Wednesday of last week. The second, and last party, will leave Boston, December 27, and pass two months at that same delightful resort, after which there will be opportunities to visit San Francisco and many other places.

A Hartford dude thought he had "mashed" a pretty young woman at the Foot-guard fair the other night, and she accepted his attentions in a conspicuous way, greatly to the envy of his fellows. She ate ice-cream and candy with an eye to the profits of the booths, but when he came to offer his escort home, in the hearing of his companions, she excused herself, as she must walk home with her husband. His ice-cream and candy bills were the smallest part of the dude's expenses.

Alden's "LITERARY REVOLUTION," which has accomplished such wonders in the reduction of the cost of the world's choicest literature, while presenting it in excellent, often elegant, form, has been a great mystery to many. If there is any secret about it, Mr. Alden evidently means it shall be an open one. A recent publication summarizes with characteristic pith "The Old way" and "The New Way."

THE OLD WAY:

Charge all the customer will stand and competition permit.

Big discounts to dealers and agents (when competition compels)—let the private buyer take care of himself.

1,000 books, profit, $1 each—$1,000.

Publish the books that will sell.

Take care of "Number One."

THE NEW WAY:

Give the best book possible for the least money possible.

Sell to buyers direct, giving them all possible discounts.

1,000,000 books, profit one cent each, =$10,000.

Publish the books that deserve to sell—merit wins in the end.

To make $1 and a friend is better than $5 profit.

"Push things."—U. S. Grant.

Mr. Alden has just issued a new price list, which, with descriptive catalogue, is sent free to any applicant. Address, John B. Alden, Publisher, 18 Vesey St. New York, P. O. Box 1237.

The following are the heights of the principal monuments, domes, etc.' in the world: St. Antoine column, at Rome, 135 feet; the principal tower of the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, 145; Trajan's column, Rome, 148; Napoleon's column, Paris, 156; Washington monument, Baltimore, 180; the great obelisk, Thebes, 200; Bunker Hill monument, Boston, 223; column at Delhi, 262; Trinity Church steeple, New York, 264; the contemplated new dome of the Capitol, 300; dome of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, 320; tower of Manhus, 350; tower of the Cathedral at Strasburg, 460; dome of St. Peter's Cathedral, Rome, 465; Great Pyramid, 481.

Old Shoes.

How much a man is like old shoes!
For instance, both a soul may lose;
Both have been tanned; both are made tight
By cobblers; both get left and right;

Both need a mate to be complete,
And both are made to go on feet.
They both need heeling, oft are sold,
And both in time turn all to mold.

With shoes the last is first; with men
The first shall be the last; and when
The shoes wear out they're mended new;
When men wear out they're men-dead, too.

They both are trod upon, and both
Will tread on others, nothing loth.
Both have their ties, and both incline
When polished, in the world to shine;
And both peg out—and would you choose
To be a man or be his shoes?

Our whitest pearl we never find;
Our ripest fruit we never reach;
The flowering moments of the mind
Drop half their petals in our speech

We don't say that all the bargains in the city are to be found at our establishment or that no one understands how to run a great retail store except ourselves.

But we do say that our assortments are so complete that there is scarcely anything you can ask for that we have not got on hand; that our prices are low because our

while our business is very large, we can afford to sell cheaply and we do it. All our departments are stocked with new, seasonable goods, our prices as a rule are lower than those charged elsewhere, and we are making this week several special offerings at remarkably low prices.

The blowing of the chime whistle at King Upton's glue works at about ten minutes past one o'clock, Saturday noon, called out the firemen for a small fire, which started in the chemical room, a small building connected with the new building, built last summer. When the department arrived on the spot, which they did in very short order, the fire was under the control of the factory fire brigade, who had three streams of water and two or three chemical extinguishers streams on. Hose five had the first water on from the town dep't, but there was not many seconds between them and Hose one. The fire was soon out, and but trifling damage done, but had the fire occurred at night, there is no knowing where it would have stopped, as the buildings are all of light and inflammable structure The loss is not much over fifty dollars, well covered with insurance. We can score another case of where the fire alarm was confusing, as most of the firemen took it for the regular noon whistle, whereas if the fire alarm telegraph was in use in this town the alarm would have been given two or three minutes sooner.

The alarm as 10.45 Sunday forenoon was caused by a fire in the cellar of the house owned and occupied by Maurice Shea, on Hancock street. The fire was in the cellar, where about a ton of hay was stored for the goats, and it was set by hot ashes dropping out of the chimney. The department made unusually good time, Hose 2 getting the first stream from the hydrant opposite Sullivan's store on Washington street. Hose 1, 4, and 5 and steamer one attached to the hydrant opposite the pumping station, there being five lines from that hydrant by the use of the siamese coupling carried on the steamer. Hose 3 attached to the same hydrant with Hose 2, and in a very short time there were six streams of water pouring into the cellar, and stopped the fire from going into the rooms above at all. The house was a four family house, occupied by Cain Mahoney, John Kenealey, William Dee and the owner Mr. Shea. The furniture of the inmates was about all smashed in getting it out. The damage to the house will not amount to much over $100, on which there is an insurance of $2000, placed by Geo. P. Daniels in the North American of Philadelphia.

Chief Littlefield was in Boston on Saturday, and at Spring pond with Engineer Lord on Sunday, and did not get around to either fire. The fire Saturday was under the charge of Engineers Lord, Reed, Folsom and Pierce, and Sunday, Engineers Pierce, Folsom and Reed took charge of it.

It is told of Clerk Currier of Hose 2, that Sunday he walked into the hose house,and coolly put on his eye glasses, took down his fire hat, and said, "Boys I guess there is a fire as I see a lot of smoke, and they are crying fire," and then the confusion for a minute or two was just awful, but the boys struck the bell, grabbed the head ropes and started, attached to the hydrant and got first water.

The hydrant nipple was taken out of the hydrant when the cap was taken off, at the one where hose 2 located.

Between 3000 and 4000 feet of hose were wet at the last two fires.

The old black horses will give out if they have many more such runs as Saturday and Sunday. We wonder where those new horses have gone to that were to be bought some two or three weeks ago.

Wm. T. Dole has got the contract to rebuild the Salem Truck, and he had two draughts men at work all one day getting a plan of our truck.

Chief Littlefield ordered a detail of four firemen from steamer two for duty at the dedication of the Town Hall, and Foreman Cummings appointed the following: John A. P. Sumner, Charles W. Childs, Frank H. Edgerly and John A. Perkins. Probably two of the above named men will be appointed permanent men for all shows that may come to the hall. The reason they were selected from steamer two is because that company was off duty this mouth. The two men to take their places behind the scenes will probably be Childs and Sumner, two men of large experience in fire matters and both cool and level headed in case of fire.

The horses of the Hook & Ladder went through their harnesses Wednesday, and an old condemned set had to be substituted. Driver Brown has been trying for some time to get a new set, but it has been a stitch here and a patch there just to save the purchasing of new, until there is not much left, but patches and stitches. Perhaps he will get a new set now.

The trustees of the Relief Association their held regular meeting in the room of steamer one, but there was no business to be transacted and the meeting dissolved.

"Old Charlie" was worked with one of the blacks, Monday afternoon, to see how he would match with him. He fretted considerably but in time would work all right probably.

The complimentary supper and dance given by Hose 4 to the ladies and others who helped them make their fair a success, took place in the Hose house last evening. A company of about sixty ladies and gentlemen assembled, and the first part of the evening was taken up with dancing for which the music was furnished by Andrews Bros., of Salem. Supper was served about ten o'clock in the hall of the company, and was well got up and well served. Herbert Foan was caterer for the occasion and he made a grand success of it. The bill of fare consisted of oysters, stewed and scalloped, mashed potatoes, roast beef, cold ham, tongue and corned beef, pies and cakes. fruits, etc., with tea and coffee. Mr. Foan intends to cater for parties this season, and last night was his first attempt, and it was a grand success. Foreman Johnson welcomed the guests and invited them to pitch in and fill up. After supper speeches were in order, and Foreman Johnson in a few remarks called upon Engineer Pierce; who said he was sorry to be called upon as he was bashful, but would say he was much pleased with the evening's entertainment, liked to see such social gatherings of the firemen and wives; that the foreman had had hard work to keep the company together, but had got on the right track at last; the entertainment carried him back to 26 years ago, when the ladies surprised the company and fitted up the hall; referred to the war record of the company, said the company furnished 55 men for the war; some of them were left on the battlefields of Virginia; speaker was glad to see Hose 4 start the old fashioned times again; thanked the company for the pleasure he had received and closed. He was followed by Foreman Larrabee of Hose 2, Mr. Fred Lord of Steamer 3, of Salem, Starr C. Hewitt, Geo. Foan and others. The company broke up about 12 o'clock.

SOUTH PEABODY.

The water pipe sprung a leak on Lynn street, opposite Mr. J.H.Beede's, last week, but it was discovered and promptly remedied by D. B. Lord, Jr.

Mr. H. W. Williams has removed into the house recently occupied by Arthur Raddin, on County street.

The Do What You Can Mission Circle went to West Peabody last Sunday night and repeated the concert that was given here two weeks ago, to a very large audience.

A large number of passengers were carried over the Lynn and Boston R. R., last Sunday.

The masons have the Church all plastered, and the furnace will probably be put in this week.

Mr. Orrin Evans is improving the looks of his place on Lynn street, occupied by Nathaniel Putnam, with a coat of paint.

Last Wednesday the house of Mr. Chandler Newhall in Lynnfield was entered in the day time, while Mrs. Newhall was in the yard hanging out clothes. There had been money missed from the house before, and some of the money was marked. The thief secured about $90, but left the marked money untouched.

Tramps have found the old ice houses by Brown's pond very convenient. No less than eight of the walking gentry were seen coming from there a recent morning.

The following are the officers of the Atlantic Base Ball Association: President, James Dunney; Vice President, James Donavan; Secretary, Thomas Nagle; Collector, Jeremiah O'Rourke; Treasurer, Michael Kelley; Directors, Henry Duggan, Charles Lynch and Wm. Tracy.

our popular collector, Levi Preston, Esq., which is neatly furnished with a counter and desk and large closet. Connected with this by a door, to which entrance is also made from the corridor, is the room of the town clerk,—the room which will probably be oftenest visited of any in the building. It is 21 x20, furnished with a counter and desk, a large closet, and vault, of which there are four in the building, each being 7x12 in the clear. Mr. Poor's room also has an open fireplace and all the conveniences. The next room is for the use of the Water Board and is 21x20, also furnished with a counter and desk and open grate. The next a corner room 13x17 will be where the Engineers of the Fire Department will sit in council. On the corridor on the right is a large committee room 28x22, and in the rear a gentleman's dressing room 15x18, and a ladies' dressing room 12x18, both of which are fitted with set bowls and all the modern conveniences. From this floor to the large hall there are four broad stairways, two in front and two in the rear. There are also two double doors which can be used as an exit from the floor of the smaller hall in the rear. It would seem possible in case of fire to clear the building, even if crowded with people, in the space of a very few moments. We now ascend to the main hall, or Opera House, which has been justly pronounced by all who have seen it to be one of the finest public halls in the State, if not in New England. This hall in its inside dimensions is 102x70, with a minimum height of 33 feet, and has a broad balcony running around three sides of the building supported from the massive roof trusses above. The stage is a large and roomy affair, 33x54 feet, and the drop curtain 37x28. It has four sets of scenery, footlights and border lights, and inclines towards the front, to correspond with the inclination of the floor in an opposite direction. In front of the stage is a space reserved for the orchestra enclosed with a brass railing. The seats are folding, with iron frames, upholstered backs and perforated bottoms made by C. B. Demarest of Brooklyn. The entire seating capacity of hall and balcony is 1519. The ceiling has been elegantly frescoed by Matthew L. Robinson of Boston, who also painted the scenery and drop curtain. Connected with the stage are five ante rooms, two on a level with the stage. There are six flights of stairs from the audience hall to the balcony, two over the front stairs, two over the rear, and two at the side. There are also four closets connected with the main hall. The lighting of this hall is from one large chandelier in the centre containing 98 lights, four others in the balcony of 60 lights each, and eight three light brackets. The balcony rail is of cast iron finished with copper bronze, made by Baker, Pratt & Co., of New York. There are three ticket offices, one large one near the main entrance, and two up stairs. The contractors of the building were Joseph N. Parsons & Co. of Salem, whose contract included everything but the cut granite, which came from the quarries of the Bodwell Granite Co. of Hallowell, Maine. This included the firm of Hamilton & Balcomb, for the carpenter work, and Parsons & Peterson for the mason work. The gas fixtures were from R. Hollings & Co., Boston, and the steam piping was done by Thomas E. Wilson of Peabody. The painting was done by Pousland & Martin of Salem, the plumbing by William Hart, and the gas piping by L. E. Millea. The sashes and doors came from Richard Skinner & Co., the tinning, conductors and gutters were furnished by G. L. Swett,of Boston, and the slating by Thomas Bros., of Newburyp ort.

Mr. J. F. Estes, formerly of this town, now resident of Salem, will canvass this place for the sale of one of the most interesting books ever published; "The Voyage of the Jeannette," being the ship and ice journals of Commander Geo. W. DeLong, entered by his wife Emma DeLong. Each chapter is full of thrilling interest, while the closing pages of Captain DeLong's party through the unknown ways of the Lena Delta, the separation of the two brave men, Nonderman and Noros, in search of help, make it a work unparallelled, and not until the day when pencil fell from the hands of her commander can the interest of the reader cease. The work is fully illustrated with both steel and other engravings sketched by Mr. R. L. Newcomb, one of the survivors, and will be issued in two handsome octavo volumes, to be sold by subscription only. 47 St. Peter street. As a book for the library it will be of intrinsic value.

Last Saturday evening a man who had been indulging too much in the ardent attempted to cross the track in front of the shifting engine on the So. Reading branch when he stumbled and fell across the track and would have been run over but for the prompt action of the flagman who snatched him from his bad position, just in time.

WEST PEABODY.

Last Sabbath evening the "Do What We Can" Mission Circle of South Peabody, repeated the exercises of their annual meeting given two weeks previously at the Rockville Church, in the school house hall, here. The occasion called together an audience of two hundred or more, the hall presenting a bright and cheerful appearance. The platform was occupied by the children of the Mission Band, some twenty in number. In addition to the previous exercises Miss Mary J. Floyd read "Aunt Mehitable's account of the Annual Meeting," which was much enjoyed. Miss Fannie Brown, the President of the Circle, in presenting its greetings to the W. Peabody Church, gave a sketch of its history and work. Mrs. Carpenter, the wife of the former pastor, organized the circle. Three persons have been made "Life Members" of the Woman's Board through its contributions. When it is remembered that twenty-five dollars are required to secure a life membership, it will be seen that the efforts of the Circle for the past three or four years of its existence have neither been trivial nor fruitless. Other good work has been done besides the contributions of money, not to speak of the reflex influence of such unselfish work upon the character of those engaged in it. Miss Brown also explained briefly the the organization of the Board with its "Branches," "Auxiliaries" and "Circles."

Miss E. H. Short of Salem, in a most able and felicitous manner introduced the main exercises of the evening, "A Visit to Spain," an account of which has already been given in your columns. The second tour under our guide was even more delightful than the first, some most interesting historical facts in connection with the introduction of Bibles into Spain, being given.

There was singing and recitations by the children together with other exercises, the service closing with "Coronation," and the benediction by the pastor.

All seemed pleased with what they saw and heard and we trust were profitted.

We Notice in the Carpet Trade Review for November that Messrs. John H. Pray, Sons & Co. of this city are just about opening a wholesale branch at 113 Worth Street, New York. We are pleased to learn that this will not decrease, or in any way affect, the large business which Messrs. Pray & Co.now handle in Boston. They propose to do even more here than ever before, and their New York branch will only serve to reach a larger class of Southern and Western buyers, who can handle to better advantage in that city. Messrs. Pray, Sons & Co. are an old, honorable and reliable house, and we feel sure that every one will wish them every success in their new enterprise.— Boston Daily Advertiser.

Plummer & Kearns are to have a new 50-horse power engine built at John E. Clement & Co.'s.

The sale of seats for Virginia is large—yet the hall is large and there are good seats left. A good assemblage of best citizens is already assured, and the efforts of the company elsewhere are a guarantee that the performance will be first class in every respect. Our readers will miss the best thing of the season if they fail to attend.

The handsome four horse omnibus, the property of Mr. C. O. Stone, which used to run between Peabody and Lynn, has been sold to Mr. J. A. Potter, formerly of this town, to run on his line between Malden and Maplewood.

The town has been officially notified that Major Luther Day, of Haverhill, will contest the election of Sheriff Herrick, and a re-count of the votes will be made as soon as it is settled what the law allows on this point.

Speaking of furniture brings to mind that Goulding has a large stock to select from. Lets see: he has parlor sets, chamber sets, chairs, tables, lounges, sofas, rockers, picture frames, brackets and every other conceivable article that one can think of or desire in his line. Just another word, he sells them at the bottom prices.

The Essex County S. S. Institute held its annual meeting on Wednesday, the 14th inst., at the Crombie St. Congregational church, Salem. Rev. James L. Hill, of Lynn, was conductor. A large audience was in attendance, and the exercises were very interesting and instructive. A cordial welcome was extended by the pastor of the church, Rev. Mr. Elder. Various subjects of interest such as, "How best to promote reverence in our Sunday schools," "The social element in our Sunday school work," "Need and use of Sunday school lesson helps," "Incentives to Sunday school work," were before the Institute for discussion, led by brief but able addresses from various gentlemen —lay and clerical. An earnest and timely paper upon the importance of making temperance prominent in Sunday school instruction, by Mrs. Edward Johnson, of Lynn, called out an animated discussion, in which ladies freely participated. That the youth in our Sunday schools should be early indoctrinated in the principles of legal prohibition, and that they should become early pledged to total abstenance from all that intoxicates, was a very marked and positive sentiment of the Institute. The exercises were varied and the interest enhanced by answers given by different gentlemen, called upon by the Conductor. The answers were brief, instructive and often piquant. In the evening an able address upon Martin Luther and the Reformation, was made by Rev. Mr. Gifford, of Boston, followed by a closing address by S. R. Mitchel, Esq., President of the Institute. The ladies of the Crombie St. church did themselves great credit for the excellent collation furnished for the large congregation of Pastors and Sunday school workers present. The occasion was replete with interest and instruction.

"I will bet you $100 the Democrats carry the country next year" said a Butler man the other day to a young man who is said to have made about a thousand dollars on Mr. Robinson's election. I guess not, was the sensible reply, this is the first year I ever bet and that money is in the bank and there it is going to stay. I'm done betting.

WILMOT'S SUCCESS!

THE TALK OF THE PEOPLE AND ENVY OF CERTAIN NARROW MINDED COMPETITORS.

Ever since we came to Salem, our trade has been on the increase, in spite of a certain competitor, (better known for his loud talk and boast than for his deeds,) who said when we came to Salem, that he would drive us from the place inside of six months, but he should remember that we are not the kind to be driven, in fact it looks as though the boot was on the other leg. We are here to stay and we shall keep right on underselling any and all competitors, no matter if they go on the warpath every day during the week and twice on Sunday.

Business Is Booming!

And we are having a constant rush since we began our Mammoth Mark down Sale of

OVERCOATS, SUITS AND PANTALOONS.

In fact some would be big competitors almost die of grief and envy at the success we are having, for they know as well as the people that it is useless for them to try to compete with a manufacturer. But they try to rally by copying our advertisements almost word for word, talk never hurts anybody, figures tell every time, and it is Figures we shall give you, not talk. REMEMBER! That no competitor, no matter what he says, has any of our clothing, although they advertise to that effect.

MEN'S OVERCOATS.

1st Large lot of Men's heavy gray beaver overcoats, cut D. B., well trimmed, made in our own workshops, and intended by us to be sold for $10.00 but to day we shall offer the entire lot for

$5.00,

Look out for cheap imitation, as our store is the only place where this overcoat can be obtained.

5th, 200 Blue beaver overcoats, warranted fast color, lined with the best satine lasting and guaranteed to be the best made and best styled overcoat in the city. This coat previous to now has been marked $18.00, but our price is now

We might go on numerating our bargains and cover every page of this paper with our wonderful bargains, and then not give you a tenth part of them, but will stop in the overcoat line by saying that our

By the Maufacturers!

Overcoats by the Thousands! Ulsters by the Hundreds! at prices lower than ever before offered in America for Reliable Goods.

Some dealers have advertised a great mark down Sale, on account of their business being so very quiet. Perhaps if some of the loud talking Clothiers should mark down their goods two or three times more they might possibly get down pretty near our prices, but it is doubtful.

(For The Fireside Favorite.)

A Reverie.

BY LYDIA DAVIS THOMPSON.

The deepening twilight steals across the plain:
Departing day goes by with mute adieu,
His sombre veil half shading earth again,
And evening clouds tinged with matchless hue,
Are sailing down the far-off western blue.

'Tis fitting time to go on thought's glad wings
Unto that land whence days on days have fled,
While, faithful to her trust, dear Memory brings
Her light, nor can the "dead past bury its dead,"
When the bright halo 'round our path is shed.

Now guided by her near yet unseen hand,
Back to the shaded past she leads the way—
Once more I roam through childhood's happy lands,
Once more with dear companions bright and gay
A child am I, amid the flowers at play.

I wander through the olden schoolhouse walls
That Time's relentless tooth has sadly worn,
And Memory's voice, anon, to me recalls
Each look and word of loved ones long since gone,
Who journeyed here with me in life's bright morn.

I wait to greet the youthful forms once more,
Who all the rosy hours with me did thread;—
Some linger yet upon this transient shore,
Perchance in distant climes their feet may tread,
Others have changed, some slumber with the dead.

The brook whose banks my feet have often pressed,
Has grown less wide since childhood-hours have flown,
And huge, high rocks up which I've climbed to rest,
Then proudly sat, a queen upon my throne,
Are now but unpretending stones with moss o'ergrown.

And hills which then were mountains towering high,
Are now but tiny mounds that hide the glade;
And trees that erst seemed holding up the sky
As I beneath them rested, read or played,
Have shrunk betimes and lessened their broad shade.

The beaten path that wended through the dell,
Leading its winding way to some fair grove,
To which long since I bade a fond farewell,
I cannot find, beneath the tangled cove
The rankling grass and creeping briers have wove.

But there's a shadow o'er my vision creeps,
And hides that land through which I've fondly ranged,
All hallowed with the pictures Memory keeps,
And makes the past seem from me sore estranged—
And, "it is well." I, too, am sadly changed.

November in the Marshes.

BY CHARLES DAWSON SHANLEY.

Old Frost, the silversmith, has come
His crisping touch is on the weeds;
The lingering flowers must now succumb
And sing their death-song to the reeds;
The purple phlox that bends its head
With mournful gaze the marsh-pool o'er,
To-morrow may he limp and dead,
Its feathery tufts to flaunt no more.

The reeds that were so tall and slim,
And grew so straight awhile ago,
Will bow their heads before the grim
Old monitor that warns of snow;
Already has the golden rod
Its jewels cast unto the breeze,
And the cotton-weed with blackened pod
Weeps mutely near the willow-trees.

Yet o'er the marsh a glory flies
As, shimmering in the misty gleam,
The gossamer's filmy meshes rise
Like motes that dance in a sunbeam;
And to the mind this fancy comes,
That haply o'er those silver threads
Some telegraphic elf-news hums
Its way to insect hearts and heads.

Through the wide reaches frequent rings
The sharp crack of the fowler's gun;
From the marsh-pond the wild duck springs,
The plover's wings flash in the sun;
Unto the city gunner's shot
Small warblers in the sedges fall;
"All's meat that comes unto his pot,"
The little brown marsh wren and all.

O'er these low meadows hangs a spell
That holds a strange, poetic charm;
I hear it in the the far cow-bell
As vagrant cattle seek the farm.
E'en in these bleak November days
There's gladness for the heart that heeds.
The marsh to me no gloom conveys
Though the gray frost be on the weeds.

Do not be above your business,
Let your trade be what it may—
Strive by industry and patience,
In the word to make your way.
He who bushes at his caing
And its tite fears to utter,
Shames himsef, and, ike a ninny,
Quarres with his bread and butter.

If you work at forge or anvi,
Grime and sweat wi soil your skin.
What of that! Such toi is noble!
Work and you wi surey win.
If you're honest, firm and prudent,
Heed not what the ide say,
Let their scoffings pass unheeded—
Work is work, and pay is pay.

You can never gather honey,
If you're frightened at the bees—
Fortune never will come near you
If you sit and take your ease.
You can neither plow nor harrow,
If of dirty boots afraid—
Kid gloves, perfumes and cosmetics
Will not do at any trade.

Rouse, then, boys! be up and ready—
Find some honest work to do—

Selected Story.

The Evening Soiree.

Mrs. Montague had issued invitations for a grand soiree musicale. She had fully designed it to be one of the best and highest-toned affairs of the season. All that taste and money could do in engaging the best professional talent had been done, and it was with a very satisfied expression on her comely face that she reclined on the sofa in her dainty little boudoir, reading aloud to her intimate friend, Mrs. Davenport, the notes of acceptance she had received. Suddenly a frown contracted her fair brow as she hastily glanced over the contents of a note inclosed in a plain white envelope, strikingly different from the perfumed missives, with their gorgeous monograms, on the silver tray beside her.

'How exceedingly provoking!' she exclaimed aloud. 'Here, at the very last moment, when it will be simply impossible for me to get any one else, Signora Violante has disappointed me. It is always the way with these foreign artists. They demand an exorbitant price in the first place and then think it isn't of the slightest consequence whether they keep their engagements or not. She has a sore throat! I suppose I ought to be deeply indebted to her ladyship for condescending to let me know that she doesn't intend to come. What shall I do, Grace?'

'It is annoying,' responded her friend, sympathetically, 'but can't you get along without her? You have so much talent engaged that you won't miss her.'

'But she is the only soprano. I could better have dispensed with any of the others. Can't you suggest something?'

'I have just thought of some one who could possibly help you out of your difficulty,' answered Mrs. Davenport, 'but I don't know whether she would satisfy you or not.'

'Who were you thinking about?' asked Mrs. Montague eagerly, an expression of relief replacing the frown.

'I was thinking of my little Julie's governess,' replied her friend. She has a wonderfully sweet voice. I have often heard her singing for my little girl, but I don't know whether it is strong enough, and then she is such a nervous, sly little thing, that very possibly she would not have courage to sing before a room full of people. I will send home and ask her to come up immediately, and see you about it, if you like. It is her hour to be with Julie, now, so you will not have to wait long to satisfy yourself.'

'Do, please,' answered Mrs. Montague, earnestly; 'it will be such a relief to me if her voice is equal to taking the Signora's part. I have set my heart upon having everything go off satisfactorily.' Opening an elegant escritoire, she placed pen and paper before her friend and rang the bell vigorously.

'Tell John to take this note immediately,' she ordered, 'and see that there is the least possible delay about it, Felice,' she added sharply.

In barely half an hour Miss Arnold was ushered in, a delicate, fragile little creature, with a mist of golden hair falling over her low, white forehead, and great, appealing violet eyes.

'No doubt you are surprised at my sending for you so suddenly,' said Mrs. Davenport kindly, after introducing her to Mrs. Montague; but my friend is in great trouble, and I thought perhaps you could help her out. She is going to give a musical soiree to-night, and one of the singers will be unable to come. Do you think you could fill her place? Sing something now, and let Mrs. Montague hear your voice,' she added, opening the little cottage piano which stood in a curtained alcove.

The girl sat down before the instrument and ran her slender fingers slightly over the keys; then without further prelude began to sing. She had selected an air from 'Lucia di Lammermoor,' and the melodious Italian sylables fell like a familiar language from her lips as her sweet voice rang out clear and birdlike. She seemed to enter into the spirit of the music, heart and soul. The two friends sat spellbound, and glanced at each other in delighted admiration as they noticed the marvellous flexibility and sweetness of her voice.

'My dear child, I hadn't the slightest idea you possessed such a voice,' exclaimed Mrs. Davenport, warmly kissing the girl as she rose from the piano with a bright flush burning in either cheek. You ought to make your fortune by it. What do you think about it, Mrs. Montague?' she asked, turning to her friend.

'Why, I can only say that I consider it a most fortunate thing, as far as I am concerned, that the Signora disappointed me,' answered that lady, 'and if Miss Arnold will oblige me by filling her place, I shall be more than delighted.'

'I am afraid that I should never have the courage to sing before so many people,' replied Grace Arnold, shyly; then, as she saw a shade of disappointment settling over the lady's face again, she added, 'I will try if you wish it, though. If I think only about the music, it will not be so hard.'

'Then I may consider it a settled thing, may I not?' asked Mrs. Montague, naming the compensation she intended to give, which seemed a fabulous sum to be earned so easily to the little governess.

'She is, indeed, wonderfully talented,' she continued after the girl's departure. 'Her voice not only shows cultivation, but she throws so much soul and expression into it. Where did you come across her?' she asked.

'She was recommended to me by some friends of mine last fall,' answered her friend. 'I believe her father was very wealthy, but speculated and lost all his money about a year ago. He deserted his family, and so this daughter was left to support an invalid mother and little sister by her own exertions. Fortunately she seems to have a superior education, so it has not been a hard task for her to find plenty of pupils. She is not strong enough, though, for such confinement, and I should be glad if that glorious voice of hers could assist her to earn money in an easier way. Is it really so late as that?' she exclaimed in dismay, as the tiny ormolu clock on the mantle chimed the hour of twelve. 'I must be going. I am glad that I could help you out of your perplexity, dear,' she added, as she exchanged a farewell embrace. In the meantime Grace Arnold was hurrying home with a bright face delighted at the thought of the little fortune, for so it seemed to her, that she was to earn that evening.

'Just fancy, mother,' she exclaimed gaily, bursting into the little, plainly furnished room where a delicate looking invalid reclined upon a sofa; 'I am going to sing at a parlor concert this evening, and just guess what the lady is going to pay me.' And she gleefully named the sum. 'Now I must get my dress ready to wear.' And she plunged into the depths of a wardrobe. 'How fortunate it is that I kept the dress that you had made for my last birthday,' she said, lifting carefully out of the trunk that contained her few treasures, a silk dress. 'I shall quite imagine it is old times again,' she continued, shaking out its folds carefully.

"I hope you will enjoy yourself, Gracie, darling," responded the mother, sympathetically, as she looked at the girl's bright face. Only a little year ago! That glad smile faded from Gracie's face, and she brushed away a large tear which had gathered suddenly, like April showers in her eyes. One year ago she was a petted belle, everything that money could buy or love devise had been showered upon her, and, above all, the almost idolatrous love of a manly heart, had, as she fondly fancied, been laid before her. A week before her father's failure Ronald Greyson had placed on her slender finger an engagement ring and vowed to make her his own on his return from the three months' sojourn abroad which business dictated. She had never heard a syllable from him since; whether he had returned she knew not. At all events, he had cared less for Gracie than for her money, and the girl fought bravely with the love which would not be crushed out so arbitrarily. She still wore his diamond ring—it was her single ornament now—but she never glanced at it without a shadow of pain stealing over her face. When the evening came, and Gracie entered the little dressing-room set apart for the artists, her face flushed as she caught a glimpse of herself in one of the long mirrors. Mrs. Montague could not restrain a start of surprise as her eyes fell on the lovely figure, and she came cordially forward to welcome her. The delicate blue of her dress set off to the greatest possible advantage her pearly complexion, and the excitement lent a glow to her cheek and a brilliancy to her eye that quite transformed the little governess.

When her turn came to sing she felt her self-possession fail for a moment, and the long parlor before her seemed filled with a swaying sea of heads; but at the first tones of the piano she regained her composure. She lost all consciousness of self in the music, and even surpassed her performance of the morning. At the close there was a moment's silence, and then a unanimous burst of applause followed which testified the approbation of the critical audience.

Mrs. Montague rushed eagerly in to her as she sat exhausted and trembling after her effort in the dressing room.

'Your voice is simply unequaled,' she exclaimed, enthusiastically. 'How flushed and nervous you are, though. Come up into my boudoir and rest yourself. I will come after you in a few minutes.'

With a sensation of relief Gracie found herself alone in the quiet boudoir after the light and bustle of the parlor. She sank into the depths of an easy chair and shielded her eyes from the light with her handkerchief.

More than one tear bedewed their brightness as she realized for the first time how different her position was to that of a year previous. A step at the door startled her, and she sprang up hastily, supposing Mrs. Montague had returned to conduct her down stairs.

But she was mistaken. Could it be possible that her eyes were deceiving her? Could that be Ronald Greyson who had clasped her yielding form in his firm embrace and was showering hot kisses upon her unresisting lips? In a moment she drew herself away from him.

'Mr. Greyson! You forget yourself?' she said, haughtily. 'As you have seen fit to drop my acquaintance entirely for the past year, I cannot see why you should resume it now upon the old footing. My circumstances are in no wise altered.'

'Gracie!' exclaimed Ronald indignantly. 'Is it possible you have so cruelly misunderstood me? I received no letter from you during my absence abroad, and did not even hear of your father's failure until after my return. I have made every exertion to discover you ever since. How could you for a moment have believed me guilty of such baseness? I am just as much yours, heart and soul, my precious darling, as the moment when I placed this ring on your finger.'

A few moment later when Mrs. Montague entered the room, she was greatly astonished at the tableau before her. A few words of explanation from Ronald soon placed her in possession of the facts of the case, and when she conducted Gracie to the brilliantly lighted parlors, where every one was anxious to congratulate her on her vocal success, Mrs. Montague introduced her as 'My friend, Miss Grace Arnold,' and in a confidential whisper would add, 'Soon to become Mrs. Grayson,' whereupon worldly-wise mammas, who had been viewing Ronald as an eligible parti for their unmarried daughters, thought it exceedingly good policy to make much of the future bride.

So Gracie found it indeed like old times, feted and caressed, and could scarcely believe that so much happiness had come to her. If the truth must be told, she fancied she might prove a modern Cinderella, and at the mystic hour of twelve everything would disappear. The wedding which followed in due course of time, was tangible proof of reality. As Mrs. Montague, who of course, was at the wedding, congratulated the lovely bride, she could not forbear adding, 'And if it had not been for my soiree and Signora Violante's disappointment, my dear, who knows whether all this would ever have happened.—Philadelphia Evening Call.

DON'T WHINE.—Don't be whining about not having a fair chance. Throw a sensible man out of a window he'll fall on his feet and ask the nearest way to his work. The more you have to begin with, the less you will have in the end. Money you earn yourself is much brighter than any you can get out of dead men's bags. A scant breakfast in the morning of life whets the appetite for a feast later in the day. He who has tasted a sour apple will have the more relish for a sweet one. Your present want will make future prosperity all the sweeter.

Eighteen-pence has set up many a peddler in the business, and he has turned it over until he has kept his carriage. As for the place you are cast in don't find fault with that; you need not be a horse because you were born in a stable. If a bull tossed a man of mettle sky-high, he would drop down in a good place. A hard-working young man with his wits about him will make money while others will do nothing but lose it.

"Who loves his work and knows how to spare,
May live and flourish anywhere."

As to as little trouble, who expects to find cherries without stones, or roses without thorns? Who would win must learn to bear. Idleness lies in bed sick of the mulli-grubs, where industry finds health and wealth. The dog in the kennel barks at fleas, the hunting dog does not even know that they are there. Laziness waits till the river is dry, and never gets to market. "Try" swims it, and makes all the trade. "Can't-do-it" would not eat the bread set for him, but "Try" made meat out of mushrooms.—John Plowman.

Those who expect to be heirs of fortune should be careful how they marry, else they may get so mixed up their relations will not know how to leave them anything. Take, for instance, the case of an unfortunate. I married a widow who had a grown up daughter. My father visited our house very often, and fell in love with my step-daughter and married her. So my father became my son-in-law, and my step-daughter my mother, because she was my father's wife. Some time afterward my wife had a son—he was my father's brother-in-law, and my uncle, for he was the brother of my step daughter. My father's wife—that is my step-daughter—had also a son; he was, of course, my brother, and, in the meantime, my grandchild, for he was the son of my daughter. My wife was my grandmother, because she was my mother's mother. I was my wife's husband and grandchild at the same time; and as the husband of a person's grandmother is his grandfather, I was my own grandfather.

KNOWLEDGE OR WEALTH.—Give young men fortune without education, and at least one-half will go down to the tomb of oblivion—perhaps ruin. Give them an education and they will be a fortune to themselves and their country. It is an inheritance worth more than gold, for it buys true honor—they can never spend or lose it. Through life it ever proves a friend and n death a consolation.

A young society man, whose mind was running on another subject, acknowledged an evening invitation as follows: "Your kind invitation for Thursday evening is accepted with regret." And then he lay awake all Thursday night wondering why his hostess treated him so coldly.—Burlington Free Press.

The chrysanthemum is the fashionable flower of the season and is in great demand for decorations and corsage bouquets. Symmetrical, delicate and bright, it fully deserves its popularity. A native of Japan and China, it reached England to be at once favored, and here in America, where it was once disregarded as common, it has attained a height of respect.

The thirsty skeeter folds his languid wings,
Draws in his augur and no longer stings;
No more artesian wells he tries to sink,
Or comes up to the bar to get a drink;
In sleep he waits another season's sup;
He's comatose; his pump is frizzen up!
New York Graphic.

"What carrotty-headed, ugly little urchin is that, madam? Do you know his name?" "Why, yes; that is my youngest son!" "You don't say so, indeed! Why, what a dear little sweet dove-eyed cherub he is, to be sure!"

Why is a five dollar bill better than a five dollar gold piece? Because when you put it in your pocket you double it, and when you take it out you find it increases (increases).

SECOND-HAND SHOPS IN PARIS.

There has been a good deal said and written about Parisian shops, but there is one division of these tempting establishments that has received but scant justice from the foreign chronicler, and that is the multitude of second hand shops wherewith Paris abounds. From the aristocratic Rue de la Paix down to the ragpickers' quarter, the Rue Mouffetard, there is not a street in the commercial quarters that does not boast of one or more of such establishments, while certain streets, such as the Rue de Provence or the Chaussee d'Antin are lined with them. They are of every grade and every style, from the lordly and elegantly and fitted-up store, whose proprietor deals only in antique cabinets, bronzes and tapestry, Louis XV. jewelry, old miniatures and ancient lace, all more or less genuine and especially the less, down to the dingy little booth stuck in a corner behind some massive building wherein old stores and old shoes are vended to whomsoever comes to buy. All the elegancies and ornaments of a lady's wardrobe, for instance, may fill one window; robes of satin and velvet, fans of point-lace and mother-of-pearl, India shawls, cleaned gloves, battered hats with crushed feathers and faded ribbons, fine point-lace and half-worn undergarments, satin slippers and Honiton handkerchiefs, all blended in one bewildering chaos. The shoes of an opera dancer are tangled up in the lace of a cardinal's robe, an ivory bound prayer book serves as a support for an inlaid box of cosmetics, a photograph album bound in plaques of malachite is half hidden under a pile of cambric sheets, and a carved crucifix reposes on a sofa-cushion of embroidered velvet side by side with a broken opera-glass. Groups and figures in imitation Dresden and plates in supposed old Rouen contend for admiration in the other window with trinkets set with pale blue sapphires, flawed diamonds, discolored pearls or dingy opals. In these windows may be read the story of half of the vanished fashions of fifty years back. The china toilet-set of the late Adelaide Neilson, for instance, every piece painted with her monogram, encircled with wreath of roses, formed for a long time the chief ornament of a bric-a-brac shop on the Rue du 4 Septembre. I can lay my hand, figuratively speaking, on the service of antique delf that the King of Holland suffered an American adventuress to carry off from one of his minor palaces.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

It is true we are told that old Parr, in the later years of his unduly prolonged life, passed nearly the whole of the twenty-four hours in semi-torpid sleep, during which, doubtless, his natural powers wasted far more slowly than they would have done had he kept awake. But sleep is one thing, artificially produced insensibility another. If, however, the wonderful discovery were real instead of imaginary; if men could at their own will be reduced to a state of absolute lifelessness for months and years together, the time thus passed being "so many unvalued and profitless years added to a lifetime," what strange results might follow! A man might extend the three score years and ten over as many centuries, being brought to life for a week or two at a time after intervals of two or three years passed in frozen lifelessness. One who found himself or supposed himself in advance of his age might be congealed until the age had overtaken or passed beyond him. A father who had been shelved for a while in the family ice vault might be restored to children older than himself. Or, again, a first-born who had displeased his father might be frozen until all his brothers had got the start of him, and reappear among men as a younger brother. But indeed there is no end of such fancies. We may safely leave their further discussion until Signor Rotura has returned from his journey to South America "for a large supply of the two necessaries for the safe conduct of his process, both of which substances at present remain a secret.

THE OLD RAIL FENCE.

I am told by foreign tourists that while many of our fences are reflected in those of other lands, the counterpart of the zigzag fence is to be seen in no other country. It is typical of Yankeeland. It is known as the shake or Virginia fence, as the relic of a lavish era of unlimited forestry. History does not record the name of the inventor, but I have long since learned to cherish a profound respect for the unknown individual. It is hard for me to imagine in the person of this primitive rail-splitter the picture of an untutored backwoodsman, and I never follow the course of one of these fences without feeling a certain consciousness that its original builder must have seen his work through eyes artistic as well as practical. The careless abandon of its lines—a repetition of form in which absolute repetition is continually defied by the capricious convolution of the grain, for there are no two rails made in the same mould—and their gray satiny sheen, their weather-beaten stains of moss and lichen and ever-changing play of lights and shadows from their waving weeds and vines, make the old rail fence truly an object of real beauty in our landscape. Often have I lingered in its angles, and a hundred times have I thought of the host of pictures and reminiscences which might fill a book to the glory of a fence-corner.

If it is true that sparrows and swallows forsake a district when cholera is about to make its advent the fact should be generally known and thoroughly established on all creditable data.

THE GERMAN "INTENDANTUR."

A General in command of an army has to do much more than merely give food to his men. He has, besides the ordinary difficulties of such a task, to calculate upon bad roads, weary horses, breaking wagons, the attacks of an enimies cavalry; he has not only to get food for the troops, but in many cases he has to provide it in the first place; he has to keep his magazines constantly stocked, to increase the amount of transport in exact proportion as his troops advance, to feed not only the fighting men but all the men who are employed in carrying provisions to the combatants, to find hay and corn for the horses of the cavalry, for the horses of the infantry, and for the horses of the transport wagons, and to arrange beforehand so that every man and horse shall halt for the night in close proximity to a large supply of good water. When the enemy is in front, and any moment may bring on an action, a General has little time to turn his mind to the organization of a system of supply. Then he must sift intelligence, weigh information, divine his adversary's intentions almost before they are formed, prepare a parry for every blow, and speed a thrust into any opening joint of his antagonist's army. The means of supplying troops ought to be given readily into the hands of a General; they should be all arranged and organized beforehand, so that he has but to see that they are properly administered, and made use of. It is done in Germany. The Intendantur arranges and mobilizes the transport which follows the army in the field. The transport is exclusive of the wagons of each battalion, the artillery and engineer trains, and the field telegraph divisions, and is divided under two heads. One portion is kept for the use of the commissariat branch, and is retained solely for the supply of food to men; the second portion carries the medicines and hospital necessaries for the sick and wounded, together with the means of carrying disabled men, food for horses, stores to supply magazines, and all articles that have to be transported except munitions of war and regimental equipment. Five provision columns of thirty wagons each are provided for each corps, and carry three days' provisions for every man. As soon as the wagons which carry the first days' supply are emptied they are sent off to the magazine in the rear and replenished, and must be up again to supply the fourth days' food, as in the two days' interval the other wagons will have been emptied. As it is easier to carry flour than bread in these wagons, each corps is accompanied by a field bakery. As the army advances the magazine to supply these wagons must advance also, and means must be provided for keeping the magazines full. The collection of food in such magazines entails an enormous amount of transport, which is obtained by hiring wagons and carts from the country where the war is being carried on or the countries near it. Wagons hired in the country are also used for carrying forage for the horses of the cavalry and artillery from the magazines to the front, for the provision columns only carry food for the men.

DISRAELI AND WINES.

"How do you manage to keep so healthy?" he was asked by a dyspeptic fop. "By dining off a sardine," was the answer, and there was some truth in this. To the end of his life Disraeli always ate very sparingly when alone, and this enabled him to keep a good appetite for public occasions, thereby rebutting the presumption which his pale face suggested, that he was consumptive. In this connection some remarks of his about wine may be mentioned. Hard drinking was in fashion during his youth, and at public dinners men who let the bottle pass were hardly regarded as gentlemen. Disraeli, who could never stand much wine, suffered a good deal from this social usage, and he set himself to study the demeanor of men who could drink deep without being any the worse for it. Lord Melbourne was one of these, and he gave Disraeli a wrinkle by saying: "You can't drink if you don't talk; if you talk much you needn't drink, for people will think you are drunk and let you alone." It is obvious that the excitement of conversation must co-operate powerfully with the fumes of wine in making the brain reel. Disraeli, having noted this fact, went further into the subject by observing that a man's convival propensities are always taken for granted if he talks in praise of wine and appears to be very critical about it. Some of his remarks savoring of the most refined epicureanism may therefore be ascribed solely to his temperate desire to find excuses for not drinking. He was not a judge of wines, though he pretended to be, and once allowed himself to lay down the law about Burgundy against the late Lord Sefton. A droll trait in him was that he spoke enthusiastically about certain choice wines, but he never decried any sort of liquor, even gin. A reason he once gave for "saying something kind" about brandy in the presence of a person addicted to spirits would have had a Mephistophelean ring if the subject of the observation had not been, humanly speaking, irreclaimable: "I could not speak ill of his only friend." "I should call brandy his enemy," interposed a lady. "Ah, well, a man hates his enemy the worse for hearing him well spoken of," was the mild retort.

Two gardeners, near Savannah, have taken to raising rose bushes. This year they sold 20,000 bushes to persons in the North, and had orders for 50,000 which they could not fill. They get from $10 to $20 per 100 for them. Over 500,000 rose bushes are annually imported from Europe, but it is said that Georgia has a better climate for their production than even the south of France.

Worn, Weary, and Wretched.

"As weak as a cat" is an expression frequently used by debilitated sufferers who are trying to tell how forlorn they feel. It is an incorrect expression, for a cat is one of the most agile and vigorous animals in existence. It would be more correct to say, "as weak as a limp old rag," for that gives the idea of utter inability to hold one's self up. The weary person who feels thus is generally worn, worried, woeful, and wretched.

Sometimes it is a case of overwork, and sometimes of imperfect nourishment. The blood in the system of a person who is "as weak as a rag" is in a wretchedly thin condition. It needs iron, to impart richness, redness, and strength. This is to be had by taking BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, the only safe and proper preparation of iron in connection with gentle and powerful tonics. The physician and the druggist can tell the worn and weary how valuable a remedy BROWN'S IRON BITTERS has been found in actual every-day use.

THE RECURRENCE of Thanksgiving calls up the superstition regarding thirteen at a table. Despite the omen supposed to attach to it, thirteen clubs have been formed in New York and other cities, in the attempt to overcome if possible the superstitious imaginings which seem to cling to the fated number. The Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin, some months since, said:—"There seems to be a universal and widespread superstition against thirteen persons sitting down at a table together. Indeed, so prevalent and strong is this feeling that a hostess arranging for guests is sure to provide against the contingency, and eschew, if possible, the fatal number. We have known ladies to rise panic-stricken from a table where the number was inadvertently discovered, and the omen is popularly believed to denote either trouble, sorrow, or death.

Few, if any, seem to know the origin of this strange and mystic superstition, which dates far back to the earliest ages of Christianity. When good King Arthur, of Britain, founded his famous round table, he secured the services of the enchanter Merlin, to devise and arrange the seats. The famous sorcerer accordingly arranged among others thirteen seats to represent the Apostles; twelve for the faithful adherents of our Lord, and the thirteenth for the traitor Judas. The first were never occupied save by knights distinguished above all others for their valor and prowess, and in the event of a death occurring among them the seat remained vacant until a knight surpassing in daring and heroic attainments his predecessor should be deemed worthy to fill the place. If an unworthy or effeminate knight laid claim to the seat he was repelled by some secret or hidden spell cast by the powerful magician. The thirteenth seat was never occupied save upon one occasion, as it is said, by a haughty and overbearing Saracen knight, who placing himself in the fatal seat, was instantly rewarded for his presumption by the earth opening and swallowing him up. It afterward bore the name of the 'perilous seat,' and among all the adventurous knights of King Arthur's court none were so foolhardy as to risk their lives on this enchanted spot. And now, after 1,300 years, the spell of the magician Merlin still survives, and in this nineteenth century the thirteenth seat at the table is as greatly dreaded as in the days of the knights of the famous round table."

THE NEW Town Hall was thoroughly tested last Thursday evening at the dedication concert. Over two thousand people were in the building, the balcony was crowded, but, contrary to the expectations of many croakers, the building stood. The hall is a substantial, well made structure in every respect. We doubt if a building like it, or nearly as good, can be duplicated. There are always in any community people who can give a professional architect, or any artisan, points about his business. If some of them were followed there would be confusion worse confounded.

The convenience of the building will be appreciated as the wants of the public become known, or increase. In the old hall, there was no provision for a separate room for the town clerk and collector. The Selectmen's room was a miserable affair. The water board and its clerk were obliged to seek an office outside. The meetings of the School Committee and other Boards had to be held at the private houses of some of its members. Now all is changed. There is ample room and convenient room, too, for all meetings of the officers of the town. They can all meet at once if they desire, and be each independent of the other.

For a dramatic or other performance, requiring the use of footlights, there has been, up to this time, absolutely no provision in town. No decent representation could be made in the Institute, on account of the lack of stage room, and as well on account of the undesirability of the seats. This has been so marked that even when a good show—and one known to be so—came to town it would not be patronized. Now there is ample provision. The seats are comfortable, and command a good view of any performance. There are probably fewer undesirable ones than in any hall in the country. Our people can, if they will, receive both entainment and instruction here, and be at their homes again at a seasonable hour.

Let those who are disposed to think the building is too large, remember that it is probable that one of the size which they would approve could not be built any less. Such an edifice should not be built by any community, save for the future as well as the present time. The town has a building suitable for all occasions. It looks strange, and it is so, when we consider that we have never, since our existence as a separate town, been reasonably accommodated in the matter of town business. As the Thanksgiving season approaches, let us include this among our sources of gratitude. It will surely prove a blessing in years to come, and many who are now ready to condemn the expenditure, will be the first to point to it with pride.

TO-MORROW brings round again another of the New England holidays, which have changed vastly in their observance from the custom of olden time. Formerly Thanksgiving was a day devoted to religious observances, principally. Our fathers were as punctilious in being found in their pew in the old church on that day as the Sabbath. It was a day in which all the people gave public thanks to the ruler and giver of all good things.

Now the religious observance is a small part of the day. Not only so, but a very small portion of the people attend the services. To most people it is a holiday—welcomed as such, observed as such. Sports and festivities, dancing and other amusements make up the day. The words of the preacher go unheeded, and we question the advisability, in the present order of things, of any religious service, which can be, at best, only an attempt to preserve the traditional observance of the day. The chief halo which surrounds the day is the old-time reunion of the family, which we trust will never lose its charm. To such re-united households the spirit of thanksgiving is never absent. Thanks for the return of the dear one, even for that one day only, from a distant city. Thanks that so many are spared to revive old memories and associations of their earlier years. Thanks for the emblematical reunion, prophetic of the life beyond, where none shall be absent.

THE PORTION of the address of Mr. Abbott, at the dedication of the new town hall, in relation to the selection of the best man without regard to party, in the administration of municipal affairs, echoes a sentiment which is a growing one in our towns and cities. We see no reason why it should not meet with hearty approbation—and we think it does. In all our city elections for Mayor and aldermen, of late, great prominence has been given to a citizens' movement. It is a citizens' candidate against a party candidate, and in most cases the former deserves success.

Take the city of Boston, for instance. On the one side is placed a man whom honest and honorable men of all parties desire to see elected. He is a democrat, but none the more objectionable to republicans on that account. On the other side is a party man, nominated by the present controlling power, and on general principles the citizens' nominee ought to win. His candidacy represents a broader type of municipal government than can any party nominee, be he what he may. He may be ever so honorable, he cannot take such an election without incurring some obligations which no officer of a municipal government should regard. The safety and integrity of our home affairs depend upon the freedom, on the part of an elected candidate, from such obligations.

ONE OF the first thing to be done on the assembly of Congress should be the passage of a National Bankrup Law. Its need is felt in every state in the Union—not only where the state bankrupt act is a good one, but by those whose code is behind the present time. The business men of this state have felt its necessity ever since the repeal of the old law, and they have not been backward in expressing themselves in favor of some law which should be uniform in its action. The large failures here of late, notably the Shaw failure, have been a conspicuous illustration of the difficulty of settlements when the property of the creditor is in different states of the Union.

But the chief reason for a national bankrupt law lies in the fact that, where by the present code, there is difficulty of settlement or where the seizure clause is incorporated into the state law, these states need it for their own protection. Credit is the basis of all commerce and business. Confidence lies at the root of all prosperity in trade. Where credit cannot be safely given by other states on account of an existing law, or where the law destroys confidence, business cannot thrive, and the impracticability of the old law reacts upon themselves. A uniform, national bankrupt law will do much to help the business prosperity of the nation. Petitions have been sent in by our merchants, the press nearly every where have spoken in its favor. If our Congressmen do not heed the wishes of the people in this regard, they should be made to. The country is in earnest in this matter.

THERE ARE two things which the Selectmen of the town must do, and at once, if they would let the upper hall for proper dramatic performances. The first is to provide suitable orchestra stands that shall belong to the hall, and which can be used when needed. The expense is very trifling, but the want of them at the performance of Virginia was worth, at the time, more than double their cost. It is enough for the musicians to bring their instruments, and it is not customary for any public hall to be without such stands. By the kindness of the janitor of Upton's Hall, and a few other friends, we were enabled to secure enough for the orchestra. The second is the arrangement of a place to sell tickets. There are three substitutes for offices, but there is no light in any of them—no arrangement for the reception of money or the proper sorting of tickets. Both of these things could be easily remedied, and at a very small outlay. It will add greatly to the convenience of the hall on such occasions.

THE SUPREME Court has decided that Mrs. Leonard is properly a member of the Board of Lunacy and Charity, and this we hope settles the question. The services of this lady on the Board have been very valuable; indeed, in all charitable enterprises the presence of a woman is not without an influence which is of service to the State. She can be influenced by no political policy; and this was what made her report on the Tewksbury matter of such inestimable value in the campaign.

THE PARDON of Sergeant Mason, who fired the unsuccessful shot at Guiteau, the murderer of Garfield, will doubtless be received with the approval of the public. He has been sufficiently punished—and while the law should always have its course in such cases, for the protection of both guilty and innocent, the provocation to commit the act in which he failed was a temptation which better men than he would not have been able to resist.

Charles F. Freeman, the central figure of the noted Pocasset filicide, is to be tried for murder at Barnstable on Wednesday, Dec. 5, at a special term of the Supreme Judicial Court to be held for that purpose. Last spring Freeman was by order or the court removed from the Danvers lunatic hospital and incarcerated in the county jail at Barnstable where he has since remained.

Merrill & Mackintire, of Salem, are early in the field for the Christmas trade, as will be seen by their advertisement on the eighth page. This firm are popular and enterprising; their goods are selected early, and with a thorough understanding of the wants of their trade. As a result they have many Christmas novelties not to be found elsewhere, and this year is no exception. We commend what they have so say to the attention of our readers.

At Porter's market in Salem, the past week, has been exhibited some stall fed meat from the Salem poor farm. It is the largest beef shown in the market for a long time. And just here let us remark that Porter has on hand constantly home cooked corned beef, ham and tongue, by the pound, and we can assure our readers that it is equal in every respect to what they can prepare at home.

Mr. C. E. Walker retires from the editorship of the Lynn Union, and will devote his time to his duties in the Boston Custom House. Mr. Walker is an able and trenchant writer, and the Union's editorials have been freely quoted by the press of the surrounding country. The new propretors have changed the make up of the paper, and if the first number is a sample, the reputation of the Union will not suffer by the change.

A meeting will be held by the Lecture Course Committee to consider the question of removing the Free Course of Lectures from the Institute to the new Town Hall. A petition with the same object is being circulated.

To-morrow at the house of Rev. Mr. Hudson, there will be celebrated the 50 anniversary of the marriage of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hudson, also the 22d anniversary of Chas. Colby, Esq., and wife, of Hyde Park.

Last Thursday the friends of Mr and Mrs. Frank P. Marner gave them a pleasant surprise party at their home on Prospect street. They brought with them all the furnishings for a good feast, and a social evening was spent.

It is said the Lynn horse railroad will attach curtains to the windows inside the cars, and keep them pulled down while the car stands on the square, so as to distinguish it from the Salem car. Nearly every time people make mistakes.

This evening the Father Matthew C. T. A. will hold an assembly in Upton's Hall, and to-morrow afternoon the Emerald Court, C. O. F., a sunlight party in the new town hall (the small hall.) A good time we doubt not will be enjoyed at both places.

Mr. Geo. Grant says a man who purchases a buffalo robe of the real old-fashioned fur, will be required to produce a greater amount of cash in paying for it than for many years. He says the way the buffalo is slaughtered just for the hide is ridiculous.

It was remarked by many last Friday evening that it seemed odd to witness so fine a show—and not have to take a horse car or train to get home. We feel that our citizens will appreciate this, and if encouragement is given, there will be no need to go out of town.

There has been a good advance sale for the entertainment of the Grand Army to-morrow, Thanksgiving evening. Everybody who has not purchased tickets will want to be there, and we assure them they will have their money's worth, which is only 50 cents for the best seats in the house.

The first Concert of the season by the Salem Schubert Club will be given on Wednesday evening, Dec. 19. Two cantatas will be given—"The Erl King's Daughter" and "Christmas Eve.;" both are by Gade. Miss Grace F. Dalton will be one of the soloists.

Henry H. Faxon has sent us a volume containing the laws of Massachusetts relating to the sale of intoxicating liquors, and a pamphlet entitled "Our Next Emancipation," by D. J. H. Ward. A fine steel plate engraving of Mr. Faxon forms the frontispiece of the first mentioned.

The Selectmen have decided to charge $40 an evening for the new town hall, and also to charge a license to out of town parties who give entertainments in it. The price of the lower hall will depend on the number of ante-rooms required. The rent for the hall itself will be $10.

If you are an invited guest do you not feel more at ease and enjoy your visit better than if you are a guest unbidden? And will not the same hold good when your merchant, through the columns of your paper, kindly invites you to trade with him? Read each advertisement carefully.

Among the petitions to the next Legislature, James Perkins, formerly of Peabody, and sixty-three other residents of Magnolia will ask to have that part of Gloucester annexed to Manchester, and the town of Manchester will ask for authority to build a town way across a creek at Black beach.

Mr. Edward Forness has accepted the position left vacant at Dole & Osgood's carriage factory by the appointment of N. C. Patterson as janitor of the new town hall. Mr. Forness has done business in Boston many years, and for the past twenty-seven years he has not lost a day on an average in all that time.

A number of pensioners have received blanks from a claim agent at Washington, lately, to fill out for an increase of pension, and some of them thought they were sent by the department, which is not the case. They would do well to pay no attention to the circular if they would save themselves money, and the department great annoyance.

The Malden Mirror says that a former resident, Mr. Davidson, manager of the Lynn skating rink, visited the Malden rink last Friday evening, and by special request was invited by the managers to give an exhibition which he kindly accepted. The ease of his movements was well appreciated by the audience, who applauded loudly.

The meeting of the Unity Club was held in the parlors of the Unitarian Church last Monday evening. A paper, the contribution of different members of the club, was read by the editress, Miss L. Maria Winchester, after which the club indulged in a variety of amusements, games, etc. The next meeting of the club will be held with Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Worcester.

He leaves a wife and several children.

The management of the Lynn and Boston Horse R. R., deserve thanks for their readiness to delay the last car to So. Peabody, Wyoma and Lynn, on the night of the show in the new Town Hall. Of course it was mostly for the accommodation of So. Peabody, and in consideration that those patrons travel over a small portion of the route of the car, such a spirit of accommodation deserves mention.

When the Catholic church of Peabody was in course of construction it was found that the building fund would not cover the expense of erecting a suitable spire for the edifice. The tower was covered with a wooden roof, and left to await an appropriation which would allow a continuation of the work. The necessary amount having been obtained, work was resumed about two months ago. Mr. J. Arthur Trask took the contract for the brick work, and found it necessary to remove about five feet of the old tower, it being unsafe, and rebuild it about 7 feet. This gave a solid foundation for Mr. Colin Chisholm, the builder, to work upon. A timber octagon was built within the brick work to a depth of 25 feet, and within this octagon a square, and from this massive support the spire proper was run up about 100 feet. It is purely gothic, and is surmounted by a large golden cross and gargoyle figures, and is slated. Small windows light the interior, and, on the whole it is very neat and tasty. The workmen are finishing the bellfry, and we understand that a chime will be purchased to fill it. It will ring at five o'clock in the morning, and during Lent it will ring at all hours of the day, and so we shall have abundant opportunity to listen to its melody.

Miss E. C. Hamlin, engaged to sing in Elijah at the Handel & Hadyn Society in Boston, and by the Salem Oratorio Society, is a relative of Mrs. Geo. M. Osborn of this town.

In your Thanksgiving rejoicing remember the poor.

A Surprise:—About half past seven on Monday evening last, in a drenching storm, the residence of Rev. C. N. Smith was entered and captured by a crowd of men and women, which well nigh filled the house. Taken by perfect surprise, no inkling of such purpose of assault having reached the ears of the family, and perceiving numerous missiles, in the form of packages, in the hands of the assailants, with which if need be, to force an entrance, the Pastor, in despair of a successful resistance, at once, and as gracefully as possible, surrendered, and begged for terms. A delightful hour of social enjoyment, mingled with voices of song followed; when in a brief speech, Mr. E. H. Davis explained the situation, and in behalf of the company, extended to the pastor and his family, sentiments of sincerest Christian sympathy, and of high regards, and expressed assurances of the pleasure the evening had afforded, notwithstanding the unceremonious character of the visit. In response, the pastor assured the company that his alarm at first awakened by the rush made for his doors, amid the driving storm, had completely subsided, and spoke words of warm welcome, and of heartiest thanks. The company departing left behind numerous gifts, which the pastor and his family accept, and will enjoy with sentiments of thanksgiving to the many donors.

The Lynn Item, under the local management of Mr. John F. Moreland, is being received very heartily by our citizens. Their course and enterprise was plainly shown at the Dedication last Thursday, when they sent a stenographer over here, and appeared the next day with a full report of the exercises. It was quite in contrast with the Boston Herald and other lesser lights, who have kept up a kind of "cry baby" ever since because they were not furnished with the manuscript before hand.

There was a large and brilliant wedding at the Barton Square Church in Salem, on Thursday evening. Mr. Wilbur H. Davis was married to Miss Caroline B. Harrington. Mr. Davis is the son of Joseph Davis, of Lynn. Miss Harrington is the daughter of Mr. Richard Harrington of Salem. The church was filled with invited guests, and, there was at the close a brilliant reception at Mr. Harrington's residence on Federal street. The ceremony passed in a very pleasant manner. Many friends of the bride from this town were present.

Poultry dealers should not be unmindful of the law passed by the last Legislature, which applies to all poultry, except "green geese or green ducks" in any season, and "broiler" chickens, weighing two pounds or less, during the three summer months: No poultry, except it be alive, shall be sold or exposed for sale, until it has been properly dressed by the removal of the entire head, entrails and feathers, and of the crop when containing any food or other substance. Violation of this law is subject to a fine of $5 for each bird sold or exposed, and boards of health are to insist upon its enforcement.

When a person is far from home there is nothing that brings so much of gladness to his heart as a little token from friends he left behind, something to remind him that his friends still remember him. And such a person always takes an interest in any improvements that are going on in his native town. What more appropriate than to send one of those elegant lithographic pictures of the new town hall and the soldier's monument.

Mr. Abelard E. Wells, principal of the Bowditch school, was united in marriage, last Monday evening, to Miss Alice S. Teel, at the residence of the bride's mother on Central street, Rev. Mr. Hudson, of the Unitarian church, officiating. The wedding was a private one, only the immediate families being present. The newly married couple were the recipients of many substantial tokens of friendship. They have gone on a short trip to New York city.

An "oldest inhabitant" who has observed the weather, says to find the number of snow storms we are to have this winter, multiply the date of the first snow fall by the age of the moon, add the probable price of apples next spring, divide the sum total by the age of your mother-in-law, and you will know as much about it as any of the latter-day weather prophets.

Dr. Greene will again visit Peabody, Friday, Dec. 7th, as will be seen by reference to advertisement, and will give a Free Lecture in the Peabody Institute illustrated by Stereopticon and colored views.

There has been a good sale of seats for the G. A. R. entertainment on Thanksgiving night in the new hall.

There is an Irishman in this town named Magin. His wife should be named Hettie.

We have had some Indian summer weather the past week.

Most of our manufacturers will furnish turkeys to their employes. Chas. A. Thomas will supply the following firms: Wm. H. Brown, Nelson & Merrill, F. Osborn, Jr. & Co., Essex Glue Co., Brown & Stanley, Mayhew S. Clark, the G. A. R. widows, Henry Wilson, C. T. Batchelder, Geo. H. Little and Mrs. Eliza Sutton. Mr. S. A. Osborne will furnish J. E. Clement & Co., and Warren Trask several private gifts. Albert Poor gave away 300 pounds. Probably there are other firms who will give turkeys, that we were unable to learn.

The Lawrence American says of our new depot master, "Mr. Henry Morgan, station agent at the Eastern Railroad station, leaves, to-morrow, for his new position at Peabody. During about 11 years at this place he has discharged the duties of the position with promptness, courtesy and a rare fidelity. As might be expected, his obliging disposition and gentlemanly manners won and retained the friendship of many citizens whose best wishes go with him to Peabody.

The most cheerful things as the days grow dark and gloomy are the little sparrows. They flitter here and there, almost under our feet, in search of the myriad morsels of food that they instinctively find in the debris of the street. While other birds migrate to warmer climates, this much abused little alien stays through the winter's storms and cheerily chirps while the winds howl and the tempest drives other living things within doors.

An exchange gushes as follows: "Since the opening of our schools the pretty little school girls are as plenty on our streets as daisies in the month of June. Bless them; it makes one feel a touch of joy as he meets them on their way to and from school. Oh, if they could always be young and handsome as they are now! But then that cannot be, for what would become of the fond mothers and dear old grandmothers, if the girls were all to stay young?"

Another crank producing puzzle has been invented which is called the sixty-four puzzle. The puzzle consists of sixty-four blocks, eight on a side, numbering from one to sixty-four, and when correctly arranged the figures on the blocks will add 260 horizontally, perpendicular or diagonally. The blocks are black and white alternately and can be used as a checker board.

We call the attention of the musical people of this vicinity to the fact that the advertised programme of concerts by the Salem Oratorio Society possesses more than ordinary merit. A union of such a talented organization with that of the Symphony Orchestra of Georg Henschel, is an event of which any society may well be proud. Those of our readers who desire to attend the course of concerts advertised, should take early opportunity to secure their tickets.

It allays inflammation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment will cure. Send for circular. By mail, prepaid, 50c. —stamps received. Sold by all druggists.

RATHER TOO LONG.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS ON THE WRONG SIDE OF LIFE A VIRGINIAN TURNS THE TABLES.

"How long did you say?"

"Twenty years, I said. Up to the time I mentioned I had suffered from diseased liver for twenty years." said Mr. S. T. Hancock, of Richmond, Va., half sadly, as though thinking of that dilapidated section of his life. "At times I almost wished it had pleased providence to omit the liver from the human anatomy."

"Bad enough—twenty years of that sort of thing," responded a listener. "What was the upshot of it?"

"The upshot was that some time ago I went down to Scott's drug store in this city, and bought one of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS, applied it and was relieved in a few hours, and am now as sound as though my liver were made of India rubber."

Benson's—unlike the old fashioned kind of plasters—act promptly. Look for the word CAPCINE which is cut in the genuine. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

Book Notices.

One of the singular conjunctions which the whirligig of time brings about will be found in the Manhattan for December. Every one knows that the poet Stedman first came into notice by his poem, "The Diamond Wedding." Equally well known are the incidents which gave rise to the poem. Miss Frederica Bartlett, of New York, young, beautiful and accomplished, in October, 1859, married Senor Oviedo, a Cuban of great wealth. The jewels he gave her were exhibited at Tiffany's, whither numbers of people went to see them, and the marriage was the talk of the town. On the day of the wedding—which took place at the old St. Patrick's Cathedral, surrounded by a gaping crowd—Stedman's poem appeared in the New York Tribune. The bride, as was natural, felt not a little resentment at being made the subject of this sharp satire. But this resentment she long since got over, and she and her satirist are very good friends. Senor Oviedo lived after his marriage some ten years, and for nine years after his death his widow was engaged in a legal battle for her property. Thus she resided in Cuba more than nineteen years. Last year, in New York, she married—a love match—Col. von Glumer, a German gentleman who holds an official position in Mexico. Thither they proceeded immediately after being married, and for the last nine months she has resided in or near the City of Mexico. Under the title "Knickerbocker Eyes in Mexico," she will relate in the December Manhattan some incidents of her stay in that country; while, in the same number, Mr. Stedman will have a poem, "The Old Picture Dealer." Thus in its pages the two quondam foes meet after nearly a quarter of a century.

The Wheelman for December is a fresh illustration of the marvellous hold of the bicycle and tricycle in public favor. The leading article describes a vacation spent near Mt. Agamenticus, on the coast of Maine. It is beautifully illustrated and intensely interesting. President Bates contributes another of his inimitable tales. Mr. Bates has consented to write a story or sketch for every issue for a year. "Pixie and I" is the title of a sketch of travel in Wales. S. Conant Foster, "The Wheelman Poet," appears in a very comical poem, illustrated by seven silhouettes, by Stull. It is the finest piece of bicycling verse we have read for a long time. Mrs. Catherwood contributes the second part of "Castle Trundle." "Boston to Buffalo and beyond," is the description of a trip taken by a Phillips Academy boy. "The Other Wheel" is the somewhat humorous title of an article on the tricycle, by Doctor Blackman. "Modern Canoeing," by Kirk Monroe, is a very complete exposition of this subject. Editorials and Wheel news add much to the issue. The January number will contain contributions from John Burroughs, John Sanborn Phillips, Maurice Thompson, Harriet Hurd McClure, Mrs. M. H. Catherwood, C. E. S. Wood, and others. It will be lavishly illustrated. The Wheelman has combined with Outing, and Outing and the Wheelman, the name of the new magazine, will cover the entire field of out-door recreations and travel.

Miscellaneous.

I have been very much benefited by one 50 cent bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. When I began using it my Catarrh was so bad I had headache most the whole time and discharged a large amount of filthy matter. That has almost entirely disappeared and I have not had headache since to amount to anything. Please send me two more bottles. John H. Summers, Stephney, Conn.

Cream Balm has given satisfactory results. W. P. Draper, Druggist, Springfield, Mass.

ABOUT TEN FEET HIGH.

YARDSTICK AND THE OTHER BOARDERS TRUST NOT THE TALE—CERTAIN DEDUCTIONS.

"How high was that? Just read that again," sang out young Yardstick, one of our boarders, who is in the dry goods line, to Professor Seedling, who sometimes reads aloud a paragraph, after supper. The Professor complied, lending the beauty of his voice to the following statement:

"In the year 1772 a Dutchman named Roggewein discovered Easter island, and reported that the men on that island measured twelve feet in height, although the women were commonly not above ten or eleven feet high."

"Well," said young Yardstick, "in my opinion he was a Flying Dutchman and a lying Dutchman," and the other boarders agreed with him.

While nobody desires American ladies to be giants, all would be delighted to see them well and strong. Yet a thousand causes combine to keep a large proportion miserable. Too much confinement in heated rooms, or in the same house, multiplied domestic and family worries, want of sleep, little illnesses hard to describe, but peculiar to their sex—are the wolfish pack that drive the women "half out of their heads."

Miss M. A. Packard, of No. 323 Ewen street, Brooklyn, N. Y., confesses to having suffered from nameless physical disarrangements so induced, and says: PARKER'S GINGER TONIC is my strength and shield. It cured my dyspepsia, and for those general ills of which women complain so much, the Tonic is better than all things else. I have suffered for years in this way and speak from experience. A valuable feature to women is its delicious taste."

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC is not an essence of ginger, but a highly scientific combination of the best vegetable curative agents known to the medical profession. Physicians endorse it, and no wife or mother should be without it. Prices, 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Your druggist keeps it. Hiscox & Co., Chemists, New York.

"The Rajah" will be followed next month at the Madison Square Theatre, New York, by a three-act domestic comedy by Mr. Henry C. DeMille, entitled "Duty." The principal characters of the new play are young Dr. Van Arnem, who has married into a rich but parvenue family; his pretty wife, Esther, who, with her husband, lives with her parents, and is under undue parental influence; Leonard West, Van Arnem's friend, who while on a visit to the young couple induces Van Arnem to test his wife's affections by insisting that she shall follow him to a new home; Marguerite Ulmer, Esther's pretty sister, with whom West eventually falls in love; Rhoda Manley, a resident "friend of the family," who holds a document touching Mr. Ulmer's business transactions, which raises no end of family trouble; and Paley Pomeroy, who in the end marries Rhoda.—These charactors work out the story, as indicated, and when the curtain falls Esther has proven her devotion to her husband by following him to his new home.

M. Y. D. SYRUP CO.

Should our readers know of any good men wanting permanent employment we would refer them to the card of Chas. W. Stuart, of the Newark Nurseries, who wishes to engage good reliable men to act as salesmen. They are extensive growers of Nursery Stock at Newark, Wayne Co., N. Y., having some 250 acres under cultivation.

A cubic yard of gold may be coined in 1,805,039 sovereigns.

A young man looking over a pretty girl's shoulder while she was playing cards, observed: "What a lovely hand!" "You may have it if you want it," murmured she; and all the evening he was wondering what her intentions were.

Major N. Monroe, of Philadelphia, was in town last Thursday, selling pictures of Washington and other famous war Generals. This man went into the ate war a private, and for bravery gained the title of Major. He served on General McClellan's Staff. He is badly crippled and has to use crutches.

Last Tuesday afternoon, a man named George Moor of Lowell, violently insane, came to this town on the train from Lowell, that is due here at 2.12, and was in charge of an officer. He was driven to the Insane Asylum by Mr. H. C. Wilson and left at that institution. The following evening news was received that he had jumped from the room in which he was confined to the ground, but was not much injured. He immediately rushed to the railroad track and threw himself before the moving train, and was so badly injured that he died shortly after. His remains were taken to Lowell for burial last Friday.

We are easily led to follow bad example, and when we cannot imitate the virtues of some one, we soon begin to imitate his vices.—St. Jerome.

A LUCKY FISHERMAN.—In the vast amount of business transacted at the Baltimore, Md., Postoffice, Mr. M. V. Bailey, Superintendent of the Mails, is kept exceedingly busy, but somehow he finds a spare hour or day to go fishing, and from his experience he gives his testimony, that St. Jacobs Oil is the best remedy in the world for rheumatism, sprains, sore feet and joints, bruises, etc. It is the remedy for fishermen and gunners, who should always keep a bottle on hand.

MR. E. MARTIN,

IN PORTER'S DEPARTMENT OF THE U. S. ARMORY, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—INTERESTING STATEMENT OF HIS SUFFERING.

Here are plain facts from a most reliable source. Your reporter found Mr. Martin in Porter's department of the United States Armory, Springfield, Mass. After being introduced, Mr. Martin said: "I am willing to say what I can for the benefit of those afflicted as I have been. For years I have been a terrible sufferer from kidney and bladder difficulties, Mine being of the calculous or stony form. I have visited all the mineral springs whose waters have been recommended to me by the best medical authorities. I have tried every known remedy, and have submitted to several operations, and have tried everything that money could obtain in the way of relief, but I find that Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is the best medicine of all my experience—I have received more benefit from it. It is certainly a wonderful remedy for diseases of this kind. I have recommended FAVORITE REMEDY to others in the city of Springfield whom I knew to have suffered from Kidney and Liver complaints; and, I assure the public, that the FAVORITE REMEDY has done its work with a similar completeness in every single instance, and I trust some other sick and discouraged mortal may hear of it and try the 'Favorite Remedy' as I did."

Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is not a disguised enemy of the human race; where it cannot help, it does not harm. FAVORITE REMEDY is a combination of vegetable alteratives. It does not heat nor inflame the blood, but cools and purifies it. In all cases of Kidney troubles, Liver complaints, Constipation of the Bowels and the delicate derangements that afflict women, the action of FAVORITE REMEDY is beyond praise. Thousands of grateful people voluntarily testify to this in letters to Dr. Kennedy; and with a warmth and fullness of words which mere business documents and certificates never possess.

It seems to be a fact which ought to be readily verified that persons deprived of the crystalline lens to cure cataract, perceive the ultra-violet rays far more readily than persons who had not been so treated.

A statue to the inventor of the manufacture of soda is about to be erected at Issoudun, his native place. When this great chemist was alive the world refused him a breakfast; now that he is dead, why, a monument, of course.

There were in round numbers about 14,500,000 people in Spain and its belongings at the last record. Of these 6,600,000 were in Spain itself and 5,500,000 in the Philippines; 1,500,000 in Cuba, and about 750,000 in Porto Rico.

A new fire-proofing liquid is being introduced. It is a basic silicate of alumina, and it is said to be far better than tungstate of soda, because the cyanite does not scale off or evaporate, while the soda requires reapplication every week.

Cattle, a writer says, are maliciously destroyed in India by wounding them with a spike molded from the seeds of the Arbus precatonios. Death ensues on the second day, but the powdered seeds have little or no bad effect when taken internally.

It is reported that Dr. T. W. N. Greene states that he practiced for four years in a province of Montevideo, where the population, practically speaking, subsisted entirely upon meat, and yet scurvy was not known among them notwithstanding.

The proposed increase of M. Pasteur's pension to 25,000f. has finally been voted by the French Chamber of Deputies. Why there should have been any difficulty in the matter at all it is difficult to say, except that M. Pasteur is not one who makes friends readily.

From a paper by Dr. Fritz Muller it seems that the protection derived by insects from an evil ordor is not always absolute. He found about thirty specimens of a very common and exceedingly offensive Brazilian species whose wings were seemingly pierced by the beak of some bird or other.

According to the opinion of M. Victor Mayer, the color restrictions of benzol are due to a small quantity of some substance not hitherto determined, but which has a very close resemblance to benzol, and in advance Prof. Mayer has given to it the name of "thiopten," meantime continuing his researches.

The electric clocks in Paris number fifteen and seven are upon one circuit and eight upon another. But their working is not quite satisfactory. During the past year they have gone out of order from various causes and lost as much as two seconds from the effect of the vibrations of the streets upon the regulators.

France has had to seek some allies. The only existing powers which can do without other assistance are the United States and Great Britain. These two powers are great; the first because of its isolation and inherent strength; the latter because of the growth of centuries of more or less rapid increment.

That the wild horse is not of exclusively Asiatic origin is disputed not only by Dr. A. Nehring, but by Prof. Morse, the latter showing conclusively that the natural country of the horse was America; but there is reason for the belief that the animal existed nearly in its present form as far back as the tertiary age.

The knot or nautical mile is variously reckoned at from 6,076 feet to 6,125 feet. According to the standard of the British Admiralty the knot is the length of one minute of longitude at the Equator, or 6,086 feet 1.1527 statute inches, or 1,855 metres. The mean length of latitude sometimes reckoned as a knot is 6,076 feet, 1.151 statute mile, or 1,852 metres. A marine league is three of these sea miles.

The Journal of Science puts these very pertinent questions regarding the poisoning cases of the last half century: Have we at command means for the detection of all known poisons under all circumstances? Have our leading toxicologists and physicians shown sufficient skill in the application of such means? Is our manner of conducting trials and of obtaining and dealing with the evidence of experts well adapted for the discovery of truth and for the elucidation of error or could it admit of useful modification?

A new electric instrument has, it is said by the London Times, been perfected by Mr. A. M. St. George. It may or may not prove a grand success. Time will tell. The London Times says that this invention of George's is only supplementary to the George telephone. Every message will not only be conveyed, but can be produced at any future time. A circular plate of glass is coated with collodion and made sensitive much in the same way as a photographer's plate. This is placed in a dark box to which there is a slit for admitting a ray of light. In front of the slit is a small telephone diaphragm, which by its vibrations opens and closes a small shutter, constantly passing and making faint, dark lines on the glass. Vibrations on the glass cause the lines to vary in thickness. The glass-work is revolved by clock-work, and the whole conversation as it leaves the telephone is received on the plate, the spoken words being recorded as in photography. What is most astonishing is that the original plate can be taken back, put, if need be, in communication with a distant telephone, and made to repeat the original conversation.

LOUIS PHILIPPE'S FLIGHT.

In the collection of Adolphe Cremieux's letters and sayings, recently published under the title of "En 1848," there is a passage giving some hitherto unpublished details of Louis Philippe's flight from the Tuileries. The passage runs as follows: "After several vain interviews with the King, Cremieux arrived once more at the Tuileries just as the mob was pouring into the Place de Caroussal and a butchery beginning. He was met by the Duc de Montpensier, who asked what had happened. 'I think all is lost, Monseigneur,' replied Cremieux. 'The people press forward, the troops are shooting at only one place close by. The King must try to save himself.' Louis Philippe had heard what was said, and when Cremieux approached was already changing his uniform for a black suit and had taken off his Order of the Legion of Honor. The Queen was present, and was soon joined by several ladies weeping, and dressed in mourning. The Duchess de Montpensier threw herself into her husband's arms, who requested Cremieux to lead her, but this was prevented by M. de Lastevrie, who came forward. The representative of the people, so soon to be a member of the Provisional Government, begged the royal family to hasten their preparations, and received a bitter reply from the Queen. 'You misjudge my impatience, madame,' said Cremieux; 'the danger in which the King stands is my excuse.' Four ladies, of whom one must have been the Duchess de Nemours, and each of whom had a child in her arms, were still in the room. Orders were issued for four carriages to wait in the Place de la Concorde. The King asked for his keys, and a bunch was brought; he took a large portfolio from the table, and the company entered a passage leading to the garden; Cremieux foremost with the Duc de Montpensier, then the King and Queen, and, lastly, the ladies and children. The Tuileries garden was reached through the Pavillon de l'Horloge. National Guards on foot and horseback silently saluted. 'Do you think we run any danger?' The Duc de Montpensier asked Cremieux, who, encouraging him, promised to accompany the party as far as St. Cloud. In the Place de la Concorde only one carriage was waiting, and was immediately entered by the Duchess de Nemours, with three other ladies and the children. 'What is to become of the King and Queen?' cried the Duc de Montpensier. The King, who only now became aware of the state of the case ran up to the carriage, tore open the door, and exclaimed: 'Get out, all of you.' The occupants at once obeyed, and Louis Philippe and the Queen hastily took their places. One of the ladies, probably the Duchess de Nemours and her child were thrust in after, and the King cried 'Drive on!' The coachman did not hear. Cremieux repeated the order, and the horses were driven off at a sharp trot. When Cremieux turned round the Place de la Concorde was almost empty. The Duc de Montpensier, who seemingly had found another carriage, had disappeared with the rest of the family. For a moment Cremieux remained standing quite amazed at the sudden solution of the difficulty, and then catching sight of the Palais Bourbon on the other side of the Seine, he remembered his next pressing duty. Shortly after he announced the flight of the royal family to the Chamber.

EARLY MARRIAGE.

Lady Sarah Cadogan, daughter of William, first Earl Cadogan, was married at the age of thirteen, to Charles, second Duke of Richmond, aged eighteen. It is said that this marriage was a bargain to cancel a gambling debt between their parents, Lady Sarah being a co-heiress. The young Lord March was brought from college and the little lady from her nursery for the ceremony, which took place at the Hague. The bride was amazed and silent, but the husband exclaimed, "Surely you are not going to marry me to that dowdy?" Married, however, he was, and his tutor then took him off to the Continent, and the bride went back to her mother. Three years after Lord March returned from his travels, but having such a disagreeable recollection of his wife was in no hurry to join her, and went the first evening to the theatre. There he saw a lady so beautiful that he asked who she was. "The reigning toast, Lady March," was the answer he got. He hastened to claim her, and their lifelong affection for each other is much commented upon by contemporaneous writers—indeed it was said that the Duchess, who only survived him a year, died of grief.

MEASURING BY THE EYE.

It is a most excellent practice for boys and girls to judge of the size and weight of common articles by the eye. Let some one hold up a cane and guess its length, and see how varied the answers will be. A country school master was in the habit of measuring a scholar's height, and having the other pupils mark the height on the wall. He would also mark off an inch, a foot, or a yard in some conspicuous place, and then see how near anybody could come to chalking the same length upon the black-board. If asked which was the taller, a barrel of flour or a three-year old child, how many would answer correctly? Weights can be learned by packages which are carried home from the store, and the tea table talk can be made interesting by guessing how much liquid the cups and pitchers will hold.

Herbert Spencer says Americans are so driven by business cares that they never stop to leisurely examine anything. Guess he never saw five or six hundred busy Americans standing around for two hours watching three men raising an office safe to a fourth-story window.

An alarm of fire, Saturday morning at 1.45 sent the department flying towards Caller street where the livery and boarding stable of Charles Potter was found to be in flames. Hose 1 attached a line at the hydrant in front of Mr. Otis Brown's house, and got first and second water on the fire. Hose 2 followed, but hose 4, owing to trouble at the hydrant, were delayed for some time. Steamer one attached to the hydrant at the foot of the hill on Caller street, but did not get water for some time, as the supplementary gate at the foot of the hydrant was about half shut. Hose 3 and 5 were both on the ground but did not work. The firemen worked with a will and soon had the fire all out. The fire was discovered by Thomas Doyle and four other young men who were returning home from a dance. In going by the barn they heard a crackling, and looking into a window, they discovered the fire. They forced an entrance to the building and got out the horses, nine in number, and ran out the carriages to a place of safety. The building shows the good work of the firemen as it stands now. We think there was less confusion and more real solid work done at this fire than has been seen for some time. The building was owned by George Holman, and was insured in the Royal by O. B. Chadwick & Co., for $1,200, with $500 on Holman's horse and carriage in the Phœnix. C. H. Potter was insured $450 on horses and carriages in the Phœnix, and $300, on stock in Newark, N. J. company, placed by F. E. Farnham, $1000 in Pennsylvania company, for J. A. Lord's horses and carriages. O. B. Chadwick also had $450 on horse and carriage in Pennsylvania company. The fire was probably incendiary and was started at the foot of the stairs leading into the hay loft where about half a ton of hay was stored. The fire broke out again Sunday morning about 4 o'clock, and was put out by M. W. Cummings and some of the night watch.

Collations were furnished Saturday morning at the store of Fifield and Smiley, at the house of Hose 4 and at the brick engine house. The "boys" got through work at half past four.

An alarm was given at 6 o'clock Sunday evening, caused by the ringing of the bell on the house of Hose 4. A coal steamer coming into Salem harbor, was whistling for a pilot, and some boys in "Dublin" began to cry fire, which was taken up by the bell on four's house thus getting in the alarm. Steamer one was out first followed by the truck, the horse hose going out last, but before they got to Washington street it was just the reverse.

The Chief Engineer issued orders Monday morning of this week, that the hydrants be looked after, oiled, soaped and tested and a report made to him of the condition of each hydrant within forty-eight hours. For the last two or three fires some of the hydrants have bothered in some way or other, and it looks as though some one was tampering with them.

Hose 4 held a meeting after the fire Saturday morning, and voted to loan Chas. Potter $300 of their money to replace his business again.

At the alarm Sunday night everything was out of the house inside of five minutes, and had there been a fire, it would have been a short-lived one.

A new horse has been put into the box stall at the engine house, and they do say it is to be used in the department. It is a trifle thin and looks as though it might be slow, but will last a good many years.

Some of the boys thought that there was a big fire in West Peabody last night, when the sun set so brilliant.

Gen. Sutton steamer number one have voted to refurnish their room and a committee of four have been chosen to attend to it. Wm. Blaney will commence work after Thanksgiving to tint the walls and fresco the ceiling, which will be done in oil. The committee will visit Salem this afternoon to pick out their furniture, which will be stuffed chairs and lounges. Gen. Eben Sutton, of North Andover, told them to purchase a good substantial carpet and he would pay for it. The committee have purchased a nice tapestry carpet costing sixty dollars, which will be put down as soon as the painters are through. New curtains will be put up and then the company will have the finest parlor in the department. Gen. Sutton was in the house looking over the apparatus last Thursday.

All the hydrants in town have been examined and tried, and every one has been found in good order for fire service; all the new ones working in first rate shape. Some of the oldest styled hydrants work a little hard, but otherwise are in good order.

Quite a number of the boys in the department are going to attend the balls in Wakefield and Stoneham to-night.

A new piece of suction hose, twelve feet long was received, and put on the old steamer yesterday.

Probably the old steamer will go off duty and steamer two will be put on Saturday, Dec. 1st. ZERO.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

Only two weeks remain of the present run of the spectacle of "Jalma," as the engagement of Irving and Miss Terry at the Boston Theatre renders its withdrawal positively necessary. Those of our readers who desire to improve the opportunity of its closing hours will do well to be on hand.

For this week and next at the Bijou Theatre "Iolanthe" is revived. Miss Clara Poole, who has recovered from her illness, will take the part of Iolanthe. Mr. Wilkinson makes his first appearance as the "Lord High Chancellor," and the rest of the cast is equal to any presentation of this popular opera. Meanwhile the rehearsal of the "Beggar Student" goes on, and it is anticipated that a great run is in prospect.

Lawrence Barrett at the Park Theatre, closes his engagement this week, so that only a few more nights remain. To-morrow, Thanksgiving afternoon and evening, he will appear in Francesca da Rimini, Friday evening in Shylock and David Garrick, and Saturday evening in Yorick's Love. These performances will be the last Mr. Barrett will give here for a year, and possibly for a longer period, as he goes to London in the spring to begin on April 14 a long engagement at Henry Irving's theatre, the Lyceum, and

The dedication concert last Thursday evening proved a very enjoyable one to the large audience present. The Salem Brass Band under the direction of Mr. Reinewald, gave several selections which were played with much care and received a generous applause. As a vocalist the committee had engaged Miss Gertrude Franklin of Boston, the Polly of Pounce & Co., at the Bijou Theatre, and the singing of this lady met with merited recognition. Her execution is almost faultless, and her presence on the stage graceful and attractive. The entire entertainment was a success.

thereafter will make an extended professional tour through Great Britain before returning to this country. The next attraction at this theatre will be the Madison Square Co. in Hazel Kirke.

At Mechanic Hall, Salem, last Thursday evening, the society drama of 7-20-8 was played. The performance was fine in all respects and deserved a better audience.

Mr. George W. Chadwick has composed for Mr. T. Adamowski a romanza for violin, which Mr. Adamowski will play for the first time in public at the Arlington Club concert of Jan. 3. Mr. Chadwick is the present leader of the Salem Schubert Club.

A large and highly good natured audience entered our new town hall for the opening entertainment after its dedication. The audience numbered about eleven hundred, and the opera of Virginia was finely presented by the Bijou Opera Co. of Boston. The cast was the same as announced with the exception of Clara Poole, who was ill, and had been unable to appear with the company in the few previous presentations. It is our intention later, in connection with Messrs. Rock & Bachert, of Lynn, to present to our people a first class course of entertainments of a musical and dramatic character, similar to the courses in Lynn, Worcester and other places, and to put the seats for the entire course at popular prices. Such a course we believe would be received with favor, and we hope to arrange one that will command the patronage of our citizens, and also of many of our neighbors and friends in Salem.

TO OUR PATRONS!

Merrill & Mackintire, 220 Essex Street, Salem.

Having on previous holiday seasons been liberally patronized by our customers, we have resolved this season to outdo all our former efforts and to lay before the citizens of Essex County the largest and most comprehensive assortment of goods, suitable for the Christmas Holidays, ever shown in Essex County.

To this end we made arrangements early in 1883, to have most of our foreign goods imported directly for us, thus saving a jobber's profit, and enabling us to sell many articles at prices which will be found extremely low for their quality. Below is a partial list of the goods which we shall carry in stock:

BOOKS.

Our Book Counter is replete with new volumes, suitable for all ages, and tastes, and adapted in price to every purse.

In fine Illustrated Works there are several new ones this season, which are sold at popular prices. WILMOT'S SUCCESS!

THE TALK OF THE PEOPLE AND ENVY OF CERTAIN NARROW MINDED COMPETITORS.

Ever since we came to Salem, our trade has been on the increase, in spite of a certain competitor, (better known for his loud talk and boast than for his deeds) who said when we came to Salem, that he would drive us from the place inside of six months, but he should remember that we are not the kind to be driven, in fact it looks as though the boot was on the other leg. We are here to stay and we shall keep right on underselling any and all competitors, no matter if they go on the warpath every day during the week and twice on Sunday.

Business Is Booming!

And we are having a constant rush since we began our Mammoth Mark down Sale of

OVERCOATS, SUITS AND PANTALOONS.

In fact some would be big competitors almost die of grief and envy at the success we are having, for they know as well as the people that it is useless for them to try to compete with a manufacturer. But they try to rally by copying our advertisements almost word for word, talk never hurts anybody, figures tell every time, and it is Figures we shall give you, not talk. REMEMBER! That no competitor, no matter what he says, has any of our clothing, although they advertise to that effect.

We might go on numerating our bargains and cover every page of this paper with our wonderful bargains, and then not give you a tenth part of them, but will stop in the overcoat line by saying that our

The Mortgage.

We worked through spring and winter, through summer and through fall,
But the mortgage worked the hardest and the steadiest of them all;
It worked on nights and Sundays; it worked each holiday;
It settled down among us and it never went away.

Whatever we kept from it seemed almost as bad as theft;
It was watched every minute and ruled us right and left.
The rust and blight were with us sometimes and sometimes not;
The dark-browed, scowling mortgage was forever on the spot.

The weevil and the cut-worm, they went as well as came;
The mortgage stayed forever; eating hearty all the same.

It nailed up every window, stood guard at every door,
And happiness and sunshine made their home with us no more,
Till with failing crops and sickness we got stalled
upon the grade,
And there came a dark day on us when the interest wasn't paid;

And there came a sharp foreclosure and I kind
o' lost my hold,
And grew weary and discouraged, and the farm was cheaply sold.

The children left and scattered, when they hardly yet were grown;
My wife she pined and perished, an' I found myself alone.

What she died of was a "mystery," an' the doctors never knew;
But I knew she died of mortgage—just as well as I wanted to.

If to trace a hidden sorrow were within the doctor's art
They'd ha' found a mortgage lying on that woman's broken heart.
Worm or beetle, drought or tempest, on a farmer's land may fall,
But for first class ruination, trust a mortgage 'gainst them all.

Selected Story.

The Girl Detective.

The door of Rufus Markham's counting-room was securely closed, and the proprietor of the large, flourishing cotton factory talked earnestly with a gentlemanly looking man of middle age, whose face was as impressive as a wax mask.

"Five thousand dollars!" said the individual. "It was a large sum to leave exposed."

"Exposed!" said Mr. Markham. "It was in my private desk, to which no one has access but myself and my nephew, Fred. Tryon."

"Would it be possible the young gentleman—"

"Sir," said Mr. Markham, "my nephew is not a thief. If he needed ten times that sum he knows I would freely give it to him. He will be my heir, and he is as dear to me as a son. It is simply absurd to connect him in any way with this robbery."

"Just state this matter again as briefly as you can, and allow me to take notes; will you, Mr. Markham?"

"Certainly. I drew five thousand dollars out of the bank yesterday to meet a note that was not presented for payment. Retaining it until after the bank was closed, I concluded to lock it in my desk until this morning, and did so. At nine o'clock this morning the expected note was presented and I unlocked the desk. The money was gone, and with it a small memorandum-book that was in the same roll."

"The lock was not forced?"

"No, sir; the desk was apparently exactly as I left it."

"And Mr. Tryon has the only duplicate?"

The old gentleman frowned. He was evidently displeased at the turn the detective's suspicions seemed to be taking.

"Yes, my nephew certainly has the only duplicate key."

"Humph! yes. Have you the numbers of all the notes?"

"Yes. The roll consisted of ten five-hundred-dollar notes."

The list of numbers being taken, the detective made a searching examination of the apartment, and prepared to take his departure. As he stood near the door Mr. Markham suddenly said nervously:—

"I think, Mr. Vodges, if you make any discoveries you had better report to me privately before making any arrests."

"Certainly, sir, if you desire it. Will you grant me one favor? Do not mention the robbery to Mr. Tryon, if you have not done so already."

"No one has heard of it but yourself."

"Very good. I will call again when I have any report to make."

"Fred! Fred!" the old gentleman said in a troubled tone, when he was alone. "Vodges evidently thinks it is Fred! It is impossible that my nephew would rob me. I cannot believe it. And yet he knew the money was there. He was here when I handed Arnold the check, and here when he returned with the money. He knew that Johnson's note was not presented, and Fred alone has a duplicate key. Oh, if it should be! Anna's boy, that I have promised to love as a son. Have I kept my promise? Where have I failed? And why should he steal from me when all I have is his? I cannot, will not, believe it."

"May I come in?" asked a pleasant voice at the door, and, permission being given, Fred Tryon entered the room.

Looking into his handsome young face, bright and frank, with wide-opened, brown eyes, and curls of nut-brown hair, it was hard to connect it with any idea of roguery, ingratitude and theft. His manner toward his uncle, who had ever filled a father's place, was the perfection of respectful affection, and before he had been an hour in the counting-room Mr. Markham's fears were entirely gone.

They were talking of a certain dark-eyed little maiden who was soon to be Mrs. Tryon, and when Fred left his uncle it was with a promise that he would call in the evening upon Miss Clarkson to arrange for the wedding day.

The young man, a favorite of fashion, apparently, spent the afternoon with his betrothed, received his uncle in the evening beside her, and accompanied the old gentleman to his boarding-house, receiving an affectionate farewell when he took his way to his own rooms in another house. For a week he heard nothing of the robbery.

It was just when summer twilight was fading that, returning home from a drive with Maud Clarkson, Fred met his uncle's confidential clerk waiting for him at Maud's house.

"I have a note for you, Mr. Fred," he said, "and as you were not at home I thought I would wait for you here."

Something in the young man's face struck a sudden chill to Maud's heart.

"You have bad news," she cried.

"Perhaps Mr. Fred had better read the note," was the evasive answer.

But Maud's terror was only increased when Fred, after reading the note, broke into a furious exclamation of rage.

"Who dares say that I am a midnight burglar?" he shouted.

"O Fred! what is it?" asked Maud, turning very white.

"My uncle has been robbed of five thousand dollars, and he pays me the compliment of supposing me to be the thief, because I have a duplicate key to his private desk. I—great Heaven!" he cried, with a sudden change in his voice, "he cannot mean it. I rob my uncle, I—"

"Mr. Fred," said the clerk, respectfully, "I only waited to see how you took the note to speak a few words of advice. Mr. Fred, I was with your father when he was killed on a railway train. I was with your uncle when he brought you from your mother's funeral to his home. I took you to boarding-school and brought you home for the holidays, and I've loved you, boy and man, since you were ten years old, and that's twelve long years. I know you never, never took the money; but things look ugly for you."

"But," said Fred, grasping the hand the old clerk held out to him, "I cannot understand it. Listen." And he read aloud the note from his uncle:—

"MR. FREDERICK TRYON:—I could not believe without proof—undeniable, positive proof—that you could rob me of five thousand dollars, taken, as you know, from my private desk on Wednesday last. You are my sister's son, and I will never be the one to imprison or punish you; but you are no longer a nephew of mine. Willingly, I will never look in your face again. Your ill-gotten gains I freely give you to start in some business, trusting that you will endeavor to live honestly in the future. Do not try to see me; I will not listen to any explanations I know to be false. Do not write, for I will not open your letters.

"RUFUS MARKHAM."

Maud Clarkson grew white as death as she heard the stern edict.

"O Fred!" she cried, "what can you do?"

"Starve, I suppose," was the bitter answer, "as I do not happen to possess the ill-gotten gains he so generously presents me. But I will not ask you to starve with me, Maud. You were betrothed to the millionnaire's nephew and heir; the disinherited beggar frees you from your promise."

"Fred," she cried, bursting into tears, "how can you be so cruel?" Then, unheeding the clerk, who was discreetly looking from the window, she came close to Fred's side. "Darling," she said, fixing her large black eyes upon his face, "if all the world cast you off, I will keep my promise."

The young lover had been bewildered, indignant, desperate, but he folded the gentle comforter in his arms, and great tears fell on her upturned face.

"God bless you, Maud!" he cried; "I can defy the world if you are true to me. Now, Potter, sit down and tell me what you know of this wretched business."

"Well, Mr. Fred, I never heard of the robbery until this morning, when Vodges, the detective your uncle employed to work it up, came to make his report. They did not notice me at first, and when your uncle remembered I was in the room I had heard about all that Vodges knew. You remember there was a note coming due last Wednesday?"

"To Johnson?"

"Yes; well, I thought at the time it was curious that your uncle gave him a check, when I knew the money was drawn out of the bank the day before to meet the very note. But I never knew till this morning that the money was stolen from Mr. Markham's desk by means of false keys. Mr. Fred," said the old man, earnestly, "it was all in five-hundred-dollar notes, and your uncle had the numbers."

"Well?"

"This morning Vodges brought back one of the notes which you gave to T—— yesterday in payment for a pearl locket."

"Stop! Potter, let me think. Where did I get that note? I have it. Arnold gave it to me to take out a hundred dollars I lent him some time ago. And Arnold—Potter, Arnold borrowed my keys last Wednesday night to open his trunk. Potter, huzza! we know the thief."

"Not so fast, Mr. Fred—not so fast. It will not be an easy matter to prove this. Were there any witnesses present when Arnold borrowed the keys?"

"No; I was all alone in my room, half undressed, when he knocked at my door and said he had lost the key of his trunk. I lent him my bunch of keys, which he returned before I was out of bed the next day."

"And you were alone when he paid you the money?"

"Yes; I thought he was very flush, for you know as well as I do, Potter, that a note for five hundred dollars is not a daily visitor in Graham Arnold's pocket."

"He is a cunning scoundrel. He wants to ascertain if the notes can be identified before he tries to get rid of them himself. Mr. Fred, will you leave it to me a few days—and if I do not catch the thief you may try."

"But my uncle?"

"Wait till you can prove your innocence before you see him. Only a week—give me only a week to watch Arnold. And, by the way, you will give me an additional chance if you will leave the city. Throw him off his guard by letting him suppose you are banished for his crime."

"Run away, like a coward?" flashed Fred.

"Only for a week. You see, the probability is that Arnold has the money in his possession yet. He will wait to see the fate of what he has given you before putting any more into circulation; but he has probably hidden it very securely. He will watch, but if you are willing I will take your room while you are gone and do a little detective business on my part."

It was not an easy matter to persuade Fred to consent to Potter's plan, but Maud's persuasions being added to the old man's, he finally consented to leave the city for a week, and return in time to vindicate his own innocence in case of Potter's failure.

Before night Fred was on his way to visit another city, and his landlady had agreed to allow Mr. Potter to occupy his place during his absence.

Fred had been gone two days when the old clerk called upon Miss Clarkson to report progress.

"I am completely baffled," he said in answer to her inquiries. "You see Arnold knows me, and evidently suspects me. He is so affectionately desirous of keeping me in sight that I cannot get a peep in his room; and whenever he is out he locks the door and gives the key to the landlady. I cannot force the door yet, and by the time Fred returns I am afraid the money will be smuggled away. I am sure the money is in his possession now, he is so careful about his room. Nobody gets in there but the landlady. I did think of bribing the chambermaid to let me in when she was at work there, but unfortunately she left to-day."

A flash of light seemed to pass across Maud's face, but she only said, demurely,—

"Your landlady is German, is she not?"

"Yes; her English is very imperfect. Have you ever seen her?"

"No; I have heard Fred speak of her. My mother, you know, was German."

"But what has that to do with Fred's case?"

"I will tell you. Vodges has tried to catch the thief and failed. You have tried and failed. I mean to try, and succeed."

"You! What can you do?"

"Come to-morrow and I will tell you."

Punctual to the appointed time Potter made his appearance. With dancing eyes and flushed cheeks Maud met him.

"Well?" he asked, certain from her looks that she had good tidings.

"I told you I would succeed."

"And you did? Huzza! I feel as young as Fred himself."

"To whom I have telegraphed to return. He will be here this evening, and you must bring Mr. Markham, Mr. Vodges, and the proper police authorities to meet in his room. Then, Mr. Potter, go to Mr. Arnold's room and remove the pipe of the stove at the elbow. In the joint you will find Mr. Markham's memorandum book and the missing notes."

"You are sure?"

"Listen. This morning, in a calico dress, sunbonnet, and coarse shoes for disguise, I applied for the place of chambermaid at the boarding house where Mr. Arnold has a room. I braided my hair in two long plaits, and convinced your landlady that I was a recent importation from Germany, and unable to speak a word of English. She agreed to take me for one week on trial, and before I had been two hours in the house I was sent to tidy Mr. Arnold's room. Never was a room tidied so quickly; and, seeing my mistress on her way to market, I shot the bolt and took a survey of the premises. The trunk was locked, the bureau drawer wide open, the closet door ajar. I felt a reluctance to overhaul any private depositories, though I should have done it," she added resolutely, "if I had been driven to it. I rummaged a little, when on the closet floor I espied a shirt, apparently scarcely soiled except one sleeve, and that was black with soot. I wondered what he would be doing at the fireplace in summer, and went to examine. A few minutes sufficed to convince me that the stove had been moved out, and the elbow of the pipe removed. I repeated the process, to find a roll of five-hundred-dollar notes and a small note-book with the name of Rufus Markham on the first page. I carefully replaced everything and came home. Now, Mr. Potter, he must be taken by surprise, or he may say Fred put the notes there."

"You are a brave girl!" cried the old man, looking with admiration at the beautiful, animated face, "and Fred will owe you more than his life—his reputation."

"He can repay me by coming to tell me the good news when he is clear."

* * * * *

Eight was struck by the city clocks when Dr. Graham Arnold, dressed in the latest fashion, and with a fragrant Havana between his lips, strolled leisurely into his own room.

He had been in the parlor of his boarding-house for hours, watching Mr. Potter with some anxiety, but was wholly unaware of the little party of four who, in Mr. Potter's temporary apartment, awaited his return to his own room.

Once inside the door the nonchalant look left the handsome face of the young man, and he muttered fiercely,—

"I must get out of this. Potter suspects me, and may yet communicate his suspicions to Mr. Markham. I will be off to-night as soon as the house is quiet."

He opened a small travelling satchel as he spoke, and was rapidly filling it with necessaries for a journey, when he was interrupted by a knock at the door.

Tossing the satchel into the closet he cried,—

"Come in."

But his face turned livid as his call was obeyed, and a party of five entered the room.

Two policemen stationed themselves on his right and left, while Mr. Markham, Mr. Potter, and Fred Tryon followed them.

"Now, Mr. Potter," said one of the policemen, with the face and voice of the detective Vodges, "will you tell us where to search for those missing notes?"

"What notes?" cried Arnold. "What does this outrage mean?"

"It means," said Mr. Potter, "that your plan to throw the robbery of Mr. Markham's private desk upon his nephew, has failed. It means that the five thousand dollars stolen from that gentleman are now in your possession, except only one note given to Mr. Tryon in payment of a debt."

"It's a lie!" cried the prisoner; but his white face, faltering voice, and shaking limbs, were no proof of innocence. "Search my trunks; search everything I have."

"No, gentlemen," said Mr. Potter. "Draw out the stove, if you please, and look in the elbow of the pipe."

With a cry Graham Arnold fell senseless to the floor as Vodges put his hand upon the stove.

Mr. Markham turned to Fred. There was no word spoken. Hand clasped hand, and each read forgiveness in the other's eyes.

Mr. Graham Arnold spent some weeks in jail ere his trial and conviction, but before his sentence was pronounced Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Tryon were crossing the ocean on a wedding tour to Europe.

A YOUTHFUL ARTIST.

Leonardo da Vinci, Michael Angelo Buonarotti, etc., among the old painters, and Benjamin West, Thomas Gainsborough, etc., etc., among the moderns, displayed their propensity for drawing at a very early age. The wonderful genius of Thomas Laurence began to be manifested when he was only three years old. He could recite verses to the admiration of all who heard him, and by a natural faculty began to use a pencil and take likenesses—an accomplishment which induced his parents to present him to all strangers of note (the father was landlord of the "Black Bear" at Devizes) who visited their houses. A striking instance of this precocity of talent occurred when he was but five years of age, and is thus mentioned: Lord and Lady Kenyon happened to stop for a day at the "Black Bear," on their way to Bath. Mr. Laurence entered their apartment and began to expatiate on the genius of his boy, who, "although only in his fifth year, could recite them poetry or speeches or take their likenesses, whichever they chose." Lady Kenyon was, in the first instance, somewhat annoyed by the interruption, but there presently capered into the room, straddling upon a stick, the most lovely and spirited child she had ever beheld. His beautiful face was flushed with exercise, and neither she nor her husband felt inclined to stop his gambols. As soon as the boy could be induced to stand still Lady Kenyon took him into her arms and asked him if he could take the likeness of that gentleman, pointing to the future Lord Chief Justice. The child, looking with an impatient earnestness at Lord Kenyon, exclaimed, "Yes, that I can, and very like too." While materials were sent for the child resumed his play, but when all was prepared, throwing his little legs from over the stick, he was lifted on the table and seated in an armchair, from which height he took Lord Kenyon's likeness with a rapidity, a spirit and a correctness truly astonishing. The child afterwards took the profile of Lady Kenyon. At the age of ten the young artist commenced executing original compositions of a higher class. He painted several Scripture pieces.

HOW PLAYING CARDS ARE MADE.

The cardboard is made in sheets large enough for fifty cards. The printing is done in six impressions—two colors for the back and four for the face. The pattern for the back is generally an interwoven check in green and yellow. When this is printed the card is reversed and the red plate put on. This prints the hearts and diamonds, the king's scabbard, crown and nose, jack's hat and mantle, and several portions of the queen's dress. The blue and yellow colors follow in succession, both being used mainly to give additional lustre to the court costumes. Then the black plate finishes. It is said two firms have recently got in machinery which enables them to print all colors with one impression, thereby saving one-sixth of the printing labor. When the cards are printed they are cut into long strips, each strip showing six cards placed lengthways. Then the cutting machine clips them out with rounded corners ready for the packer. At this stage only half the work is done. The sorting, counting and folding requires as many hands to perform as do the printing and clipping. The work is done mainly by girls.

GARTERS FOR DUDES.

Queen Victoria has made John, Marquis of Lorne, a Knight of the Garter. In sending a garter to the auburn-haired dude who figures before the public as the husband of the Princess Louise, the Queen has made a mistake. It should have gone to Mrs. Louise, who is decidedly the "gray mare," who is said to very greatly surpass her Scotch spouse in the matter of legs and calf.

CAN'T COOK AS MOTHER DID.—How many a young wife's heart is saddened and happiness scattered because she cannot "cook as mother did." It is strange, sadly strange, and yet we all know it is true. How many a time has the tender-hearted reporter felt his soul bursting with grief as he told the harrowing story of some poor suffering woman, whose cheerful sunshine had turned to dismal darkness just because she could not "cook as mother did." And how it delights the heart of the reporter when he chances to hear of one devoted young wife who is rescued from the gloomy fate of so many, in a manner so simple and easy that the only wonder is that all are not saved. This one to whom he now refers was led a blushing and blooming bride, but a few short weeks ago, to the altar by one of our most promising and prominent young men. He promised to do everything in his power to make her happy, but in an evil hour he made the dangerous discovery that she could not "cook as mother did." He told her so, and from that hour the life-light of happiness began to die out in her once radiant eyes. The bloom, that put to shame the fancied perfection of the rose, departed from her cheek; the voice that welcomed him to a happy heart and home grew silent as the grave and the young husband saw that something must be done soon. He asked the sorrowful wife why she was so sad, and she told him because she could not "cook as his mother did;" but if she had Royal Baking Powder he could say so no longer. Like a sensible fellow, he ordered a dozen boxes at once, and now he says he is afraid that his wife will raise the roof off the house some day, but he don't care, for she is happy.

PEABODY.

Last Sabbath was the tenth anniversary of the settlement of Rev. J. W. Hudson as pastor of the Unitarian Church in this town. Mr. Hudson preached from Hebrews 6: 1. "Go on unto perfection." The preacher referred to the different interpretations of the word, as used by Paul and Jesus in the New Testament, and to the attempts to limit it, claiming that such limitation makes it something else, fosters a false confidence, and produces despondency in the minds of those who think they ought to attain to what they are unable to. It sometimes leads to antinomianism. This theological perfection, the preacher thought was not warranted by the Scriptures. It was used in its ordinary sense, not to point out a specific action, but to point out a direction. At the close of the sermon the preacher referred feelingly to the occasion, that it was ten years since he first came to the pastorate of the church. The sermon of to-day was a fitting one, as all his pulpit utterances have been given with reference to this command, be perfect. Much had come and gone during these ten years—much of joy and of grief. In all these experiences he had come into clearer and more intimate communion with his people. He had no need to refer to his preaching except to recall its drift. During these years there had been no great events for public direction. He had tried to be a preacher, not a writer of essays. The preacher has to make truth personal, and the office will last as long as man is constituted as he is. He recalled the first sermon of his pastorate, which was from the text "That ye might have life." Both this and the sermon of to-day, are the key note of his preaching. It had been moral and spiritual, and not theological: what he believed would do them good; and all of his utterances came out of a personal experience. Of his pastoral work, Mr. Hudson said he had attended exactly 100 funerals during the ten years of his service here, thirteen of them during the past year. He had solemnized twenty-one marriages, seven during the past year. The pastor spoke of the friendly relations which had always existed; and of the many expressions of good will towards him and his; that no one needs so many friends as the preacher. If the pastor loses his power to interest, if the congregation becomes tired of his voice, and declines in power and numbers, it is better that a fresher mind should take his place. If he should see marks of such decline he should accept it as the working of a natural and not unkind law of change. The pastor closed with exhortation to his people to strengthen the church, to be hospitable, and make all heartily welcome. God will not permit a church to be carried on indefinitely if we sit at ease. We should make the truth known to all the world by example and life, not satisfied with what we have already attained, but "press forward towards the mark of the high calling of life."

It is said that Mr. Nathaniel Snow intends to bring a suit against the city of Malden for injuries received a month ago by the falling of a railroad sign.

It is found that horses when clipped are more easily taken care of, and are not so liable to catch cold as when they have a heavy coat of hair.

That little fly which has lingered along with the pleasant weather, is probably sorry now that he did not go before.

Skating yet boys?

SPARKS.

A party of six of the Abel Proctor H. & L. company hired one of Hewitt's hacks last Wednesday and went over the road to Stoneham, to attend the ball of the fire department in that place. They were the guests of Resolute H. & L., of Stoneham, who extended all the courtesies usual to firemen. The boys arrived home the next morning about eight o'clock. While in Stoneham the boys saw the big fire at the Saxonville mills.

A number of other firemen from this department, attended the ball of the Salem Firemen's Relief Association, Wednesday evening in Mechanics Hall. Previous to the opening of the ball, the full Salem Brass Band gave a promenade concert from eight o'clock to nine, when the grand march began, led off by Mayor Hill of Salem, and Mrs. Wheelock of Keene, N. H., wife of Engineer Wheelock of that place. There were 105 couples in the march, and the red uniforms of the firemen rather livened up the scene. The hall was tastefully decorated by Lamprell & Marble of Boston. At the rear of stage was a full length picture of a fireman on a ladder, bearing the form of a child in his arms; this picture was flanked on either side with poetry, describing the picture. At about 12 o'clock supper was served in Howard Hall by Caterer Van Vranken of Salem. Dancing was kept up until between three and four o'clock. Everybody that attended was well pleased with the sixth annual ball of the Salem "boys."

At the regular meeting of the Selectmen Saturday afternoon, two ex-firemen were appointed as the regular fire men for the Town Hall, and as the Selectmen say, without pay. Wm. H. Hildreth and John H. Tibbets were appointed.

Just before the entertainment last Thursday evening, Firemen Sumner and Childs were sworn in by the Town Clerk, as special police for duty in the hall, and now the question asked is, are they still special policemen, or does the appointing of new men discharge them.

Meetings were held Monday evening by all the companies in the department, except hose 4, who held theirs on Tuesday evening. All the companies in the brick house chose committees to make arrangements for the annual Union Ball, and Abel Proctor H. & L. voted to hold an assembly in the new Town hall about the twentieth of the month.

Hose 3 will hold one of their popular assemblies at their house on Endicott street, Friday evening of this week. Music will be furnished by the Danvers Quadrille band. They intend to run a number of these parties this winter.

That legacy of Engineer Pierce can be seen by any of his numerous friends by just asking him for a view of it, as he is very much pleased with it.

A party of boys were trying to raise an alarm of fire Sunday evening in front of the engine house by crying fire; if they had made any more noise there would have been an alarm as the firemen were making a rush for the bell rope, when it was found out what it was. It is bad enough to get routed out for a fire without having to turn out to amuse a lot of boys.

The insurance on the Shea house fire has been adjusted for $135.

The insurance on the Potter fire has been adjusted by paying of $1083 to Geo. Holman on building and $25 on stock. John A. Lord $30, on stock and Chas. Potter $100, on stock.

The department nearly got turned out Thansgiving day by the furnace at C. D. Howard's house filling the house with smoke. Mr. Howard had just had his furnace reset and oil was used in the cement that was packed around it, and when a fire was lighted it caused a dense smoke, which filled the house, and gave the impression that the place was on fire. Mr. Howard at first thought of telephoning for the department, but a second thought showed him what it was and he turned down his fire. The smoke caused considerable damage to the house and household linen.

A committee consisting of Chief Littlefield, Supt. Besse and Selectman Herrick went to Boston Monday and looked over a lot of horses for the use of the fire department. Two pair of gray horses were brought down Tuesday afternoon from the sale stable of E. Ham & Co., and were tried on the big steamer, resulting in the sale of one horse from each pair. The two horses were hitched up together for the first time, and worked so well that the committee selected them. The price paid was $500 and the old black horses, for which $200 was allowed, making the cost of the pair $700. Now there are five good horses in the stable, and we only wish that the other pair of grays could have been kept also. The new pair weigh a little over 2600 pounds.

The Board of Engineers hold their regular monthly meeting this evening in their new quarters. Z.

We have always possessed the idea that the poor man's hard earned dollar should purchase just as much as a like amount of his wealthy neighbor.—WE BELIEVE IT. WE ACT UPON IT. WE DID, and our business to-day is a pleasing monument of its kindly reception by the people of Lynn, Swampscott, Saugus, Nahant, Marblehead, Peabody, Danvers, Lynnfield, Salem, &c., to whom we are more than thankful.

JOHN P FERNALD, ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers.

THE DECEASE of Rev. Warren H. Cudworth is a loss beyond measure to the Unitarian body of worshipers, and especially to the church in East Boston, over which he was pastor. He was a man of no national reputation; known little outside of this state. He was not a great preacher or author; he has been heard on the lecture platform several times within the remembrance of our people, to their instruction and profit. But as a pastor, in his devotion to his church and people, as a representative of the old Channing type of Unitarians, he has left a memory and reputation which few pastors of any church can hope to attain.

Mr. Cudworth was best known in the vicinity of Boston by the continuity of service to the church over which he was settled. He was pastor of no other church. It was his first and only love. He was ordained pastor over the only Unitarian church in East Boston Mar. 17, 1852, and with the exception of his service in the Army, as chaplain of the First Massachusetts regiment, the first of three years' regiments, and an absence of a year in Europe, he has always been at his post. And by that we do not mean with the customary summer vacation. Mr. Cudworth did not believe in these vacations. He conducted a service in his own church in the warm days of July and August, often preaching in the hall of the Young Men's Christian Union besides, and as often preaching for some brother who was less fortunate than himself, or who was called suddenly elsewhere.

Rev. Mr. Cudworth belonged, as we have said, to the Orthodox wing of Unitarians. His early training was in the Orthodox Congregational faith, which was that of his parents. He graduated from Harvard College, and Harvard divinity school. The church over which he was called was small at first, but has steadily grown. Parish work, pastoral work, and Sabbath school work was a devotion with him. He was never married, but was accustomed to say that the church was his bride. He thought the care and attention which he would naturally give to a family, if he had one, would detract from his service to the church. He was a passionate lover of music—inheriting it from his parents. He was a good organist, a fine singer, and a superior conductor. Oratorios and other musical productions were often brought out by the members of his Sabbath School, he himself assuming the baton and conducting the entire rehearsals.

It is not to be wondered at that his church should have grown, both numerically and spiritually. His Sabbath School numbered at his death 700 pupils, independent of the teachers, and is the largest Unitarian Sabbath School in this country. A church organization was regularly maintained, at which the sacraments, also, were administered.—Not only among those of his own denomination, but among all bodies of Christian worshipers was he respected, and even scoffers at the Christian religion assented to the claims of such a type of Christianity as was represented in him. The Roman Catholic priest in a neighboring parish was one of his firmest friends.

His popularity was such that when he took a trip to Europe the people of East Boston, without reference to church ties, crowded the great Cunard wharf, the adjoining wharf, and the roofs thereof, to "see him off." Whenever and wherever the reunions of the First Massachusetts regiment were held, the presence of Chaplain Cudworth was indispensable to their happiness, and his entrance always the signal for prolonged cheering. In the army the same devotion which had characterized him towards his church was manifested. Many a dollar which would have been spent in drink or in gambling by the boys while off duty, was coaxed into his hands to be sent home to the wife or mother.

Mr. Cudworth was a member of the Joseph Hooker Post 23, G. A. R., and of the Mount Tabor lodge of Free Masons, both of which were present at the funeral, which took place at his church last Sabbath. The services were under the charge of Rev. S. H. Winkley, pastor of the Bulfinch Place Chapel, in Boston, an intimate friend of the deceased, like him enthusiastically devoted to church and Sabbath School work, and between whom and the late Mr. Cudworth existed an agreement of many years standing, that whichever one should die first, the other should officiate at the funeral services.

PETITIONS are in circulation, asking the trustees of the Peabody Institute to consider the expediency of transferring the free lectures to the new Town Hall. The first question natural in considering the matter is whether such a course would conflict with the original plan for a course of lectures, for which a specified amount was left. There is no doubt that the fund created by Mr. Peabody for the purposes of lectures as well as the library was given to the town together with the Institute, and that the original intention of the donor was that this building should be devoted, principally, to the objects specified in the trust. It is also true that by the growth of the town, since Mr. Peabody's death, the Institute accommodations have become limited, that the lectures do not instruct as many people as they would by a removal to the Town Hall, and inasmuch as the change contemplated would better further the object for which the fund was created, there is much to be said in its favor.

We think, however, that if the new Town Hall was to be used there would be room enough for all. There would be no larger audience, in any event, than was present at the dedication concert, and at most times there would be, we are confident, seats to spare. Any attempt to make them other than free lectures, or to reserve any portion of the house either by favor or by price, would not be countenanced by our citizens and ought not to be. If there is any additional expense attendant upon the proposed change, either it ought not to be made, or it should be borne by the town, for whose benefit the whole Institute fund was given.

There is scarcely one of our readers passing the elegant shop windows of David Low, under the First Church, on Essex street, that does not seem to be irrisistibly drawn to a stand still. There are always so many rich goods—so many sparkling jewels, that the eye must look at them. Just at this time they are unusually brilliant, and inside the spacious show cases fairly glisten. All our readers know that they must look at Low's stock. If they don't want anything when they go in, they do before they come out. And this leads us to say what we started in the beginning to say, read his new advertisement in to-day's PRESS.

Little Corinne will appear at the new Town Hall Monday evening, under Palmer's management. A larger company than last year—new business—Salem Cadet Orchestra—and popular prices.

The decease of Benjamin Huntington at the advanced age of 84 years, removes another of our respected citizens. Mr. Huntington was born in Derring N. H. and has been an honest and prudent farmer and gardner all his life among us. In his early life, he was prominently identified with the fire department, being connected with the old Torrent until he was made a Fire Engineer by the town. He was a devoted and consistent member of the South Church, having joined shortly after the Knapp revival. He had a fall a few years ago and broke his hip, from the effects of which he never recovered. He was able to vote at the last election, casting his vote for Geo. D. Robinson. He leaves a widow.

A correspondent writing from Helena, Montana, to the Chicago Standard, has the following notice of a former pastor here:—The Baptist church is the youngest, but has already many elements of strength. They have been exceedingly fortunate in their pastors. Bro. Mason, as you well know, is an ideal pastor, and a man very hard to follow. But fortunately for the church and for the Baptist interests in the territory, he found a most worthy successor in Rev. L. L. Wood, who has proved his metal as well as his mental capacity by a successful pastorate of ten years in the city of Boston, and his selection to the post of state lecturer on temperance by the Massachusetts Temperance Society. A most genial, companionable man, who knows how to say the right thing in the most agreeable way. He stands easily at the head of the profession in Helena, and of his own brethren in the territory.

Mrs. Stephen Fernald met with a severe accident this morning, by falling on the slippery ground. No bones were broken.

Mr. Geo. H. Little has put in some mammoth injectors at the Naumkeag Cotton Mills at Salem. They will feed 400 horse power boilers.

Miss Kate Richardson, first assistant in the High School, has received a call to Bradford Academy. Queer the committee can't hire a teacher who will remain six months.

Mrs. Thomas Goodwin, living on Washington place, died yesterday. She was a lady devoted to her family cares, and did not mingle in society a great deal. Previous to her death she was quite a sufferer.

We understand a series of entertainments is contemplated by the members of the Unity Club, for the purpose of making a substantial addition to the Organ Fund. G. Fred Osgood is chairman of the Committee.

The ladies of the Universalist Society will hold a Fair in the vestry of their church, Thursday and Friday evenings, Dec. 13 and 14. This society never do anything half way, and we anticipate for them a grand success.

Passengers along the Eastern railroad will be glad to know that the Globe Company's Works on the road to Boston are to be occupied at last. The Forbes Lithograph Company, of Boston, will occupy the building.

The Eastern railroad company is having two new passenger cars made of California Redwood, which will be highly polished on the interior. These cars it is expected will be the handsomest yet turned out by the road.

An alarm of fire on Monday forenoon brought out the larger part of the Fire Department, when the cause of alarm was found to be a slight blaze in the chimney of Mr. Linskey's house on the corner of Nichols and Varney Sts.

Mr. Charles Perkins, formerly of this town, and son of Mr. Newman Perkins, on Mt. Vernon street, has in company with a party from Brighton, bought out a first-class hotel at Chicago, Ill., and removed his family there.

The subscribers who take the PRESS and mail it to their friends, are reminded that the cost is only $2.00 in advance to have it sent from the office direct. The postage alone costs them $1.00 besides the trouble of hunting it up, etc.

Mr. Master calls attention in another column to a fine line of Watches, Jewelry and silver plated ware. His prices are very low and he makes it a point to satisfy all with whom he deals. He will also repair your watches in first class manner.

We would advise our friends while shopping in Lynn, to get their refreshments at Sleeper's Oyster and Dining Rooms. The best stew in the city can be obtained there. You will find also that his fried lobster and Revere Beach chips are quite delicious.

A great deal of dissatisfaction is existing among the members of the Knights of Honor, in consequence of the Supreme Lodge at its last session enacting a law debarring widows and orphans of suicide members from receiving the $2000 benefit.

Store away a few bushels of dry road dust for the hens to dust in this next winter. Give them enough of it and have it entirely dry, so they can "make the dust fly" all through the hen-house and cover the roosts and fill the cracks, and the lice must move out.

Rumors have reached our ears of parties of men who meet nightly in an isolated place and gamble long into the night. These men have families dependent upon them, and their week's wages often goes in this way, and the family is neglected. The police can look the matter up.

An exchange prints a long receipt explaining "how to perfume a dwelling." It's too expensive. The cheapest and quickest way to perfume a dwelling is to fry a piece of codfish or roast a few onions. They go right to the spot—and linger round the spot for a considerable length of period.

Many poor families were provided the wherewithal to be happy on Thanksgiving day by the kindness of those who had the means and the generosity to furnish the same. No doubt many a prayer of thankfulness went forth on that day of which the donors or the world will never know.

Last Monday evening a pair of horses belonging to George H. Clerk, attached to a wagon, became frightened at the owners' shop on Foster street. They proceeded across the square up Central street to Elm, down Wallis to Upton street, where they were caught. One of the horses was severely injured. A small dog remained in the wagon until they were caught.

Last Friday night the store of W. O. Batchelder on Main street was entered by burglars and a small quantity of cigars and tobacco stolen. Entrance was gained by forcing a back window. The same evening an attempt was made to enter Lee's drug store, but were foiled by an inside shutter. Since the burglary some of the goods stolen from Batchelder were found hidden in a morocco shop near by.

It is stated that it has been discovered that in a number of instances the postal notes have been counterfeited, or altered in such a manner as to defy detection. The post office authorities will shortly send out a new issue of a different design and color, which it is hoped will prevent such fraudulent practices.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse H. Smith have the sympathy of their many friends in this hour of their affliction. Their little daughter Annie was taken with convulsions Monday night, from which she died. She was their only child, and the loss is a sad blow to them. Her age was one year, eight months and three days. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2.30.

A patent steam heating apparatus is being built for the party who took part of Plummer and Kearns' shop at Danversport, by Geo. H. Little.

FAINE is continually adding New Styles to his immense stock of fine furniture. Dining Room Tables and Chairs, New Styles in Chamber and Parlor Suites have just been added, also a number of New Styles in Book Cases are now being finished. Everything made and finished by him is warranted to be as represented and to give perfect satisfaction or money returned. One entrance is on Canal Street, No 48, opposite Maine Depot.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

At the last meeting of the Band of Hope, Master Daniel E. Quint was elected Secretary. The temperance committee of the South Church have engaged Gen. John L. Swift, of Boston, to give a temperance lecture Sunday evening, Dec. 16. It will be given in the new town hall. The singing will be by the Peabody Band of Hope —a chorus of fifty children's voices, under the direction of Prof. Bill, of Salem. The members are requested to meet for practice, Saturday, p. m., Dec. 8, at 2 o'clock, in the vestry of the South Church.

At the annual meeting of Union Post 50, G. A. R., at their hall Monday evening, the following officers were elected:—Commander, William H. Hildreth; Senior Vice Commander, William R. Armstrong; Junior Vice Commander, William W. Reed; Quartermaster, William F. Sumner; Surgeon, Dr. C. C. Pike; Chaplain, Isaiah Chute; Officer of the day, C. J. Linehan; Officer of the Guard, E. D. Morton; Delegates to Department Convention, J. H. Tibbetts, C. T. Batchelder, T. H. Lord; alternates, S. P. Hart, William W. Reed. About 60 were present.

Roll of Honor at the Wallis School for November.—1st class: Katie Forness, Sadie Peirce, Mabel Rowell, Nellie Warner; 2nd class: Freddie Bushby, George Rowell, Charles Hodgkins, Allie Humphrey, Lillie Bailey, Grace Torr; 3d class: Fannie Carr, Katie Carroll, Lucy Batchelder, Jerry Crean, John A. Teague; 5th class: Carrie Wilson, Eliza Osborn; 6th class: Geo. Holman; 7th class: Fred. H. Rowell.

The Old Folks Concert, for which the Baptists have made such preparation, will take place to-morrow evening at the Peabody Institute. The "worldlie" songs will be by Misses Liebsch and Hunt of Salem; Messrs. Morrill and Hutchings will appear in a musical sketch; there will be a violin solo by Miss Campbell, besides other attractions. Seats are for sale by Hazen A. Spaulding, and the house should be filled.

Our readers will observe the advertisement of L. Buck in this issue. Mr. Buck has bought the stock of L. R. Power, corner of Main and Caller streets, and is prepared to show some big bargains in boots and shoes. He has had a long experience in the trade, knows the wants of the people, and we advise our readers to call and see him.

A shocking accident occurred at the Salem Laundry on Bridge street last Wednesday afternoon. As Mrs. Ellen Brooks, residing on Washington street, in this town, was endeavoring to slip a belt upon a rapidly revolving pulley her hair was wound round the shafting tearing off the scalp before the machinery could be stopped. Mrs. Brooks was taken to the Salem hospital.

Thanksgiving day was clear, cold, windy and disagreeable. The day was spent in much the usual manner. Services were held at several churches, and appropriate sermons preached. There were many happy family reunions, and many went from town to join similar reunions out of town. Some kept up the merry-making in the evening, while others attended the entertainment in the town hall.

C. H. Goulding, whose name is the synonym of all that is wide awake and progressive in business, is having a rushing trade. More than one half of the large building where he is located is literally packed with every conceivable article in the furniture line. Visit his store and you will see a stock to suit any taste.

All the children and many older ones will not forget Little Corinne at the new Town Hall, Monday night. She will play "Bijou,"— and her merrie makers will be sure to please. Seats only 50 and 35 cts. For sale by Hazen A. Spaulding, Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

By the report of the engineer of the pumping station, it appears that for the month of November, there were pumped 16,648,600 gallons; making an average of 254,953 gallons per day. The average number of gallons to a pound of coal was 375 1-2; the average hours of pumping 7 2-3.

Quite a number of familiar faces were noticed "at home" spending Thanksgiving. Among them Arthur Pinder and wife, Herbert Gardner of Lemister, Frank I. Baker, of N. Y. city, and Albert Moulton and family of Stoneham.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Eastern railroad and the holders of certificates of indebtedness will be held at the Meionian Hall on December 12, at 11 o'clock a. m. The transfer books close on Dec. 5.

There was quite a lively scene a short distance from the railroad station last Thursday morning, and witnessed by several. The story is that a certain gentleman was badly abusing a certain political party, and all that voted with them. One word led to another until the man who was going to annihilate a whole party told his opponent that he didn't know as much as a brass monkey. This the other man resented and started in for a good fight, but after backing his opponent over two or three side tracks, the men were quieted down without coming to blows. Both wore silk hats which added dignity to the scene.

The railroad crossing at the foot of Warren street is very dangerous, and should be flagged. A driver cannot see the track until he is almost upon it, and it is so unimportant a thoroughfare that no warning is given by approaching trains, except to occasionally ring the bell. One of our provision dealers had a narrow escape a few days since, and many foot passengers have had escapes since the engineers have left off whistling at every crossing.

P. F. Field, M. D., a graduate of the Munroe Conservatory of Elocution, was in town recently, and perfected arrangements with the school committee whereby he could give his lecture on Elocution, Oratory and Dramatic Art. The lecture will take place at the Hall of the Wallis school at 2 o'clock next Saturday afternoon. Dr. Field desires to introduce his teachings in our public schools.

This section of the universe was visited last Saturday by a slight sprinkling of the "beautiful snow." Since that time our devil has been busily engaged in taking from a huge bag in one corner of the office the dry bones of last season's composers on this subject who fell victims at our hands, to make room for this season's harvest, which is expected to be a bountiful one.

We often find among the tramps at the police station, such names as Geo. Washington and Thomas Jefferson, but Monday we were called upon by one who bears the name of one whom all Europe fear. He said his name was Otto Bismarck. He was a tramp printer and wanted ten cents to get a drink. We hadn't the heart to refuse so distinguished a visitor.

Mr. F. Solon Richardson, of West Peabody, died quite suddenly last Sunday of apoplexy. The deceased was well known throughout the town and was a highly respected citizen. He was about his work the day before he died. He served in the army during the war.

For two Sundays past hoodlums have been loafing about the bark cars on the South Reading track, and have insulted passers. And they have also set a target against the side of a car and by throwing rocks at it, have broke in the sides of several cars. It should be stopped.

The boys have got a new plaything that makes a noise, and resembles the "devil's fiddles" that were in use some five or six years ago. They are about as dangerous too. One of them frightened a horse on Lowell street, last Saturday, but the driver prevented his running away.

A new debating club has been organized, with the following officers: President, A. B. Tasker; Vice President, Geo. M. Foster; Secretary, James H. Thomas; Treasurer, A. W. Littlefield; Censor, H. A. Harrington. They will meet Thursday evenings.

The Danvers Mirror says of the partner of C. T. Batchelder, of this town: —"We are happy to learn that Chauncey S. Richards is improving in health, and his many friends will be glad to see him about the streets as soon as he has fully recovered."

An ingenious, amusing and instructive mechanical novelty called the "Emca Puzzle," is agitating Salem and meeting with ready sale. It is substantial and fascinating. We understand it is to be introduced in Peabody.

A boy named McCarthy fell from Martin Brophy's new house to the ground, last Friday, a distance of eight feet or more. He was considerably bruised about the breast and arms, and although not seriously injured, was considerably frightened.

The chief police set a tramp to cleaning up around the station one morning last week in return for his lodgings.—Since then no tramps have put in an appearance. Their health is too delicate to do any work.

The Sunlight party Thanksgiving afternoon by the Emerald Court of Foresters, was a grand success. The small town hall was used for the first time, and pronounced the "boss" place for a dance.

J. F. Ingraham is building an addition to his West Peabody factory 60x30 feet and three stories high. It will give him facilities for increasing his business.

Gravel taken from the Lynnfield pit is being hauled to Danvers.

Salem, Dec 1,—3t Mortgagee

Merrill & Mackintire had an opening of Christmas goods last Monday, and their display was the best they have ever made. One window was entirely filled with choice Christmas Cards, making a gorgeous appearance from the outside, the other contained albums and all sorts of novelties. This enterprising firm seem to have everything the heart could wish. To enumerate the array of things deftly arranged to suit the taste of their customers, would fill halt of our sheet. We will be content with a brief mention of a few of the articles which most attracted our attention. There are ink wells in brass and oxydized ware, in Olive wood in novel designs of the bicycle and tricycle, and with a dainty calendar surmounting the base. There are travelling cases for gents and ladies, in leather and plush, collar and cuff boxes, and dressing mirrors of the finest French plate glass. There are elegant albums, covered with plush, and on easels, and we might mention that the firm have over 200 different styles of photograph albums. In fancy papeteries of course they have a large assortment—and the arrangement of many of them in cases is very unique. They have taken the room paper department in the rear, and utilized it for Christmas Cards on one side and books on the other. They have a full line of the Golden Floral series, some novelties of Lee & Shepard, and Mr. S. E. Casino of this town. In children's books they have a large variety at bargains. They have bought early in large lots and are offering some books that usually retail for 75 cents at 35 and 25 cents. Peter Parley, a book finely illustrated, with colored cover, advertised in Boston as a great bargain at 95 cents, they sell for 74 cts. Their stock of cards seems almost perfect—some mounted on easels, fringed, painted on satin—the most elaborate and costly designs. Puzzles and games for the children find an appropriate place. This year is one of the years when there is an abundance of new games. There are opera glasses, pocket-books, ladies' companions, scissors in cases, diaries,—well we must stop somewhere, and we advise our readers who would know what else they can find at Merrill & Mackintire's to drop in upon them some day, when a surprise will surely await them.

W. C. Packard & Co., the furniture dealers of Salem, are getting their large stock ready for holiday purchasers, and no more useful gift can be selected than one of the fine easy chairs of which they make a specialty. They have over one hundred different styles—as good an assortment as can be found in the large stores of Boston. The prices run from $3.50 upwards. They are showing also fancy easels, gents' smoking sets on elegant tables, pedestals, etc. They will open in a few days some children's imported toys—horses and teams—and will have in this line an assortment such as was never before seen in Salem. The e are also wall cabinets and ladies' work stands in great variety, besides screens, desks and book cases, all of which are a useful as well as ornamental gift for the holidays. In rattan goods a novelty is seen in easy chairs upholstered in plush or any material the customer may desire. Taken altogether we doubt if there is a store in Essex County with a larger variety and finer stock, and we know our readers will feel amply repaid by giving this establishment a trial on their shopping tours.

The official count of votes for the several state offices has been completed and the result as far as Essex County is concerned, is as follows:

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL.

Last Saturday was the 75th anniversary of the representation of Jalma, and souvenirs, with colored covers, were presented to the ladies and children. This is the closing week of the spectacle, and excursions are to be run by many roads, to allow their patrons to visit the play and return to their homes. We warn our readers that it is not safe to attempt seeing Jalma unless they have procured their seats in advance. Jalma will be presented after this week in several of the large cities prior to opening Christmas in Philadelphia.

Georgie Cayvan, who made a decided success as Hazel Kirke in New York, and Mr. J. G. Grahame, the leading man whom the Langtry thought too good an actor to play with her, are new comers to Boston in the "Hazel Kirke" production at the Park by the Madison Square Theatre Co. this week. Couldock, Ada Gilman and other established favorites are always welcomed in the ever fresh and charming drama, which has won such unprecedented success.

Robson and Crane come at the Park next week. Our Boarding House is to be the attraction during their engagement. As Professor Gillypod and Colonel M. T. Elevator, of immortal memory, the comedians are sure to please immensely.

The closing representations of "Iolanthe" at the Bijou occur this week. Miss Janet Edmondson took her farewell as Phyllis last Saturday evening, and Monday night the role was assumed for the first time on any stage, by Fraulein von Januschowsky. The general performance of "Iolanthe" is excellent. Mr. Wilkinson's Chancellor is capital. Mr. Harry Allen is much liked as Lord Mount Ararat. With the performance of next Saturday evening the career of this charming opera closes.

The Bijou will give no public performance on Monday evening of next week, the 10th, the occasion being utilized for a grand dress rehearsal of "The Beggar Student." Milloecker's opera will be brought out the night following—being the anniversary of the theatre's opening—in superb style, rivalling any American presentation of the work. Already there has been a great demand for seats, and the career of "The Beggar Student," with its seventy-five people in the cast, its charming melody, elegant costumes and effects, will assuredly open under the pleasantest of omens.

Chinaman Parsloe forsakes his partner, Louis Aldrich, at the close of this season.

"The White Slave," with the Boston Theatre company, begins its tour on Christmas at Lynn. There will appear in the drama, among others, Messrs. Hamilton, Harris, Eberle, Kent, Craven and Leach, Misses May Newman, Rachel Noah, Elena Cartland and Lillian Calef.

The performance at the new town hall, Peabody, Thanksgiving night, under the auspices of the Grand Army Post, was a decided success. Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Dixey appeared in their charming representations, and a good audience was in attendance. They are good entertainers, capital singers and actors, and the performance throughout was clean, bright and sparkling. The Post have the hall engaged for Christmas.

This evening Annie Pixley repeats her personation of 'Mliss at Mechanic Hall, in Salem. Miss Pixley never plays to slim houses; she is the finest actress in her line in the country, and that Peabody will be well represented there is not a doubt.

The ballot was first adopted in the election of assistants to the General Court of Massachusetts in 1643, the freemen using beans and Indian corn on the occasion, the former to elect and the latter to reject the candidate.

The late election shows that the people are cutting loose from the old party lines very fast.

If some of our Massachusetts lawyers don't "beat the world," they try mighty hard to beat Massachusetts merchants.

Some one having asked a Spartan king how he could acquire a reputation, he replied, "By speaking well and acting well."

A youthful school-girl, not an adep in politics, inquired on Tuesday as to who would probably be elected, Robinson or Ames? but she was quite as well informed as the voter who asked on Monday, which of the two names on the flag were republican, and which democratic?

THE SUN.

NEW YORK, 1884.

About sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the last twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year, you would get a continuous strip of interesting information common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of this earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the earth twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear or consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

The several editions of THE SUN are sent by mail, postpaid as follows:

DAILY—50 cents a month, $6 a year; with Sunday edition, $7.

SUNDAY—Eight pages. This edition furnishes the current news of the world, special articles of exceptional interest to everybody, and literary reviews of new books of the highest merit. $1 a year.

WEEKLY—$1 a year. Eight pages of the best matter of the daily issues; an Agricultural Department of unequalled value, special market reports, and literary, scientific, and domestic intelligence make THE WEEKLY SUN the newspaper for the farmer's household. To clubs of ten with $10, an extra copy free.

THE LEADING MAGAZINE FOR THE BOYS & GIRLS

ST. NICHOLAS,

EDITED BY MRS. MARY MAPES DODGE.

The New York Tribune once said: "In the avalanche of immoral literature that threatens the children, some strong, virtuous, wholesome, and really attractive magazine is required for them, and St. Nicholas has reached a higher platform and commands for this service wider resources in art and letters, than any of its predecessors or contemporaries." The reference to the wide resources in art and letters commanded by St. Nicholas was never more fully illustrated than by the extraordinary list of attractions which that magazine announces for 1884. The following will be some of the leading contributors:

Louisa M. Alcott, J. T. Trowbridge, Captain Mayne Reid, Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen, Maurice Thompson, Frank R. Stockton, Charles Dudley Warner, Joaquin Miller, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, Julian Hawthorne, Celia Thaxter, Mary Mapes Dodge, Lieut. Frederick Schwatka, Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, E. S. Brooks, George W. Cable, Chas. G. Leland, Susan Fenimore Cooper, John G. Whittier, "H. H.," W. O. Stoddard, C. P. Cranch.

and scores of other distinguished writers. The best artists and engravers illustrate the magazine. It has been truly said that the reading of St. Nicholas is for the boys and girls who are fortunate enough to have it. In no other book or periodical is instruction so happily blended with recreation and amusement.

"A LIBERAL EDUCATION"

The price is $3.00 a year, or 25 cents a number. Book-sellers, news-dealers, and postmasters receive subscriptions, or remittance may be made direct to the publishers, by money or express order, bank check, draft, or in registered letter.

ABOUT TEN FEET HIGH.

YARDSTICK AND THE OTHER BOARDERS TRUST NOT THE TALE—CERTAIN DEDUCTIONS.

"How high was that? Just read that again," sang out young Yardstick, one of our boarders, who is in the dry goods line, to Professor Seedling, who sometimes reads aloud a paragraph, after supper. The Professor complied, lending the beauty of his voice to the following statement:

"In the year 1772 a Dutchman named Roggewein discovered Easter island, and reported that the men on that island measured twelve feet in height, although the women were commonly not above ten or eleven feet high."

"Well," said young Yardstick, "in my opinion he was a Flying Dutchman and a lying Dutchman," and the other boarders agreed with him.

While nobody desires American ladies to be giants, all would be delighted to see them well and strong. Yet a thousand causes combine to keep a large proportion miserable. Too much confinement in heated rooms, or in the same house, multiplied domestic and family worries, want of sleep, little illnesses hard to describe, but peculiar to their sex—are the wolfish pack that drive the women "half out of their heads."

Miss M. A. Packard, of No. 323 Ewen street, Brooklyn, N. Y., confesses to having suffered from nameless physical disarrangements so induced, and says: PARKER'S GINGER TONIC is my strength and shield. It cured my dyspepsia, and for those general ills of which women complain so much, the Tonic is better than all things else. I have suffered for years in this way and speak from experience. A valuable feature to women is its delicious taste."

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC is not an essence of ginger, but a highly scientific combination of the best vegetable curative agents known to the medical profession. Physicians endorse it, and no wife or mother should be without it. Prices, 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Your druggist keeps it. Hiscox & Co., Chemists, New York.

HOW JAPANESE ARTISTS WORK.

The Japanese (says the Saturday Review) have a great advantage over European nations in being obliged from infancy to learn the use of a brush. Their alphabet is, in fact, a series of exercises in free-hand drawing. Not only is it composed of an immense number of complicated devices, but thousands of characters borrowed from the Chinese are in daily use. A boy who can write a letter has already unconsciously acquired the precision of touch of a trained European artist. In writing the paper is laid on the left hand instead of a desk, as is the custom also with the Arabs. Facilities of motion is thus acquired alike for shoulder, elbow and wrist. Then, too, the paper is of a peculiar quality, which at once absorbs the ink, and it requires great precision of touch to produce an even outline. The early training and practice account for the marvelous dexterity which shows itself in the commonest and roughest piece of decoration. There is always a certain freedom of touch rarely acquired by our best artists. Dr. Dresser gives an interesting account of a treat prepared for him by Sir Henry Parkes. Five of the most celebrated native draughtsmen were invited to the embassy for the purpose of practically exhibiting their method of working. In the middle of the room was spread a breadth of felt, on which was placed a piece of paper held down by weights. Each competitor had a long, slender piece of charcoal in a bamboo holder; some broad, flat brushes, made of deer's hair, and round ones made of vegetable fibre. On a slab was a quantity of Indian ink. The first artist came forward, bowed and knelt down before his paper, considering it attentively for a minute or two. He then made a few almost imperceptible dots with the charcoal point and with a flat brush full of Indian ink formed a large irregular mass in the centre, and with a smaller brush a few feathers and the end of the pendent branch. Then, beginning at the top of the paper, he worked downward, and in a quarter of an hour produced an admirable representation of a cock and hens and the branch of a tree. The body of the hen was skilfully left out in the painting, so that it was formed merely of the uncolored paper, but against the dark background; and with a few touches to indicate feathers it was entirely satisfactory and thoroughly decorative.

A flower painter next made his bow and knelt down. He too began with a few dots to guide him in the disposal of his masses. Taking a large brush full of green pigment, he made one leaf with each sweep, varying the shades in the different leaves, but each leaf being of an even color. With another brush he formed a peony flower, shading it by merely putting a little water on quickly before the red was absorbed. The colors of his palette were indigo, gamboge, crimson, lake and red earth. The Japanese attach much importance to the art of composition, and always carefully arrange in their mind's eye before beginning any design exactly how they will produce balance without uniformity. One of the fair sex next tried her skill. She was flower-painter to the Empress, and chose as her subject a simple little plant resembling our winter aconite. It was represented as done up for sale with the root and a piece of paper round it. The fourth competitor took one of his broad, flat brushes, dipped it in water and squeezed it nearly dry. He then made it take the form of a crescent and dipped the middle part in a dark solution of Indian ink, leaving the outside of a lighter shade. A few hairs were separated at one side and dipped in the darkest shade. By a dexterous movement the artist produced at a stroke the shaded body of a duck and an outline. Afterward he added the neck, head, feet and tail-feathers, and a flying duck was the result. Another expert used his brush in a similar manner, producing a train of rats and a background. The bodies of the rats were left out as in the case of the hen, but there was no doubt what animals they were intended for, though the delineation was done in this apparently haphazard manner. It is wonderful how the Japanese can make their animals live and move. Their birds really peck or fly or strike their prey. The fishes swim and wag their tails. The insects creep or eat or sun themselves. There is no mistaking what they are intended to be doing.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME OF DEADWOOD.

The origin of the name of Deadwood is not generally known, yet it none the less illustrates the waggery of undertakers, as that is the most considerate name for the trick. A certain man lost his wife and ordered a first class funeral. Everything went on in the best of style until the coffin was lowered into the grave, when, owing to the smallness of the hole or awkardness of the attendants, a piece of the coffin was chipped off. A friend picked it up and handed it to the afflicted husband as a relic of his wife. Months elapsed before the bill was presented; it was a first class one if the funeral was not. Not paid, the undertaker sued. The defendant produced the piece of the coffin, exclaiming: "I've got the dead wood on you. It's not rosewood, as you have charged, but pine." Hence the word from which the celebrated city in the Black Hills is named.

Numerous citizens of Laurence County, S. C., have been duped by roving swindlers by a novel and most barefaced scheme. The swindlers proposed to their victims to take their old feather beds, use the feathers and replace them with new feathers, and, as a guarantee of good faith, the strangers would leave twenty-five cents a pound for the feathers, promising to return in the course of a few weeks. As feathers in that locality sell for seventy-five cents a pound, the men cleared fifty cents a pound on their feathery transaction.

Every man has three characters—that which he exhibits, that which he has and that which he thinks he has.

The paradox of paradoxes is that in the marriage ceremony the woman doesn't get in any more talk than the man.

An exchange has an elaborate article for amateur vocalists. "How to begin to sing." How to get them to quit is still an unsolved problem.

Mistress.—"Bridget, how is it you have not dusted the what-not?" Bridget.—"Ah, thin, ma'am, I can't for ducincy's sake face that naked figger."

A lady's boudoir is a powder magazine; preparatory to an expedition into the very heart of the enemy, she has a little brush and then raises her colors.

A Vermont editor, in publishing one of Byron's poems, changed the words "Oh gods!" to "Oh gosh!" because the former was too profane for his readers.

"Nerve!" said the young man of his friend, "why, Jack's got a heap of nerve. He wasn't embarrassed a bit the first time he went to a barber's to get shaved."

"Why, Smith, what a dreadful state of intoxication you are in." "This a dreadful State of 'toxication? Just oughter see me th' other night. This 'sonly a Territory to it."

The moral side of it—"And so, Miss Fuller, you think Miss Johnson did wrong to go on the stage in tights?" "Indeed I do. Why, her limbs are as thin as pipe-stems."

"What does 'lux' mean?" asked Brown. "'Lux' means light," replied Smith. "That's what I thought," said Brown, "but I wasn't certain. I know my luck's light, however."

"Oh," blushingly said the young lady who had just been offered congratulations by a friend. "I'm not engaged yet, but"—and she blushed more deeply—"I expect to be next week." The congratulations hold over.

"Gentlemen," said the Texas man in the restaurant when the waiter dumped a plate of hot soup down his back, "gentlemen, don't laugh." As he had risen to his feet and drawn two revolvers, his wishes were respected.

She was a sweetly inexperienced young housekeeper, as one may gather from her remark when some one suggested that she should purchase spring mattresses. "Yes," she said, "if they are in season we'd better have some."

Mrs. M. is a practical woman, with no nonsense about her. When Mr. M., in an affectionate way, the other day, exclaimed: "My dear, how can I ever leave you?" she coolly replied: "Leave me in as comfortable circumstances as you can."

A Stratford (Conn.) woman dreamed that she saw her husband kissing a neighbor's wife, and she awoke and struck him across his face and broke his nose. This bears out Dio Lewis's theory that husband and wife should not occupy the same sleeping-room.

"This isn't a menagerie," sharply observed an irascible woman to a man who was trying to force his way through the crowd at the door of a concert room. "No, I suppose not," returned the man, "or they wouldn't leave any of the animals to block up the entrance."

Fitzboodle, fresh from Boulogne, met Brown the other day, and told him of the illustrious persons he had fallen in with there. Among others he mentioned Freckles, the art critic. "And was he quite himself?" quoth Brown. "Quite," was the reply; "he borowed a sovereign."

Of the madstone, which, in the West, is popularly believed to insure its possessor against hydrophobia and death by snake bite, the Terre Haute Express says: "Madstones are very rare, and very few are known to exist. There is one in Des Moines, one in Keokuk, one in Louisville, and one in Taylorville, Ill. Many people doubt the stone's existence. Where the madstones come from no one seems to know. Their possessors are not able to tell. An old Indian chief said that the stones were found in the stomachs of extremely old buck deers. The stone is porous, and when it is applied to a wound the virus passes through it into the bandages."

Do not speak with contempt and ridicule of a locality where you may be visiting. Find something to truthfully praise and commend; thus make yourself agreeable.

A clergyman had a favorite and very intelligent dog who committed a grevious fault one Sunday morning. His master, on returning from church "did not beat him, but took hold of him and talked to him most bitterly, most severely. He talked on and on for a long time in the same serious and reproachful strain," and the dog was so deeply impressed with his own total depravity that he refused all food, pined away, and died in the course of a day or two. The story is told in the London Spectator by the reverend gentleman himself.

THE HARD-WORKING MAN.

He was a hard-working man, and for a good many years he had been working twice as hard as any man ought to work.

He said he had a splendid constitution, and that he could stand it.

He forgot that as years passes on the waste of the system is much greater than in youth, while the repair of it is less.

He became weak, debilitated, nervous, and despondent. He regarded the future with dread, and said he had worked himself into an untimely grave.

But he was not taken to the cemetery at all. Instead of that, a good friend brought him some Brown's Iron Bitters.

He began to pick up strength. That was what he wanted. Brown's Iron Bitters enriched his failing blood and put new life into him. It toned up his digestive organs so that his food began to nourish him and do him good. Most heartily does he recommend Brown's Iron Bitters. 12

RATHER TOO LONG.
AFTER TWENTY YEARS ON THE WRONG SIDE OF LIFE A VIRGINIAN TURNS THE TABLES.
"How long did you say?"
"Twenty years, I said. Up to the time I mentioned I had suffered from diseased liver for twenty years," said Mr. S. T. Hancock, of Richmond, Va., half sadly, as though thinking of that dilapidated section of his life. "At times I almost wished it had pleased providence to omit the liver from the human anatomy."
"Bad enough—twenty years of that sort of thing," responded a listener. "What was the upshot of it?"
"The upshot was that at some time ago I went down to Scott's drug store in this city, and bought one of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS, applied it and was relieved in a few hours, and am now as sound as though my liver were made of India-rubber."
Benson's—unliks the old-fashioned kind of plasters—act promptly. Look for the word CAPCINE which is cut in the genuine. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

Book Notices.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE for December has a great variety of articles, all of which are readable, while several of them are remarkable for the novelty of the subjects, the vividness of the treatment, and the information contained in them. The most amusing article in the number has for its subject "Doctor and Count Mattei," a renowned Italian charlatan, who numbers among the firm believers in his power of curing all diseases by a secret method of his own invention many English and American residents in Italy, as well as natives of every class. "The Funeral of a Greek Statesman", by Eunice W. Felton, gives a curious picture of Athenian manners and customs at the present day. Miss Tincker's serial, "The Jewel in the Lotos," is concluded in this number. "The Old Colony House," by M. H. Catherwood, is an admirable story, with characters powerfully drawn, and touches of genuine humor and pathos. Altogether the number is a strong one, and the announcements in the Prospectus indicate that there will be no falling off during the coming year. The special merit of Lippincott's Magazine is that it is always readable.

THE ART AMATEUR for December is a number of holiday size and excellence. It contains working designs for a tea-pot (Japanesque decoration), a dessert plate (wild geranium), a hand screen (shepherdess), embroidery (a fan, Christmas-card box, doilies, and mitres), two beautiful designs of children, an illustrated notice of the Huntington gift to the Metropolitan Museum; some fine illustrations of Derby porcelain; practical articles on decoration, needlework and china-painting; correspondence, literary and editorial notes. It is impossible to speak too highly of the varied excellence of this superb publication. Price, 35 cents; $4 per annum. Montague Marks, publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

The December number of FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY brilliantly closes the sixteenth volume of this highly popular magazine, and now is the time to subscribe for the coming year. The opening article is by Benjamin V. Abbott, embracing a most interesting history of "The Chief-Justices of the United States," with nine portraits and illustrations. A new serial, entitled "A Dark Deed," by Etta W. Pierce, is commenced, and there are short Stories, Sketches, Poems, etc. The illustrations are very numerous, and few periodicals present 128 quarto pages of such attractive and interesting reading. Price, 25 cents a number, or $3 a year, postpaid. Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place New York.

THE MUSICAL HERALD, published at Boston, will enter upon its 5th year in January, when the subscription price will be reduced to $1 a year, and a "splendid list of premiums" will be offered. Every number of this magazine contains choice selections of music, richly worth the price, to say nothing of the valuable reading matter of interest to all classes of readers.

John G. Whittier opens the Christmas ST. NICHOLAS with an Indian legend told in verse, How the Robin Came. Julian Hawthorne follows with the first half of Almion, Auria, and Mona, a charmingly fanciful tale; and Louisa M. Alcott contributes the second half of her bright Christmas story, Sophie's Secret. Captain Mayne Reid's new and exciting serial, The Land of Fire, is also begun. It is the last work of the veteran story-teller, whose death followed so suddenly the completion of this manuscript.

THE YOUNG LADIES' JOURNAL, published by the International News Company of New York, has been received for December. The proprietors have made an extra effort to please their customers, and have certainly succeeded. The December number is just double the usual size, and each part is filled with all the leading styles of dresses, hats and cloaks, besides every description of fancy work. None of our lady readers can afford to be without this magazine. For sale by the Peabody News Company.

"A GOD-SEND."—The children of Israel were once fed by manna, sent from Heaven. This was an undoubted case of God-send" The amelioration of human ills and ailments has been often undertaken, and as often failed. Ely's Cream Balm, however, "has been weighed in the balance and not found wanting." It is a sovereign, speedy, certain, and pleasant cure for Catarrh and Cold in the Head. Thousands of persons have attested this fact. "Ely's Cream Balm is a God-send," wrote Mrs. M. A. Jackson, of Portsmouth, N. H., on May 22d, 1882. "I had Catarrh for three years; had tried nearly all remedies, but to no purpose. Two or three times a week my nose would bleed quite freely, and I thought the sores in it would never heal. Your Balm has cured me." This preparation is not a liquid or a snuff, and is easily applied. Can you, reader, afford to experiment with injurious snuffs and injections when a pleasant and certain cure is at hand?

The little ones are now showing considerable interest in the legend of good old St. Nicholas and his annual visit. Even thus early, tendencies to disobedience, etc., on the part of the children are checked by the assurance on the part of fond maternal relatives that "Santa Claus only fills good little girl's and boy's stockings."

DECORATIONS AND SOUVENIRS.—Detach the notice from your bottle of MORSE YELLOW DOCK, and mail per directions on each bottle, and thus secure an assortment of our elegant decorative Advertisements, Souvenirs, &c.

MR. E. MARTIN,

IN PORTER'S DEPARTMENT OF THE U. S. ARMORY, SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—INTERESTING STATEMENT OF HIS SUFFERING.

Here are plain facts from a most reliable source. Your reporter found Mr. Martin in Porter's department of the United States Armory, Springfield, Mass, After being introduced, Mr. Martin said: "I am willing to say what I can for the benefit of those afflicted as I have been. For years I have been a terrible sufferer from kidney and bladder difficulties, Mine being of the calculous or stony form. I have visited all the mineral springs whose waters have been recommended to me by the best medical authorities. I have tried every known remedy, and have submitted to several operations, and have tried everything that money could obtain in the way of relief, but I find that Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is the best medicine of all my experience—I have received more benefit from it. It is certainly a wonderful remedy for diseases of this kind. I have recommended FAVORITE REMEDY to others in the city of Springfield whom I knew to have suffered from Kidney and Liver complaints; and, I assure the public, that the FAVORITE REMEDY has done its work with a similar completeness in every single instance, and I trust some other sick and discouraged mortal may hear of it and try the 'Favorite Remedy' as I did."

Dr. David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is not a disguised enemy of the human race; where it cannot help, it does not harm. FAVORITE REMEDY is a combination of vegetable alteratives. It does not heat nor inflame the blood, but cools and purifies it. In all cases of Kidney troubles, Liver complaints, Constipation of the Bowels and the delicate derangements that afflict women, the action of FAVORITE REMEDY is beyond praise. Thousands of grateful people voluntarily testify to this in letters to Dr. Kennedy; and with a warmth and fullness of words which mere business documents and certificates never possess.

WISCONSIN'S HISTORIC SPOT.

Bayfield, Wis., is historic ground. The first white settlement in the Northeast was made by Pere Marquette at La Pointe just across the bay, not three miles from where I write. It was in the year 1666 that the old missionary landed here, and the Catholic fathers claim that the mission dates its existence from that time. The old building was occupied until about twenty years ago, when the present church was built, and into the construction of this new building was put every log and scrap of timber that had survived the ravages of two centuries, so that it may almost be said the old building is still in existence. The little churchyard is filled with graves, upon the headstakes of which may be desciphered inscriptions and dates as early as 1698. This was the headquarters of the American Fur Company during all the years of its greatness, and it was here that John Jacob Astor negotiated the purchase that made the foundation of his colossal fortune. The little old warehouse still stands some rods out in the bay, for the pine has long since rotted away. The smaller steamers even cannot land there now, and I was obliged to reach it by a skiff. It was here that the Chippeway Indians met, 10,000 strong, and negotiated the treaty that opened all this region up to white settlement. It was here that Jeff Davis, Floyd, Breckenridge, Beauregard, and other notorious Southerners proposed to make a pleasure resort that should eclipse Saratoga or Cape May. They bargained for the Apostle Islands, but the Government took the property back when these worthies turned traitors. The mainland, where Bayfield is situated, is not without historic interest. The chapel that stands on the green hillside facing the sea, occupies the site of one built by Marquette, and beside the altar hangs a painting that was brought from France by the old missionary himself. The name of Marquette will not die. He is revered by the natives from one end of the great lakes to the other. In 1668 he and Claud Dablow established the mission of St. Mary at the Sault, which still remains, and is the oldest white settlement in the State of Michigan. In 1671 he called together the largest council of Indians ever held in the country, and advised them as to the best course to pursue towards the whites—advice which they altogether disregarded, however; and two years later this restless explorer fitted out an expedition and started to the Mississippi.

WHAT IS A FIRST-CLASS DRIVER.

John Splan, who began his career on the turf 17 years ago, when he was 17 years old, and has handled many of the best horses in the country, including the famous Rarus, is as ready and slick a talker as he is a driver. "Yes, sir; a good driver is as essential as a good horse. I don't know as a good man could do much with a stick of a horse, but I've seen many a horse defeated that would have won if its driver had known his business. Just what makes a good driver you can't tell.

"You see a driver has got to do more than sit behind a horse. He must look out for the shoeing, must get the horse's head just right, must study his horse, know how he ought to be fed and harnessed, and all that. There are a hundred things besides the mere driving that he must have his eye on and be studying. Horses are just as different as people. Some are nervous, fretting and stewing all the time, and others are so cool that a cyclone wouldn't make them jump. Now, you see if a man that was used to driving one of the nervous kind took hold of a lazy horse, he'd like as not break him all up.

"There's one thing a driver must have, and that's a cool head. He mustn't be all down when he don't win, or way up when he does, but just take it as it comes and go it again. I've seen men on the track with money up on their horses who were as worked up about it as an old lady that had got to have her tooth pulled out. That won't do. I don't take stock in any cordials to give a man the necessary courage. A good night's sleep is the best thing that any man can take before a race. Of course we bet on the races. That's what we are interested in; it's part of our business. I don't think horsemen gamble much outside. They put in their money on a horse just as a man buys a barrel or flour and expects to get a good deal more than he gave for it. The public thinks there's a good deal more crooked work than there really is. I don't know a driver, and I've slept with most of em, who would pull his employer's horse to win money himself. It wouldn't pay. Driving is a profession now, and a man who has paid $5,000 or $10,000 for a piece of property, hunts till he finds a good man to take care of it, and then pays him handsomely. Most owners have all the money they want and are anxious only that their horses win."

WHAT BIRDS KNOW ABOUT CHOLERA.

A correspondent writes to us that he has received from a resident at Zagazig, in Egypt, a curious fact concerning cholera, which, if not noticed before, may be of interest. The resident stated that the town of Zagazig was perfectly healthy and that the swallows and sparrows were flying about as usual, and so long as they remained he considered they were quite secure from any attack, but when they left he would not be long before he followed them. He remarked further that the little birds had been observed by old hands to depart before the approach of cholera during the last four epidemics. Our correspondent asks what can be the cause of this, and we shall be glad if any of our readers can answer the question.

Well, by gracious! Here are hte junketing members of Boston's City Council posing as civil service reformers. Will somebody please pass the club ?—Milford Journal.

Baseball catchers wear masks because an ugly mug wouldn't harmonize with a nice pitcher.

It is sixty years since ice cream was first introduced into St. Louis, and yet the girls can't seem to get enough of it.

The most an Artic explorer can do now is to follow in the tracks of those who went before him, freeze his feet and write a book.

Six months after marriage: "Weel, weel, Sandie, how d'ye like the little leddy?" "Ah, weel, Derry, I'll na deny that she ha' fine conversational powers."

Said the girl who had quarreled with her lover: "Oh, it's all right! Harry said he should try to forget me, but he always fails in everything he undertakes."

"What a wonderful age of invention it is" said Mrs. Peterson; "I see they are now making wire cloth, and I'll have some this very week to put a seat in Johnny's every-day pants."

"The thing we call women" are according to Mrs. Swisshelm, of Chicago, "simple small packages of aches and pains done up in velvet and lace and topped off with ostrich plumes."

THE BOTTOM DROPPED OUT.

A remarkable occurence took place in this city recently. M. Leblane has seven large wells on his Santa Rita farm, from which he obtains an abundant supply of water. During one night recently, one or two slight earthquake shocks were felt, doing no damage, but on the following morning all the wells were found to be dry. The phenomenon is a strange one, and causes serious loss to M. Leblane, who, in addition to the amount he sells, requires a plenteous supply of water for his large vegetable garden.—Panama Star and Herald.

CURIOUS FISHES.

The little shooting fish, a curious specimen of tropical life, is an expert marksman, and kills his game by a water-shot. An English gentleman, who kept one in a basin, reports that it would swim round and round, watching for a fly or ant to appear on the edge of the vessel. As soon as one was in sight, the fish, poising itself, would shoot out a drop of water with such dexterity as to cause the victim to drop into the basin, where it was speedily swallowed. He also says that when three or four of these "shooters" are confined in a basin, they will fire in turn, with singular dexterity.

The beauties of ocean life are perhaps as endless and astonishing as its grandeurs and terrors. What could be more fairy-like in real existence than the creatures seen in the aquarium at Naples? Since this aquarium is the only one which can draw supplies from a warm sea, there are always some really lovely things in the shape of glass like animals which swim on the surface, to be seen there, which nowhere else could be exhibited, and which are daily renewed when the weather permits.

The Cestum Veneris is one of the most striking of these transparent organisms, being a band of perfectly glass-like consistency, nearly a yard in length, undulating like a snake, and slowly moving through the water by means of two rows of large, vibrating fringes, which glisten with all the colors of the rainbow. Some of these are brought in every day by the fishermen, and hundreds of the long chains of transparent calpar, not to speak of beroes as large as lemons, glass shrimps, inhabiting the transparent little tubs known as Doliolum, and sometimes a Leptocephalus (thin head), a true vertebrate fish, of which one at first sees only the black eyes, all the rest of the body being absolutely as clear and invisible as a piece of glass—a really ideal ghost of a fish.

Creatures are found in the fossil rocks, and even living in the sea at the present time, which almost realize the animals of ancient fable, such as the centaur, the triton, the flying-dragon and the hippocampus. The fish is believed to be one of the creatures which sailors regard as sea-serpents. It is described as about fifteen feet long, without the tail, and is colored like burnished silver. It has a head resembling that of a horse, a large eye, and a mane-like fin down the back.

HOW HE WORKED THE GAME.

One of the most prosperous of Pennsylvania liquor dealers makes it a point to open bar-rooms where there is a strong local option law to forbid sales. He reasons that men will have liquor if they want it, and, if they are obliged to get it on the sly, will not grumble at paying a high price. He carried on his trade in Sharon, where the traffic was prohibited. He managed to do it, however, and got a dollar a pint for whiskey which cost him a dollar and a quarter a gallon. He often made over a hundred dollars a day. Finally they arraigned him in court. He had the case postponed for six months, and went on as before. The jury disagreed, and he had six mouths more. The end was a fine of fifty dollars.

A not over-refined young lady in a Philadelphia seminary was heard to remark, apropos of hot weather, that "it had made her sweat." One of the teachers, a lady of the old school, reproved the wayward miss as follows: "My dear, bear in mind that horses sweat, men perspire and young ladies get in a glow."

Rigidly righteous—A little daughter of severely orthodox parents had an idea that Heaven was a pretty straight-laced sort of a place, and the other day accosted her mother as follow: "Mamma, when I die and go to Heaven, don't you suppose they'll let me go down to the bad place on Saturday afternoon to play?"

Presidential Year.

The year 1884, which is the Presidential year, will be one of great interest. While The Journal is known as the leading Republican Newspaper of New England, it never fails to give full reports of the leading features of the campaign as presented by both parties.

No one need plead ignorance of what is taking place on account of the cost, for The Boston Weekly Journal has proved in the past, and will continue to be, a great educator of the people of New England.

We put with gratification to the following opinions of The Journal:

The Journal is a clean paper, and there is never anything in its columns that can offend good taste or corrupt the morals of the young, at the same time it is fully abreast of the times in everything that pertains to first-class journalism.—[Boston Courier.

The Boston Journal is a credit to our journalism. Its tone is high, its conduct is able, its news is fresh, its telegraphic dispatches are admirable as well as strictly reliable.—[Boston Gazette.

The Journal is a candid, consistent, able and enterprising newspaper.—[Boston Times.

To great business sagacity in its management, The Journal adds a scrupulous regard for what is wholesome and manly in journalism. The influence of a great newspaper is far-reaching, especially upon society and in the home, and the reading public owe it to themselves to discriminate in favor of a newspaper of the unoffending character and high character of The Journal.—[Nashua Telegraph.

The Journal's prosperity, which is of substantial character, has been well earned by honest dealing with the public. It is in its fiftieth volume, more vigorous than ever.—[Philadelphia Ledger.

The Journal is one of the ablest and brightest papers in New England, and its splendid success is the best kind of a compliment to the discriminating judgment of its constituency.—[Philadelphia Press.

Talbot, Mrs. Lucy C. Lillie, Margaret Sidney, George MacDonald, Lady Dunboyne, Mrs. Raymond Blathwayt (Aunt Maggie), Mrs. Louise P. Craigin, Mrs. Lizzie W. Champney, Mary E. Wilkins, Mrs. Kate Gannett Wells, Prof. D. A. Sargent, Ernest Ingersoll, Marion Harland, Sarah Orne Jewett, Mrs. Clara Doty Bates, Elbridge S. Brooks, M. E. W. S. (Mrs. John Sherwood), Miss Amanda B. Harris, Sophie May, Mrs. Kate Upson Clarke, Margaret Eytinge, Rose Kingsley, Edwin D. Mead, Mrs. Susan Power, Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont, Mrs. Sarah K. Bolton, Phillip Bourke Marston, Celia Thaxter, Nora Perry, Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, Mrs. A. M. Diaz.

ILLUSTRATED SERIAL STORIES FOR 1884:

I. A BRAVE GIRL. By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Gates ajar, Doctor Zay, The Story of Avis, etc.

II. A DISTRICT MESSENGER BOY. By James Otis.

III. PANSEY BILLINGS. By "H. H."

IV. PAMELA'S FORTUNE. By Mrs. Lucy C. Lillie, author of Prudence, etc.

V. HIS THREE TRIALS. A story for boys. by Mrs. Kate Gannet Wells.

VI. AN HISTORICAL SERIAL. (To begin in December.)

VII. IN NO-MAN'S-LAND. A wonder story for little folks. By Elbridge S. Brooks.

Among the purely pictorial attractions will be the Frontispieces from the studio of F. H. Lungren, whose A-Maying and Winter Birds, in Wide Awake attracted so much attention in 1882. W. Parker Boulish will contribute a picture-serial, in fifty scenes and twenty-four interludes, entitled Through France in Sabots. Miss Jessie McDermott has prepared a novel set of twelve full-page pictures under the title. The Procession of the Zodiac. Joseph Pennell has sent from Italy some twenty interesting and beautiful drawings of Child-Life in Venice; Henry Sandham has contributed another series, illustrative of a Winter Carnival in Canada; and George Foster Barnes has just completed an alphabet of novel and artistic decorative initials.

Many valuable contributions, very pleasant reading for the curious, are in hand; among them two articles about Famous Dwarfs, and one about Famous Giants, by Isabel Smithson, illustrated by Edmund H. Garrett, from authentic sources; The Troubadours, by George Foster Barnes illustrated by the author; The Gypsies, by Mrs. Catherwood, giving much novel matter, the illustrations including drawings from life sketches made among the gypsie caves of Granada the past winter.

Edward Everett Hale will make an interesting contribution to historical literature, through Wide Awake, in the form of several articles entitled The Story of Boston Common, giving complete its curious early history, describing famous events and scenes connected with its green shades and walks, and narrating many tales and traditions, quaint but authentic. These articles will be fully illustrated.

Mrs. Clara Doty Bates, whose versifications in Wide Awake of various nursery tales, Silverlocks and the Bears, Three little Pigs, Little Red Ridinghood, etc., are received as the classic and standard form of these old favorites, has now put in verse Twelve of Æsop's Fables. These fables have a setting decoratively novel and richly pictorial.

Twelve of George McDonald's lyrics are being set to music by popular foreign composers, among them, Reenecke, Jadassohn, Rheinberger, Lachner, Jungmann and Cowen. These musical compositions have been secured for Wide Awake by Louis C. Elson, the musical editor, lately in Europe on that commission, and they will undoubtedly form the most notable of contributions to music for young folks.

In addition, there have been secured a brilliant line of short stories, travels, practical articles, illustrated poems, etc.; and when the attractions of the C. Y. F. R. U. Reading Course, with its seven series of pithy articles are taken into account, our readers, young and old, may feel assured of a year of rich entertainment.

Wide Awake is only $2.50 a year. Liberal terms to agents. Address D. LOTHROP & CO., Franklin street, Boston

READ THIS.

We don't say that all the bargains in the city are to be found at our establishment or that no one understands how to run a great retail store except ourselves.

But we do say that our assortments are so complete that there is scarcely anything you can ask for that we have not got on hand; that our prices are low because our

RENT AND OTHER EXPENSES ARE COMPARATIVELY SMALL

while our business is very large, we can afford to sell cheaply and we do it. All our departments are stocked with new, seasonable goods, our prices as a rule are lower than those charged elsewhere, and we are making this week several special offerings at remarkably low prices.

HEAD OF CENTRAL.

It has been well said that Mr. Gallup, of the Naumkeag Clothing Co., could not advertise as he does, if he did not have the goods to back it up. This is a secret of the growth of the store. And speaking of bargains, take a look at to-day's advertisement, and see if you are not satisfied.

PENALTY FOR SIN.—The first business in the new quarters opened briskly last Friday morning, but not as many victims as might have been expected considering the fine acommodations. Yet there were enough and more than enough. There were three of a kind—all drunks. It is a fact that three of a kind will beat two pairs, but these didn't look like beats. Besides these three there was another, and though he wouldn't own up, he met the same fate as the three. First there there was Jerry McCormick, a man not in the habit of getting drunk, but one who was laying around for honor; that is, he wanted to be the first to honor the new police station with his presence, and his honor honored him to the tune of $5.83.. It came high, but he was bound to have it.

Next came Henry Loftus, of Danvers; poor Henry, he could not gainsay the accusation that he was drunk, and he too, was fined $5.83. He will be older, one of these days, and outlive these youthful indiscretions.

James Butler, of Beverly, came over to mix liquors, and see his love; yes, James loved whiskey not too wisely, but too well—in short he was drunk. He admitted it and paid $5.83 in order to purchase his liberty.

Hugh Gillis, another of Beverly's proud sons, was unfortunate enough to appear before the bar, charged with being very drunk, He had no counsel, but defended himself by informing his honor that he only drank a little ginger ale and tonic and smoked a cigar, and he couldn't see how that should affect his head. After two officers had testified to the way it did affect him, he was willing to submit to the penalty. As his honor concluded that the cause of this trouble was his being unused to such mild beverages, he allowed him to assist the county $5.83 worth.

On Saturday morning the court opened as usual, and the first case was that of James McPoland. James was overcome by working Sundays and holidays, and was charged with being intoxicated. This was the extent of his offending, but the extent of the penalty was $5.83.

Next came Geo. Borden and Michael Callahan, charged with being drunk and having a free fight on the street, the night before. They plead not guilty. George thought he was taking Callahan home, and certainly he was succeeding finely, for the officers found him on top of Callahan, pounding him in a style that would have made Sullivan envious. The Judge thought that $5.83 each for being drunk and $5.00 and half the costs each for fighting would about make things satisfactory.

SOUTH PEABODY.

Don't forget the entertainment at the church to-night, given by Miss Crabtree of Lynn.

A large crowd of boys enjoyed the skating on Upton's pond last Thursday.

Thanksgiving was spent in about the usual manner in this section of the town. The Glass Ball club had a shooting match in King's field on Lynnfield street, in the afternoon, when some very good shots were made.

Wm. Tudbury, the Postmaster, has been confined to the house the past few days with a bilious turn. We hope for a speedy recovery.

The Lynn & Boston Railroad Co., brought sixty-three passengers from the play Thanksgiving night, to So. Peabody. The late car is very much appreciated by the patrons of the road in this section of the town.

The jewelry establishment of Chamberlain & Son is well known as one of the oldest and most reliable in Salem. For years our people have been in the habit of visiting their store for the best goods, and their solid silver ware. This year the firm comes to the front with a sterling announcement in our paper, which they are prepared to substantiate. We call particular attention to the articles enumerated therein, and advise our readers to look over their store, which was never better filled with appropriate and substantial gifts for the holiday trade.

The Lewiston Journal speaks in very complimentary terms of Mr. F. C. Record, who has been in Salem the past ten years. Mr. Record's violin playing has been noticed frequently in these columns, and at a concert last season, by the Unity club, he displayed exceptional ability. He appeared, lately, at a musicale given in that city, and the Journal says:—The bowing was remarkable and brought out outbursts of applause in the pauses, and when he left the platform, the deafening applause declined to subside to a bow of thanks, and continued until the modest young artist re-appeared in earnest.

Geo. Stevens is getting ready for the holidays. His new store gives him better accommodations, and George never "gets left" on Christmas goods.

One of our new advertisers from Lynn is Mr. J. G. Olin, the jeweler, on Market street, next to Goodridge's hat store. Mr. Olin has been in business in Lynn many years, but this is a new location for him, and he has one of the finest selected stocks of jewelry for presents we have seen for a long time. We feel confident this will be one of Lynn's popular stores for our ladies to trade.

Merrill & Mackintire, 220 Essex Street, Salem.

Having on previous holiday seasons been liberally patronized by our customers, we have resolved this season to outdo all our former efforts and to lay before the citizens of Essex County the largest and most comprehensive assortment of goods, suitable for the Christmas Holidays, ever shown in Essex County.

WILMOT'S SUCCESS!

THE TALK OF THE PEOPLE AND ENVY OF CERTAIN NARROW MINDED COMPETITORS.

Ever since we came to Salem, our trade has been on the increase, in spite of a certain competitor, (better known for his loud talk and boast than for his deeds,) who said when we came to Salem, that he would drive us from the place inside of six months, but he should remember that we are not the kind to be driven, in fact it looks as though the boot was on the other leg. We are here to stay and we shall keep right on underselling any and all competitors, no matter if they go on the warpath every day during the week and twice on Sunday.

Business Is Booming!

And we are having a constant rush since we began our Mammoth Mark down Sale of

OVERCOATS, SUITS AND PANTALOONS.

In fact some would be big competitors almost die of grief and envy at the success we are having, for they know as well as the people that it is useless for them to try to compete with a manufacturer. But they try to rally by copying our advertisements almost word for word, talk never hurts anybody, figures tell every time, and it is Figures we shall give you, not talk. REMEMBER! That no competitor, no matter what he says, has any of our clothing, although they advertise to that effect.

200 Men's Heavy Fur Beaver Overcoats.

This is the same overcoat a certain competitor advertises for $1.75, and considers that a low price, we can sell ours a great deal less than $1.65, if we see fit, as we don't consider that we gain many laurels by selling such goods at any price. This is the only lot in our entire stock that is the same as our boasting competitor carries. We sell nothing but good clothing, 400 Men's All Wool Winter Overcoats.

Goods made by the well known Connotton Valley Mills and warranted all wool; the coats are lined with a warm woolen lining, are cut extra long and by our best patterns, made on honor, and would be a cheap garment at $14; never have been sold by us previous to this date at less price, but we are sometimes famous for bargains, and this is our sometimes. We shall sell what we have of these Coats to the first comers, of which we have all sizes, 35 to 42, at $4.00.

Certain competitors are advertising that they are selling this same coat for $3.90, but the fact is, the coat they advertise at that is not worth as much as our coat by $2. See for yourself; we advertise facts and not fiction.

300 Men's Full-Weight Elysian Winter Overcoats,

Bound with fine Mohair Braid, lined with good durable lining, Silk Face. Velvet Collar, and the quality usually sold at $8 to $10; but this is a year of wonders.

$4.50.

☞ This coat cannot be purchased outside of our store at any price.

375 Fine black Elysian Overcoats, extra heavy weight, made and trimmed in good shape,—a good dress coat. Our price is $8.00.

If the coat can be purchased within two dollars of the price we advertise, at any other place, we will cheerfully refund the money paid for the same.

Large lot of Melton beaver overcoats, cut D. B. and S. B., fly front (equal in style and fit to any $35.00 Custom Overcoats), made and trimmed in extra fine shape, and a coat worth $15.00, but our price is $7 50.

The terror of competition and "THE WONDER OF THE AGE," is 150 Men's Heavy Winter Chinchilla Overcoats, cut D. B. and S. B., bound narrow, has a fine velvet collar, made in the best possible manner, and our price is $9.00.

If this coat can be bought outside of our store for $15.00 or less, we will cheerfully refund the money to anybody who has purchased of us.

200 Blue Beaver Overcoats, warranted fast color, lined with the best satine lasting, and guaranteed to be the best made and best styled overcoat in the city. This coat previous to now has been marked $18.00, but our price is now $12.00.

Size 34 to 44.

"THE BEST YET." An extra fine, black, all wool, diagonal overcoat, made in the best manner, and sold by some of our competitors as a bargain for $16.50, but, as we are bound to lead in the bargain line, our price will be $14.50.

The difference between the above described coat and that so-called bonanza, by a certain competitor, is so apparent that any person wishing a really good coat would gladly pay four dollars more for ours, but we only ask two dollars. Examine them for yourself.

Christmas.

There came three wise men from the East
From their own land afar,
Who travelled toward Jerusalem,
Led by a glorious star.

For they had heard that Christ was born,
Who King of men should be:
And so they sought of all they met
Where they the child might see.

But when they came where Mary sat,
With Jesus on her knee,
And saw the glory round his head,
They knew that it was He.

And so in reverential mood,
Before the babe and her,
They worshipped, off'ring gifts of gold,
Of frankincense and myrrh.

Not with surroundings of great rank,
In royal robes arrayed,
But he the greatest of all time,
Was in a manger laid.

Within a lowly stable He
Who all the earth did own,
Was meanly wrapped in swaddling clothes
His mother's lap his throne.

But angel's did a greeting bring,
To gladden all the earth
Announcing with a joyous song
The Prince of Peace had birth.

The wand'ring shepherds with their flocks
Neath Judea's star lit sky,
Heard the glad song "Good will to men.
Glory to God on High."

Oh Lord the centuries which speed,
Thy power still proclaim,
And contrite souls Thy favor own,
And praise Thy Holy Name.

We may not offer Thee the gifts,
The wise men did of old,
But may men offer Thee their hearts,
Until time's scroll is rolled.

Till in the New Jerusslem,
Before the great white Throne,
Thou greetest all humanity
And callest them Thine own.

RANDALL.

AN INDIAN CHIEF'S CORN.

We saw, the chief of the Pottawattomies, who, with Pokagon and Topinabee owned all the country west of Rush River, south to the boundary line of Indiana, and north to Mackinaw, and west to Kankakee River and Lake Michigan, brought to this country in 1828 on his way from Washington City from a place in Genesee County, New York, early eight rowed corn which he planted here, and this corn has been planted and replanted up to the present time, and Samuel Lockbridge keeps it in existence. An ear of it he has deposited in our office. It now contains thirteen rows, is quite ripe, and is large. Before Weesaw's death he requested his tribe to never let this seed corn die out, and when he died in September, 1836, a hole was dug on Moccasin Bluff, and he was placed in a sitting position, and about fifty young Indians and squaws carried stocks of this corn with the ears on, and placed it around his body, and thus was he buried, and there his bones repose up to the presen time, on the very hill where he used to build fires in a dry season and offer up sacrifices to the Great Spirit for rain. Sometimes he would kill a deer and cut off the head and neck deep down into the shoulders and hang it on a limb and pray for rain. If that failed he would kill and burn a dog. If this failed he would make Indians build small fires up and down the bluff long distances. By the time he had got this accomplished it would generally rain. Weesaw went to Washington with Topinabee and Dominick, his son, to get Andrew Jackson to drive the Carey Mission men from among them, who were a great set of rascals. They would buy fur of the Indians and tell them when they returned from Detroit they would pay them, but instead of pay they would trump up some false account and beat them out of it. Appropriations were withheld from them by the Government, and through the influence of Jackson and General Cass the mission was obliged to leave.—Niles (Mich.) Mirrow.

SPAIN'S "DARK-GLANCING" MAIDENS.

"We in America are apt to judge of the Spaniard by the Mexican and the Cuban," writes a Cadiz correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. "Nothing can be more different. Whatever their faults or virtue, the Hispano Americans seem to have taken nothing but the language from what of the conqueror's blood they may have. All else has come from the native. Unbroken in pride, undebased by evil habits, self-respecting, sober in speech as in food, the Iberian needs only a leader to again take his rightful place in the family of nations. And the woman? Is she beautiful? I hardly know; but she is the most bewildering, bewitching, fascinating of all Eve's daughters. There is a magic in her step, a poise of foot, a grace of rhythmic motion, a proud tenderness in her dark eye; a something voluptuous which is yet chaste; a magic in her smile, such as no other race or clime can show. Beautiful? A man whose blood runs red within his veins may see his beauty elsewhere, but he has never felt the perfect charm of woman's womanliness until he has met love looking from the melting brightness of those matchless orbs which none but Spain's 'dark-glancing' maidens bear. There is no neglect here. The dress may not be rich, but there is not a fold ill-placed. To her is paid the reverence of passionate devotion. Still is Spain the land of romance and of song, because her men are brave, her women worthy to be loved."

POISON IN THE TREASURY.

A correspondent of the Boston Traveller says: "Nearly all of the employees of the National Bank Redemption Agency are females. There are about 120 of them, and candor compels me to say that the greater proportion are young and exceedingly fair to look upon. Mr. Rodgers, the chief of the division, asked me to take a stroll with him through the workshop, and I found the trip exceedingly interesting. The employees are in a long room and are separated from each other by something like wire cages—a woman and sometimes two in each cage. Nearly all of them were at work busily counting money. They do nothing but count from nine in the morning until four in the afternoon, and their hands move with a rapidity and nimbleness seldom acquired by the most expert bank clerks. As we walked through the rooms where millions of national bank notes are counted every week I noticed that nearly all the occupants looked tired, and had a listless look, although it was only about two in the afternoon. I also noticed a number of pretty young girls and some who were not pretty and not girls, who had sores on their hands and wrists. There were several also who had sores on their faces and heads. I asked Mr. Rodgers if he cause of these erruptions was to be found in the work upon which the "countesses" were engaged. He replied: "It is. Very few, who spend any considerable time in counting money, escape the sores. They generally appear first on the hands, but frequently they break out on the head, and sometimes the eyes are affected. We can do nothing to prevent this. All of the ladies take the greatest care of themselves in their work, but sooner or later they are afflicted with sores. The direct cause of the sores is the arsenic employed in the manufacture of the money. If the skin is the least abraided, and the arsenic gets under the flesh, a sore will appear the next morning. The habit that every one has of putting the hand to the head and face is the way the arsenic poisoning is carried to those portions of the body. See here," said Mr. Rodgers, stopping by the side of a young lady, and picking up a glass vessel containing a sponge. "This sponge is wet, and is used to moisten the fingers while counting the money. You see how black it is. That's arsenic. Every morning a new piece of sponge is placed on the desk of each employee, but before the day is over it is as black as this. I have known a half a dozen cases where ladies have been compelled to resign their positions. There are three ladies who were here six years before they were afflicted with sores. About three months ago they were so visited by them that they had to quit work. They have been away ever since, and the physician's certificate in each case says that their blood is poisoned with arsenic. But," concluded Mr. Rodgers with a smile, "although there is danger in the work there is no difficulty in filling all vacancies that occur."

AMONG THE RUSSIANS.

He who travels to St. Petersburg or Moscow prepared only to expostulate in English must make up his mind to buy nothing upon which he cannot pay an excess charge of at least from forty to fifty per cent. of the value of every article purchased—a process of extortion against which the loudest expletives are unavailing. And then let one intent on visiting Russian soil remember a few of the other inconveniences that await him here. Let him be forewarned of the droshky—a low vehicle on four wheels, without top, sides or back, with an elevated seat in front for the driver, a depressed one in the rear for the "fare," and a well-developed capacity for "spilling" its passengers into the street at intervals of from one to forty yards. Let him not forget the plentifulness of weak tea, the scarcity of the bottled ale, and the necessity—outside the hotels—of carrying his own bedclothes about with him. Let him think of the restaurants, where the "English spoken" is like the Chinese, and the bills of fare are as inteligible as if they had been drawn up in Sanscrit, and the soups are prepared with vinegar and have pellicles of ice in them—where, the meat being variably tender, the dinner is carefully watched by waiters who scan every mouthful as if calculating the probabilities of suffocation, and where a man's digestion is expected to be improved by Glinka's "Life for the Czar," repeated four or five times during a meal on the grand automatic organ, with accessories of trumpets and drums.

WOMEN OF FICTION.

They are seldom satisfactory portraitures as a whole, be the artist man or woman. Dickens gave poor little Dora more love taps than he did many a more admirable picture of femininity, but they were such strokes as a father would give to a spoiled child. There was in his line of treatment no suggestion of the man's disposition to express the man's preference for woman. Not many women have written with as utter forgetfulness of sex, or with as complete a subordination of sex to the artistic relentlessness of the situation as he did. As a rule, women workers in fiction have given more attention to the characters of men than to women. That is to say, their finest work has been on the portraits of men, and their tenderness and love taps and unconscious demonstrations of sympathy have been for men. And because of this, women in fiction created by women have been no more satisfactory than those created by men.

Swedenborg says "words are things." They are more; they are spiritual forces—angels of blessing or of cursing. Unuttered, we control them; uttered they control us.

HOW LIMBURGER CHEESE IS MADE.

The milk is delivered at the factory and strained into vats, as for other cheese. It is then raised to a temperature of 99° Fahrenheit, when enough rennet is added to coagulate the mass in about thirty minutes. The curd is then cut crosswise and lengthwise of the vat with a gang of steel curd-knives. Soon after it is turned with tin shovels frequently for an hour, when it is left for the whey to settle. If the curd is of the proper consistency about two thirds of the whey is removed. The curd is now ready for the moulds, into which it is dipped, the whey remaining escaping through the perforated sides of the moulds. After the curd has hardened to a proper degree it is placed upon a table slightly inclined and the whey drains off, care being taken that the cheese retains the form of the moulds. Then they are turned several times, and finally are ready to receive the salt, which is rubbed in by hand morning and evening for four days, thus gradually hardening until they can be taken to the curing room, where the bricks of cheese are set on edge close together. After being properly cured they are then packed for market. But prices for this cheese are also fluctuating, and the dealer frequently needs to store his cheese in a room of uniform temperature to preserve it fresh and prevent it from becoming over ripe. For this purpose large and deep vaults and cellars are built where the air is neither too hot nor too cold—and the cheese will keep well summer or winter. It is made with less expense than American cheese, its price is less fluctuating, and hence the milk of our dairymen is bought largely by dealers and made up by their employees. Proprietors pay, we are informed, eight cents per gallon for milk to be made into Limburger, or the price of milk will be regulated by the price received for American cheese at the factory.

REPORTERS AND THEIR SALARIES

Since John Swinton made those astonishing statements to the Education and Labor Committee about the pay of newspaper men I have made several inquiries in Printing House square as to $5,000 reporters, $25 000 correspondents and $500,000 editors, but they don't seem to be known in that quarter at all, writes a correspondent to the Hartford Times. The general impression there is that they exist only in Mr. Swinton's imagination. To the best of my information and belief they never did exist in Printing House square, though that's where nine-tenths of the newspaper men are to be found. Should Mr. Swinton's remarkable statements cause a rush of young men from the various country cross-roads to New York, with aview to become millionnaires by newspaper work, I fear the young men will be sadly disappointed. They will find that $5 000 reporters, $25,000 correspondents and $500,000 editors are not in demand. They will discover on the contrary, that the realities of Printing House square are very different from the picturesque idealities sketched by Mr. Swinton. One of the first things they will find out is that reporters who make $35 a week instead of $5,000 a year think they are doing pretty well. A few may be discovered who make $50 to $75 a week at times (not all the year round, though), at special work, but these are not one in fifty. A reporter who earns $30 a week the year through may count himself a lucky fellow. As to correspondents, I shall say nothing.

COLOR OF CANARIES.

The entire canary family is divided into two color-classes, yellow and buff, which are synonymous with the terms jonque and mealy; but inasmuch as these terms do not express the real color they must be regarded as purely technical. For example, we speak of a yellow-green or a buff-green, a yellow-cinnamon or a buff-cinnamon, when it is patent neither of these colors can be yellow or buff in reality, and the words, therefore, taken in their general application, are technicalities. The explanation is simple. Whatever be the body-color of a canary, whether it be literally yellow or green or cinnamon, or whether it be in a lizard, or even a dark self-colored canary hybrid, it has two forms in which it manifests itself. One is bright and, for want of a better word, we will say luminous, polished and glittering; the other dull and flat, and is by comparison what frosted silver or dead gold is to the burnished metal. The first is the yellow form and the other the buff; and one or the other presents itself in every canary or canary hybrid. In speaking of the Norwich canary the terms jonque and mealy are generally adopted, and are both expressive of the general character indicated. The word jonque is originally pure French, and may be taken to signify jonquil colored, which speaks for itself. Mealy requires no comment.

AN IDOL LEGEND.

A certain tribe in Africa worship what they call the Sacred Hen. You see, a long time ago a certain Dorcass Society sent a lot of clothes and edibles to the heathen, and among the latter was a spring chicken. The savages found it impossible to cut or chew the spring chicken, which had evidently hailed from a boarding house, so the chief tied a cord on it and used it for a slungshot. In the first battle in which he used it he killed a neighboring king and won a signal victory. He then concluded that the spring chicken must be some kind of a Mascotte, and all the tribe fell down before it and worshipped. And they are worshiping it yet under the title of the Sacred Hen.

The children enjoyed skating on Peirce's pond.

MODERN TRIAL BY ORDEAL.

A gentleman who some years ago acted as surgeon to several friendly societies in the County of Durham, relates the following anecdotes, which occurred between him and one of his rustic constituents. A member of an Odd-fellows' lodge came one evening for advice at the usual hour of consultation. The symptoms were duly detailed, and the surgeon prescribed a mixture which contained two grains of tartrate of antimony in eight ounces of water. The patient on arriving home took a dose of medicine, but was annoyed to find that it had so little taste, and that moreover it presented no solid material to be shaken up. On submitting the bottle to his wife, she also, on tasting, pronounced it to be "nowt but wetter." He then took counsel with some of his brethren, who were not very favorably disposed toward the doctor, and yielding to their advice, entered a complaint to the lodge. In due time the doctor received from the Secretary a notice to attend and answer Brother Jone's charge to the effect that he had been supplied with water instead of medicine. In reply to this notice the surgeon asked the Secretary to intimate to the aggrieved brother that it would be necessary to have the medicine produced in order that he might have a fair chance of rebutting the charge. When the night arrived there was a goodly attendance of members, and the lodge having been formally opened, Jones was asked to stand forth and prefer his charge against the doctor, which he did, alleging that the bottle produced was given to him for medicine, and contained nothing but water. After he had finished his statement the surgeon proclaimed to the meeting that if Jones was sincere in his belief that there was nothing but water in the bottle he could have no objection to drinking the contents at one draught. The chairman and brethren thought this a reasonable proposition, and put it to Jones accordingly. Jones was evidently not quite prepared for this crucial test of his belief, but could see no way out of it. After a little hesitation he consented. The contents of the eight-ounce mixture were transferred to a tumbler, and he quaffed them off. The doctor then intimated to the chairman that he might proceed with any other business until the medicine had time to take effect. After the lapse of about half an hour, Jones began to exhibit signs of internal disturbance, and a ba-in was brought in for his convenience. It soon became manifest to the brethren that there must have been something more than water in the mixture. The doctor submitted that he had effectually upset both Jones and his allegation, and quitted the lodge in triumph.

THE USE OF SWAMP PONDS.

Speaking of carp ponds, a farmer writing to a Western paper says: "We write from actual experience in this matter, having in earlier days caught many a nice string of fish in a pond that was formerly a swamp. During one day in August, a farmer with two of his boys, went in it with a plow, road-scraper, and shovels, and in a short time had a pond of nearly an acre in extent. This he stocked with fish common to the sluggish streams of the neighborhood, and procured others at some distance from the farm. For years thereafter it proved to be the best acre on the farm." We may add that the number of places in all parts of the country which could be profitably converted into fish ponds, thus increasing the provisions supply, is so great as to surprise any whose attention is first directed to the subject. We know of an instance where a land owner, well up on the Cumberland plateau, 3,000 feet above the level of the sea, is now converting a low, swampy spot on his holding to a wide, deep pond, which he is confident he will soon have stored with fish. The rich, black humus he is scraping from the basin he intends to utilize in enriching a large plantation of cultivated blackberries. Pertinent to this subject, a writer in the Prairie Farmer observes: "Never allow a net to be cast in your pond. Teach your boys and girls to take their fish in a correct manner, 'with rod and line.' If the fish increase too rapidly, then have a family picnic, invite your friends and neighbors, and have a grand, good time cooking your fish near the pond, and have one good day's sport beside this, the best acre on your farm."

LESSONS FROM THE ANIMALS.

Man may learn some useful lessons from the lower animals, which instinctively understand how to treat themselves in illness. Animals get rid of their parasites by using mud, dust, clay, etc. Those suffering from fever restrict their diet, keep quiet, seek darkness and airy places, drink water and sometimes even plunge into it. When a dog has lost his appetite he eats that species of grass known as dog's grass (chiendent,) which acts as an emetic and purgative. Cats also eat grass. Sheep and cows, when ill, seek out certain herbs. When dogs are constipated they eat fatty substances, such as oil and butter, with avidity, until they are purged. The same thing is observed in horses. An animal suffering from chronic rheumatism always keeps in the sun if possible. The warrior ants have regularly organized ambulances. Latraille cut the antennæ of an ant and other ants came and covered the wounded part with a transparent fluid secreted in their mouths. If a chimpanzee be wounded it stops the bleeding by placing its hand on the wound or dressing it with leaves and grass. When an animal has a wounded leg or arm hanging on, it completes the amputation by means of its teeth. Cats, when hurt, treat themselves by a simple method of continuous irrigation; while animals suffering from traumautic fever endeavor to cure themselves by the continual application of cold water.

There are several cases of scarlet fever in town.
